U.S. GOLD BACKS DAWES PLAN

U.S. NAVY DROPS BEHIND BRITISH AND JAPANESE

U.S. Now '1' in Ratio, Expert Declares.

New York, April 26.—[Special.]—William B. Shearer, formerly a special expert employed by the navy department and inventor of the Shearer torpedo boat, the one man torpedo boat and the amphibian tank, charged today that neglect of the navy and failure to provide it with adequate fuel reserves had so weakened that branch of the national defense that the advantages gained by the Washington arms conference had been thrown away and that the ratio of power, instead of being America 5, England 5, Japan 3, was, in fact, England 5, Japan 3, America 1.

Mr. Shearer's statement grew out of his challenge that the figures on stored oil given out a week ago by Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, were misleading, and he pointed to the report of the special oil conservation commission to the President last week as further substantiation of his assertion that, with the exception of 1,500,000 barrels stored in Hawaii, the navy has no oil in reserve.

Need Oil, Tanks, Reserves.

That commission informed the President that "considerable funds will be needed to provide adequate tankage for emergency, considerable more funds to purchase oil to fill these tanks, and still more funds to test and develop possible additional reserves."

Not alone upon the lack of an adequate fuel supply does Mr. Shearer base his assertion that the treaty ratio has fallen to 5—5—1, with America 1. He says the American fleet is outnumbered and outgunned by both the British and the Japanese. He says the British have nineteen naval bases, the Japanese many, the number of them secret, and that the United States has none.

He says that compared with America the British are 5 to 1 in light cruiser strength and the Japanese 2½ to 1. He says Japan has twenty-five fleet submarine boats, England seventeen, and the United States six.

Fleet Out of Commission.

He says the Atlantic fleet is out of commission because the boilers of four capital ships need repairing and there is no money to do the work. Finally, he says that although naval experts asked congress to provide a naval base at Alameda, Cal., politicians and real estate interests "put over" Mare island, Cal., which is a shipyard seventy years old, twenty miles inland, and with such shallow water that at low tide some capital ships would rest on the mud.

All these things, Mr. Shearer declares, are common talk among naval officers.

"The Washington conference," Mr. Shearer said, "established a naval ratio of five-five-three; England five, America five, Japan three. This was considered a victory for the United States because it marked the end of the two power standard England had maintained for a century and it brought the United States on a level with her and gave us at the same time a marked superiority over Japan. But whatever advantages might have been ours under that treaty have been thrown away. Today the five-five-three ratio exists on paper only. In reality it is five-three-one, America being one."

Outnumbered Everywhere.

"Not only are we outgunned so far as our battleships are concerned," Mr. Shearer continued, "but we are outnumbered in light cruisers and in fleet submarines. The British are four to our one in light cruiser strength and the Japanese two and one-half to one. Of this class of ships England has seventeen, Japan has twenty-five and we have ten. The new Japanese light cruisers outspeed the British light cruisers and because of that the British admiralty has asked for seventeen more. Not only that, but Capt. McKenzie, naval expert now under Admiral Robinson, is authority for the statement that the British have built destroyer flotilla leaders, whereas we have no vessels of this class, none at all.

"As to ships and bases and fuel stored Japan has the largest naval program of any. She lost only one cruiser in the Washington. That was the Naka. She is laying down new destroyers and seven submarines under construction. In addition there is interesting. England has seventeen fleet submarines, Japan has twenty-five and we have six.

Japan Transfers Fleet.

"So that so far as the fleet is concerned not only are we outgunned and outnumbered, but the other significant fact is that the Japanese have transferred their fleet from the inland sea to the Pacific.

"Japan must have bases of op-

3 GUN PARSON LEADS JOLIET BOOZE RAIDS

U. S. Dry Men Smash Door of Club.

With three revolvers strapped to him the Rev. Henry E. Rompel of the Ottawa Street Methodist church in Joliet set out last evening with forty Chicago prohibition agents to clean up the town.

Three hours later the dry squads returned to the church edifice, which was their temporary headquarters, with evidence that will be used to close for twelve months twenty of Joliet's dampest ports of call.

The booze offensive was particularly notable—aside from its clerical auspices—because it was the first time in the history of the department that the entire prohibition force has been concentrated for a single drive. Chicago was left without federal supervision for a night.

The dry agents, led by Charles W. Vursell, chief enforcement officer for Illinois, invaded Joliet in a caravan of ten automobiles and two trucks. Not until they passed Lockport were they told their destination by their leader.

Battling Parson Takes Lead.

The machines drew up beside the church shortly after 7 o'clock and were greeted by the Rev. Mr. Rompel. The agents filed into the edifice for instructions. Individual warrants were issued and local guides assigned to the squads. The clergyman, whose exploit now places him in the "fighting pastor" class, provided the guides.

"I'm ready if you are," was the announcement. Then, much to the surprise of the visiting prohibition agents, the Rev. Mr. Rompel strapped on three guns and stalked from his church.

The first place raided was the Joliet Soccer club's headquarters, against which evidence had already been obtained by the pastor. The visitors failed to qualify as members or soccer players and they were denied admittance.

Smash Soccer Club's Door.

A splintering crash heralded the breaking down of the club door, and in rushed the Rev. Mr. Rompel, Chief Vursell, and his aids. No occasion was offered for using the revolvers. "John Doe" warrants were served on the officers of the club. Some of the officers, it was reported, wore aprons.

Injunctions Rival Nudes.

In some of the places raided in December, against which temporary injunctions later were issued, agents found the federal court orders pasted on the mirror of back bars amidst collections of "nude art poses," punch boards, and other "souvenirs."

Other well known places where warrants were served and evidence seized include the following:

John Jenco's Political club, 616½ Elwood street. John Mihal named in warrant as holder of license.

Court café, 111 North Chicago street; charged with selling in defiance of federal temporary injunction.

Walt's place, Hickory and Stone streets.

Louise Wise's buffet, Indiana and Joliet streets.

Fred Rub's club.

Shay's place, 617 East Cass street.

Working Men's palace, 213 Jackson street.

Jacob Horwarth's and Sim Lipsey's "Health Office," 822 Cass street.

Joseph Malnar's Pleasure and Recreation club, 1100 North Broadway.

John Dakos' Grecian Culture club, 1009 North Collins street.

Joseph Jerman's Athletic association, 200 Jackson street.

East Side buffet, 819 Cass street, Nick Bilach, president and bartender.

Joseph Udzinski's saloon, 612 Elwood street.

John Avon's Retreat, 631½ South Chicago street.

Sam Jokich's bar, 1414 North Collins street.

Says City Officials Won't Aid.

Following the raids, Chief Vursell said that because of the failure of Joliet officials to coöperate with the government in efforts in suppressing the liquor situation there, special requests will be made of Assistant District Attorneys O'Callaghan and Grossman to advance the hearings on permanent injunction proceedings against all the places.

"The Rev. Mr. Rompel and his unofficial organization, who have coöperated splendidly with my office, have borne the burden alone in Joliet, so far as I have been able to learn," Chief Vursell said.

CHICAGO CLOCKS ARE SHOVED AHEAD ONE HOUR THIS MORNING

The summer daylight savings schedule went into effect in the Chicago metropolitan district at 2 o'clock this morning. At that hour the minute hands on the city's official clocks were moved ahead sixty minutes and one hour dropped out of sight. It will not be recovered until fall.

If you didn't set your clock ahead before going to bed, it is now one hour slow.

Most suburbs within a radius of forty miles will follow Chicago's lead in adopting daylight saving. Railroads, generally, will still operate on standard time, but suburban schedules will be changed to accommodate commuters. One hour must be added to railroad time table figures. Interurban electric lines will move their entire schedules up an hour and operate on "new time."

Don't forget. You'll have to get up an hour earlier by the sun tomorrow, but there'll be the reward of an extra hour of daylight when you get through.

18TH BULLET OF BERWYN POLICE FATAL TO DOG

Two Berwyn policemen, bent on executing a poodle dog which was thought to have hydrophobia, worked up quite a show for 500 thrilled spectators yesterday. Their eighteenth bullet hit the dog.

Previous missles were not without their mark, however. Two of 'em ricocheted on the street car tracks and plunked through a pair of plate glass windows, worth $400, in Elmer Holt's grocery at 6818 West Roosevelt road. They lodged in a head of lettuce and a bunch of radishes, both of which curled up and died.

When the poodle dog finally paused to catch his breath, Policeman John Cheboch managed to sneak a bullet across to its intended mark. Then Holt came out of hiding and demanded payment for his windows.

HARRIMAN AND MODEL WED; SAIL ON HONEYMOON

New York, April 26.—The marriage of Oliver Carley Harriman, broker and polo player, to Miss Harriet Hewitt, formerly Horowitz, one time model in a 5th avenue dressmaking house, was revealed today when they sailed on the Majestic on their honeymoon.

Friends said they were married recently in a city near New York.

Harriman, the son of Oliver Harriman, banker, was divorced in January by Mrs. Lois Bisbee Harriman.

Sheriff Saves an Old Friend; Just $15,000

Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman yesterday saved his old friend, Barney Winkelman, proprietor of the Desplaines hotel in Desplaines, from being bilked of $15,000 by a group of clever con men. Winkelman was just about to hand an agent of the con men a certified check for that amount when deputy sheriffs and three Chicago detectives stopped the deal.

They arrested the agent who gives the name of Harry Nelson and says he hails from Dennison, Texas.

The "Con Game."

According to Winkelman's story to the police, he was working in his garden last Tuesday when Nelson, a suave mannered man with "a line all his own," paused to inquire if he had any property to sell, such as a hotel, for instance. Winkelman said he'd sell his hotel property for $500 a front foot. There being sixty-five front feet this made the price $32,500. Nelson said he'd have to consult first with the prospective purchaser, a "Mexican colonel" residing at the Chicago Beach hotel.

The next day Nelson came back, reported the price was agreeable and escorted Winkelman to room 623 in the Chicago Beach hotel where he was introduced to the "colonel" and a man named Tom. The "colonel" asked the price. Winkelman said he had decided to charge $40,000. The "colonel" instructed "Tom" to make out a check for $5,000 to bind the deal.

The Plot Deepens.

But the conversation turned to Mexican bonds and bonds on lands in Texas—"leaders," Winkelman believes they were called—and the "colonel" wanted to know if Winkelman cared to go into a deal to make 12½ per cent profit quickly and surely. Winkelman did.

All four taxied out to an address on Lill street, South Chicago—Winkelman thinks it was 4410—and there met an old man. This old man had 5,968 bonds which he wanted to sell for $20 each. "Tom" bought sixteen of the bonds and they were taken over to a broker in a hotel on 57th street who bought them for $800. There was a profit of $480 inside of an hour.

The old man was induced to take the remaining 5,650 bonds to the broker who pronounced them o. k. He tendered the old man a check for $100,209 and gave him $700 in cash. The bonds had to be signed by the old man. He refused to sign unless he was paid fuly in cash.

The "colonel," "Tom" and Nelson were able to raise all but $15,000. Winkelman went back to Des Plaines, had a certified check made out for that amount and was awaiting the arrival of Nelson yesterday when he happened to see his old friend, "Pete" Hoffman. Sheriff Hoffman listened. Then he grabbed the phone.

His Money Is Saved.

When Nelson arrived at the Chicago & Northwestern station in Desplaines, Winkelman met him with the check. Before he could take it he was surrounded by Detective Sergeants Charles Egan, Charles Essig, and Phil Carroll from the bureau; Deputy Sheriffs Wagner and Deaney and the sheriff's son, Gordon Hoffman.

Firemen returned to Curran's hall at 1363 Blue Island avenue last night to extinguish a blaze which broke out among the débris where nine of their comrades and one civilian were killed eight days before. Several companies responded to the alarm.

House Votes Child Labor Amendment

Washington, D. C., April 26.—A resolution proposing a child labor amendment to the constitution was passed late today by the house. Every effort to modify the measure, which now goes to the senate, failed. It would empower congress to limit, regulate, or prohibit the labor of children under 18 years of age.

The vote was 297 to 69, or fifty-three more than the two-thirds required for passage. Voting in the affirmative were 167 Republicans, 128 Democrats, 1 Socialist, and 1 independent.

Many Efforts to Amend.

As soon as the debate ended a flood of amendments poured in. The first, offered by Representative Montague [Dem., Va.] proposed that ratification of the amendment by states would have to be completed within seven years, and that conventions, instead of legislatures, in each state should be required to ratify the proposal.

By a vote of 175 to 84 the house rejected an amendment by Representative Garrett, the Democratic leader, which would have required ratification by state conventions instead of legislatures.

An amendment by Ramseyer [Rep., Ia.], proposing exemption of children on farms, was rejected, 158 to 120.

Berger Scorns Basic Law.

"This is a socialistic measure for which we have fought for thirty years," said Berger [Soc., Wis.].

Opposition was based chiefly on the ground that the proposed amendment, made necessary if congress is to have authority to deal with the problem, by the action of the Supreme court in twice declaring federal child labor laws unconstitutional, would constitute an evasion of state rights.

Foster Explains Resolution.

Representative Foster, author of the resolution, wound up the debate, declaring reports showed that owing to compulsion to work the school attendance of children in many towns was reduced to three or four months a year.

The proposed amendment, he said, was drawn to fix a maximum of work for children, which maximum had already been accepted by most states. Some states he added, have protective legislation for youths up to 21 years of age.

Women Voters Pleased.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 26.—[Special.]—Applause by 3,000 delegates and visitors to the convention of the League of Women Voters greeted the announcement by the president that the child labor amendment had passed the lower house of congress this afternoon. Mrs. Alfred D. Kohn of Chicago, member of the child welfare committee, expressed pleasure that the amendment had won in the form favored by the league.

NEW ST. JAMES M. E. CHURCH TO COST $400,000

St. James Methodist Episcopal church, 46th street and Ellis avenue, destroyed by fire April 4, will be rebuilt on a larger scale costing about $400,000 and in the same location, it was decided last evening. A meeting for that purpose was held at the residence of Albert W. Harris of the Harris Trust and Savings bank. He is president of the St. James board of trustees.

At the same time representatives of the Oakland Methodist Episcopal church, Oakwood boulevard and Langley avenue, met with the St. James trustees and decided to merge the two. The pastor of the Oakland church is the Rev. Austin L. Young.

"We were about to erect a parish house to cost $150,000 adjoining the church," said Mr. Harris. "Now, that we must build a new one because of the fire, we have decided to build large enough to embrace all the parish house facilities in the new plans. We had insurance of $107,000 and not $600,000 as reported. Our new church will cost between $400,000 and $500,000.

MORGAN OFFERS $100,000,000 ON BERLIN LOAN

Pledge Depends on Allies' Full O. K.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 26. — The allies' replies to the reparations commission concerning the Dawes experts' recommendations were published today. The British, Belgians, and Italians accepted the plan integrally, while the French demanded a complete revision of the plan.

J. P. MORGAN.

Simultaneously J. Pierpont Morgan pledged United States bankers to subscribe half of the proposed 800,000,000 gold marks [$200,000,000] loan to Germany if the Dawes scheme is adopted in its entirety, without alterations or political modifications.

Mr. Morgan, in a two hour conference with Louis Barthou, president of the reparations commission, and Sir John Bradbury, British member, assured the reparations officials that an American banking syndicate would subscribe $100,000,000 to the loan. Promises obtained from London indicate that an English group will take $75,000,000, leaving the balance of $25,000,000 to be placed in France, Holland, Switzerland, Italy and elsewhere.

Warns Against Changing Plan.

These tentative pledges however, hold good only if the plan immediately becomes operative. Mr. Morgan warned the allied politicians that they must keep their hands off and not shackle the experts' businesslike arrangements with political or military considerations or interfere with the German government's complete sovereignty inside its territory so German industry can be made to produce the greatest possible output and be able to compete favorably in foreign trade.

The sharp contrast in the tenor of the French and British, Belgian and Italian replies indicates the chasm splitting Premier Poincare from the other allies. The French premier's communication is almost as long as the other three combined, and whereas Premiers Theunis and Mussolini agree on the experts' conclusions practically without comment, and while Sir William Tyrrel points out that there are only three points for the allied governments to decide on and transmit to the reparations commission, Premier Poincare insists that the entire reports of the Dawes and McKenna committees, totaling 45,000 words, require rewriting.

British Urge Freeing of Ruhr.

Reflecting the opinion of Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago and Owen D. Young of New York, the English note states it is only necessary for the French and Belgian governments to abandon the economic and financial occupation of the Ruhr and Rhineland. These territories must be left free under the sovereignty of the Berlin government and the customs barrier and the allied régie for the operation of the German railways in the occupied zones must be suppressed.

The note also suggests that drafting of measures to guarantee the control of the German gold bank, budget, monopoly of revenues, and other sources of payments for reparations, as the experts recommend. The British suggest all charges against Germany be included in annuities. These would cover the cost of the armies of occupation and the cost of maintenance of the various organizations superintending the execution of the Versailles treaty, like the reparations commission itself, the military control commission, and other bodies which hitherto have been paid separately from the annuities provided under the May, 1921, schedule of reparations payments.

Poincare Wants Report Revised.

Premier Poincare's letter, however, takes a diametrically opposite viewpoint, demanding that the reparations commission proceed to revise the whole report.

"The governments await the reparations commission to take a definitive decision, giving the experts' report an executive form, as most of the experts' proposals are written under the form of simple indications, and to complete certain points which the experts left for the commission," he says. "It is only after the reparations commission has defined these points that it will be able to present its final conclusion to the governments."

Poincare then objects that "the governments cannot act usefully until they know exactly what practical result the reparations commission will obtain through the experts' plans."

Desires to See German Action.

Arguing for a further delay, Premier Poincare continues:

"The governments must know what measures the German government has taken for the execution of the decisions of the reparations commission. This decision can be taken only after the reparations commission approves of the projects and laws demanded from Germany."

The French premier then insists that the allied governments must not be considered on the same footing as Germany.

Demands Better Guarantees.

Regarding releasing the French military grip on the Ruhr industry, M. Poincare renews his demand for a larger and surer guarantee than he now holds with the police bayonets in the Rhineland in exchange for Germany to exert full sovereignty over all the territory.

"The governments must examine under what conditions the pledges now held by France and Belgium can be made the object of fusion or exchange with new invisible guarantees to be held by all the allies," he says. "But these operations can only take place after Germany effectively puts the plan into execution, when the governments can determine what guarantees they consider necessary."

Thus, the French reply keeps the problem in a vicious circle. France will not relinquish its hold on the Ruhr until Germany begins paying, whereas the experts and other allies insist that Germany cannot begin paying until France releases the Ruhr economically, and the bankers declare that $800,000,000 gold marks loan cannot be floated until Germany regains the entire control of its territories.

Mussolini May Start Row.

While the Italian reply accepts the Dawes report in full, there are indications in it that Premier Mussolini intends to demand a provisory solution of the interallied debts and an increase in Italy's 10 per cent of reparations before he adheres definitely to the plan.

The Rome government states: "The principles inspiring the experts' plans constitute the base for a solution of the reparations and corelative questions."

British officials in Paris object to Premier Poincare's assumption that France alone is qualified to interpret the treaty of Versailles and the meaning of the experts' report, pointing out that the replies show that there are three to one against the French foreign office's conception.

Poincare Press Changes Tune.

The French reply explains that, with 52 per cent interest in reparations, France is entitled to greater consideration during the discussion of this subject, and its interpretation, therefore, deserves the greatest attention and respect.

The inspired Temps and Journal des Debats tonight reverse their former policy, stating it is not necessary to envisage sanctions if Germany defaults until it actually defaults, which supports the belief that M. Poincare is merely stalling until the elections before giving way and adopting the allies' views.

DAWES TO REMAIN SILENT.

Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, head of the experts' committee on reparations, who is expected in Chicago next Tuesday, will neither speak nor write concerning the report of the committee. He declined, in wireless message, yesterday an invitation from E. G. Heidrich Jr., president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, to a dinner in his honor.

The reply from Gen. Dawes reads: "My associates and I are appreciative of your interest in the report. We hope it will be discussed in America as fully as it is being discussed in Europe. We have all agreed, however, that we should not speak or write regarding it, since statements from us might invite controversy or be considered as interpretation. This is desirable to avoid. Must therefore ask to be excused."

Stammering Robber Pays Second Visit to Get More

For the second time in four nights a stammering stickup man appeared at the Standard Oil gasoline station, 14th street and Wabash avenue, last evening and ordered William Benton to open the strong box. "I—w—won't be b—b—back," were his parting words. "I'v g—got T. B. and this will g—g—get me where I want to go. T—t—tell John D. that I'm much obliged." Tuesday night the robber, who actually appeared to be a consumptive, took $200.

WHEELER TOLD OIL MAN NOT TO WORRY, IS CLAIM

Witness Tells of a Secret Hotel Meeting.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—A secret meeting in room 212 of the Rainbow hotel, Great Falls, Mont., on the night of Jan. 15, 1922, in which government land permit cases pending in Washington were discussed by Senator B. K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] and Gordon Campbell, his client, was testified to today by H. C. Glosser, former private secretary to Campbell, before the Borah committee which is investigating the Wheeler indictment.

Glosser's testimony was immediately attacked by committee Democrats as biased, and an effort was made to show that he expected to escape prosecution on some unnamed charge in return for his testimony against Wheeler. It was shown that Elair Coan, investigator for the National Republican, had paid his expenses to Denver to make an affidavit in this case.

Getting to Bedrock.

In this hearing the committee approached the heart of the case against Wheeler, as well as touching the edge of the alleged "frame up" against the "prosecutor" of the Daugherty investigating committee.

Glosser, young, nervous, wearing a blue collared shirt, and smoking cigarets on the witness stand, said he had made two affidavits at Coan's request. In his first affidavit he said he had stated that Senator Wheeler had received $3,000 from Campbell for appearing in the oil cases.

He admitted on the stand today that this was a mistake, and that his memory had been refreshed before the grand jury when he saw two checks for $2,000 each, which Wheeler had received from Campbell.

Why He Went to Hotel.

"How did you come to go to the Rainbow hotel that night?" asked Senator Sterling [Rep., S. D.], the Wheeler prosecutor on this committee.

"Campbell told me to get a room there; he wanted to talk to Wheeler."

"What was said in regard to oil permits?"

"A great deal. They discussed the number of permits Campbell had, the details of handling them through here [Washington]. One permit in particular seemed valuable. This was the Phil McGowan permit, held in the name of W. H. Rhea."

"What did Campbell say?"

"He said if Wheeler could get that permit fixed up in Washington we could cut up a lot of money there."

"What did Wheeler say?"

"I do not think he made any reply at that time. He left the impression that we were not to worry, as the permits could be handled in Washington easily."

"What did he say about his influence?"

"He left the impression that his connections here would get action on the permits."

"Was there any conversation with Campbell about the compensation Wheeler was to receive?"

"Yes."

The witness was not permitted to repeat this conversation, as it was outside the presence of Wheeler.

"Did you tell the grand jury of Wheeler's compensation?" asked Senator Sterling.

"Yes, about the Wheeler fees in general."

"What did you say was paid to Wheeler?"

"There were two $2,000 checks, for general services."

$10,000 a Year Discussed.

In the affidavit obtained by Coan this witness states the fee agreed on was $10,000 a year. The point in whether it included Washington services, which Wheeler and all previous witnesses have denied.

"In what cases did Wheeler personally appear for Campbell in Montana?"

"In one receivership case."

"Did you make a statement before in this case?" asked Senator Borah.

"Yes, to Blair Coan of the National Republican, about March 27."

A second statement was made to Coan, the witness said, to substantiate statement made by Rhea, which is supposed to give in general the sale aspect of the Wheeler-Campbell agreement as given by Glosser.

"To whom did you make the first statement of the matters incorporated in this affidavit?"

"To J. D. Watson, Great Falls stockman."

"How did that come about?"

"He asked me. He told me some Washington people wanted to see me about the Wheeler case. He advised me to tell what I knew."

Senator Caraway asked: "Did Coan tell you what he wanted to get statements for?"

"He said they were to be used in a newspaper."

"Did he say they were for the Republican, to be used against Wheeler?"

"He said a newspaper."

"Did Coan offer to pay you any money?" asked Caraway.

"No."

"Who paid your expenses to Colorado?"

"Coan."

"What did this amount to?"

"About $120."

"Did he pay your expenses to Billings also to see your lawyer?"

"Yes."

"Hotel bills, too?"

"Yes, sir."

Edward M. Harvey of Eugene, Ore., testified that he was a trustee of the Campbell Oil syndicate and that at a meeting of officers in January, 1923, the employment of Senator Wheeler as special counsel was ratified.

"What was the scope of the work which Senator Wheeler was to do?" he was asked.

"So far as I know it was to appear in the receivership suit in Montana and in other state actions. His appearance in Washington was not thought of."

Glosser, he said, was present at this officers' meeting.

Senate Orders Its Sergeant to Arrest Mal Daugherty

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—Mal S. Daugherty, banker of Washington Court House, O., brother of the former attorney general, will be brought before the senate to answer questions which he has refused to answer before the Brookhart investigating committee, unless he succeeds in a court fight to evade the senate resolution which was adopted today.

The action of the committee, which has been investigating the department of justice since March 12 in the Daugherty contempt matter, was decided on today after delay and preparation since April 11, when the banker defied the committee in Ohio and refused to respond to a subpœna or permit any examination of his bank's books.

Send Deputy to Ohio.

Following the adoption of the resolution Senator Cummins [Rep., Ia.], president pro tempore of the senate, signed the warrant and delivered it to Sergeant-at-Arms Barry, who dispatched a deputy to Washington Court House to serve the instrument upon Mr. Daugherty.

Barry was uncertain tonight just when his deputy would go to Washington Court House. He said that it rested with Brookhart. Brookhart said the matter was out of his hands, but that there was no particular hurry. He seemed to be uncertain as to procedure, or whether Daugherty would be able to stage a court battle in Ohio before coming to Washington.

Criminal Charges Here.

Senator Brookhart said that there would be no contempt proceedings against Howard Mannington, as the committee intended to bring criminal charges against him.

On March 22, it is stated in the resolution, Mal Daugherty was served with a subpœna to appear with books, files, and records. The committee's main object was to get at the financial status of Harry M. Daugherty and the late Jess Smith. Daugherty came to Washington, but refused to testify.

The contempt case, as in the Harry Sinclair case, opens the whole question of the power and jurisdiction of the senate. The question will probably be thrown into the courts at once by habeas corpus proceedings on the part of Daugherty.

Daugherty Won't Talk.

Washington Court House, O., April 26.—M. S. Daugherty, local banker, refused to comment when told the senate had adopted a resolution citing him for contempt.

BLAST IN GAS TANK ON CANAL BREAKS WINDOWS

Windows in several homes were broken and plastering was knocked down by an explosion of gas in a small tank on the drainage canal west of Ashland avenue late last night. The force of the shock broke windows in the Atlas brewery at West 21st street and Blue Island avenue.

When the police and fire alarm office heard the report efforts were made to locate the explosion, but it was not until early in the morning that the Deering street police were informed by Mrs. Joseph Groth, 1554 Levee street, that the blast had been an explosion in one of a number of tanks along the canal.

No one was injured, the police were told.

GUNMEN SMASH PRINTING PLANT OF RACING PAPER

Printing forms, machinery, office furniture and equipment valued at $10,000 in the newly opened plant of the Lenni Publishing company, on the sixth floor of the Linden building, 703 South La Salle street, were wrecked shortly before 7 o'clock last night by five gunmen, who entered the place and forced six men to lie on their faces on the floor during the raid.

The victims were Rei Tolleson, head of the company, who writes racing news under the name of El Roi-Ray; C. A. Brayton, managing editor of the Chicago Daily Running Horse; Oscar Deleuw, a printer; Dean B. Gaines, telegraph operator; Andrew O'Neil, electrician, and Joe Anderson, colored elevator man.

Anderson said the men drove up to the building in a Cadillac. When the elevator reached the sixth floor the men drew guns and marched Anderson into Tolleson's office, where the others were corralled. After breaking desks, typewriters, jerking phones off the walls and crippling linotype machines, the men ran the elevator to the ground floor and drove away.

RIPS HALO OFF FORD IN ATTACK ON SHOALS LEASE

Name Hypnotizes Many, Garfield Tells Senators.

BY DONALD EWING.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—If the government gives Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford it might as well broadcast this message to every trust in the nation: "Come in and get what you want; take anything; take everything, regardless of the welfare of the people or the nation in which they live."

James A. Garfield, secretary of interior under Theodore Roosevelt, today made those statements in testifying before the senate agriculture committee. With bluntness that recalled the "big stick" methods of his dead chieftain, he brushed aside the "Ford haic," laying bare the Detroit manufacturer as "a cold business man, seeking the dollar, and not offering philanthropy as some would have us believe."

The Glamour of a Name.

"It's just the glamour of a name that makes Ford's offer appeal to some," he said. "And the glamour of a name should never affect a government and its care of its people. The fact that Ford has done great work in his particular line is nothing on which to predicate the turning over to him of a great asset which belongs to the people."

Turning to finances, he reiterated that Ford offers only $5,000,000 for what already has cost the government $130,000,000 and will cost much more.

Analyzing Ford's offer, he pointed out that much is heard of "cheap fertilizer," yet "the Ford offer, stripped of legal verbiage, simply says in effect: 'If we find we can make a good profit on fertilizer we'll make as much as we see fit.'

"The silence of the Ford offer on power is its most significant feature," he continued, "it speaks of 850,000 horsepower to be guaranteed by the government and mentions using 100,000 for making fertilizer.

"Under that alone could come the greatest power trust, fixing its own price on power, giving it to whom it saw fit, controlling the entire southeastern states, stifling all industry but its own.

"The Fords are not philanthropists. They are not thinking of any one but themselves. Why imagine they are going to do a great many philanthropic things not even suggested in their contract?

Should Not Be Given Away.

"Anything that is a benefit to the people, or is made with their money should not be given away for a song simply to benefit a private individual."

Mr. Garfield suggested that the government might under an equitable contract lease the site but retain title and control.

Henry Ford having declined invitations from the committee to appear before it, a subpœna was issued this afternoon for his confidential secretary, E. G. Leibold, to appear next Friday.

On Monday Secretary of War Weeks will be on the stand, and on Tuesday Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania will testify. Weeks already has denounced the Ford bid, and Pinchot is opposed to it.

CHICAGO LABOR ASKS CHARTER TO GUIDE POLITICS

Farmer-Labor Party Needs Help, Plea.

For the first time in the history of the Illinois labor movement an application has been made to the American Federation of Labor for a district council charter to govern the activities of the various state Farmer-Labor parties and have them function as a unit through a central body similar to a building trades council.

The amalgamation of political parties of the working classes has been started by James O'Donnell, an advocate for years of independent political action for wage earners. He said the ebbing strength of the Farmer-Laborites in Illinois was due to the discord and dissension which has split the wage earners into several factions.

Points to Many Bodies.

His communication requesting the charter follows in full:

"Mr. Samuel Gompers—Dear Sir and Brother:

"In view of the increasing numbers of Farmer-Labor parties in Illinois, the undersigned hereby apply to the American Federation of Labor for a charter to organize a district council to coördinate the activities of these numerous political organizations.

"At present there exists in this state the Farmer-Labor party of Illinois under the leadership of Gifford Ernest; the Cook County Farmer-Labor party, led by David McVey, which is a dual organization. It is our belief that this latter branch of the farmer-laborites has grapevine connections with William Z. Foster's 'boring from within movement.' Two of the executive board members of this branch also hold official positions with soviet propoganda spreading agencies. They are Jay C. Brown and Robert M. Buck.

Still Another Launched.

"Of recent date we learn that Duncan McDonald, former president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and prominent in mine workers' unions, has launched the latest Farmer-Labor party. The convention of this party will hold its convention in Peoria, May 18, which will be the same time the mine workers of the state will hold their convention.

"The fourth element of labor's political factionalism is the Illinois State Conference for Progressive Political Action, led by Charles MacGowan.

"This faction represents the sixteen railroad organizations and has lines extended for the votes of farmers. Involving as it does both workers in industry and agriculture, we believe this faction should come under our proposed council jurisdiction.

"In the last gubernatorial campaign the Cook county Farmer-Labor party did admirable work for Gov. Small's renomination. But now that the campaign is over we believe its officials should revert back again to their former status in the regular Farmer-Labor party."

HIS WIFE DIES AS HE ACTS IN PLAY ABOUT DYING WIFE

Tragedy Stalks Into Life of Frank Keenan.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 26.—[Special.]—Frank Keenan, actor, appeared last night in a sketch called "Fame" at the Writers' club in Hollywood.

The sketch had been sent to him twenty years ago by a San Francisco newspaper man. Keenan had wanted to produce it at once, but when he wrote the author the letter came back. For twenty years the manuscript lay in his trunk.

A delightful thing, "Fame," dim with comedy, yet treating of the glory that comes too late. At the end the actor looks at the picture of his dead wife. Fame has come to him after her death. As he looks, tears stream down his face. "O hell," he says, "what's the use?"

Wife Whispers of Pain.

Mrs. Keenan was among those in the audience. She laughed heartily at the comedy parts, but toward the end she groaned, and turning to Mitchell Lewis, who sat next to her, she murmured she was ill.

Frank Keenan, in the frowsy bathrobe that the play demanded, was standing on the stage, looking at a picture and weeping bitterly. Lewis aided Mrs. Keenan to a retiring room and called a doctor. "O hell," the actor was saying, "what's the use?"

The curtain came down, the lights went on. The curtain went up again. Keenan stood there, smiling, bowing. Four times they called him back, and then a friend took his arm. He said nothing, but he pulled the actor from the wings.

Goes to Her Death Bed.

The audience was still clamoring for Keenan, but there was something impelling in his friend's action. Keenan ignored the applause. He hurried with his friend to the retiring room. Mrs. Keenan lay on the couch.

The doctor stood near by. "Dying," he said; "cerebral hemorrhage." Mrs. Keenan was unconscious. She died as her husband, still in the bathrobe and grease paint, bent over her and called her name.

Mrs. Keenan was 56 years old, and the mother of two daughters, one the wife of Ed Wynn, the comedian. She was married to Keenan when she was 16 years old.

Before Lloyds or any other ance company will issue a "b or "block" policy to a jewelry diamond broker, the insured's a tion must be sent to the Jewele vey bureau, 30 Malden lane, New which is maintained by the Jewelers' Board of Trade. The organization lists more than 35,0 elers throughout the country and tain offices in New York, Chicag cinnati, Providence and San Fra

If not it will be refused. will be no exceptions to the rule applications of the largest co in Chicago as well as the sm jeweler on Halsted street must through this bureau.

Objection by Chicago brokers to plan lies in the fact that the bure located in New York.

"Why don't they establish a bureau here in Chicago?" one br asked. "It seems to be taken granted that all of our diamonds jewelry come through New whereas there are many dealers who import their diamonds dire from Amsterdam and they never through New York customs at a

New York's Advantage.

"There are also many jewelry m facturers here. Why should they put to the trouble of having to New York's O. K.? Besides, 90 per of the jewelry losses in Chicag the last few years have been rep by New York salesmen selling here. It was the New York bro and merchants who collected the surance. Why should New York itself up as judge and jury as if cago were some plague spot on world's insurance map?"

But it is admitted that insura companies, especially Lloyds, h paid heavily in Chicago in the few years and this has been reflec in the rates being almost doubled s 1921.

Big Raise in Rates.

The rate charged by Lloyds on policy of "all risks in all situatio is now $100 for $5,000, whereas same policy might have been bo three years ago for about $45. Llo rates on personal jewelry and fur surance as effective Feb. 1, 1923, still in effect, follow:

Up to $5,000	$2 per
$5,001 to $10,000	$1.75 per
$10,001 to $20,000	$1.25 per
$20,001 to $30,000	$1.00 per
$30,001 to $50,000	87½c per
$50,001 or over	75c per

With all these rates the comp inserts a clause allowing for a $5 duction from the full amount of premium. For policies without the duction clause the rates run $1.92½ per $100 to 82½ cents per for amounts over $5,000.

Figures Not Exact.

No exact figures can be given in cases of blanket policies issued merchants and brokers. These based entirely on the location in wh the gems are kept and the "moral physical hazard" involved. The n ber of policemen on the beat, wa services, burglar alarm systems, nu ber of burglaries in the vicinity, re tation of the dealers and their ployes for honesty—all are taken i consideration.

This a State street merchant m pay a rate of only $800 on $75,0 while a jeweler in a certain locat on Halsted street may be char $1,100 for the same amount, and other merchant on Roosevelt road much as $1,500. Each rate is fi after thorough investigation of hazards possible.

H. E. Dempsey, former cashier of the Farmers' First National bank of Minooka, Ill., yesterday confessed that he was $5,865 short in his accounts.

CANCELLATION OF INSURANCE ON GEMS BEGINS

Lloyd's Leads in Drastic Action Here.

Following the action of Lloyds of London in terminating contracts with a number of Chicago brokers relative to the issuance of jewelry and fur insurance, many agents, it was learned yesterday, already have begun canceling outstanding policies. Hundreds of policies have been canceled and more cancellations are to follow. Refunds are being made to the holders for the unexpired life of the policies.

This process of weeding out "undesirable" policies, one agent explained, will be continued until theft insurance in Chicago is placed again on "an A No. 1 basis."

New Plan of Procedure.

At the same time both insurance brokers and Chicago diamond merchants, who are also importers, are protesting against a plan of procedure which has been worked out for the issuance of all policies to jewelry concerns in the future. This procedure will be as follows:

Before Lloyds or any other insurance company will issue a "blanket" or "block" policy to a jewelry firm or diamond broker, the insured's application must be sent to the Jewelry Survey bureau, 30 Maiden lane, New York which is maintained by the National Jewelers' Board of Trade. The latter organization lists more than 35,000 jewelers throughout the country and maintain offices in New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Providence and San Francisco

Plan Thorough Inquiry.

The survey bureau in New York will look up the standing of the applicant for insurance, both as to credit rating and the moral and physical hazard of the risk. If the policy receives the bureau's o. k. it will be issued. If not it will be refused. There will be no exceptions to the rule. The applications of the largest concerns in Chicago as well as the smallest jeweler on Halsted street must pass through this bureau.

Objection by Chicago brokers to this plan lies in the fact that the bureau is located in New York.

"Why don't they establish another bureau here in Chicago?" one broker asked. "It seems to be taken for granted that all of our diamonds and jewelry come through New York whereas there are many dealers here who import their diamonds directly from Amsterdam and they never pass through New York customs at all.

New York's Advantage.

"There are also many jewelry manufacturers here. Why should these be put to the trouble of having to get New York's O. K.? Besides, '90 per cent of the jewelry losses in Chicago in the last few years have been reported by New York salesmen selling goods here. It was the New York brokers and merchants who collected the insurance. Why should New York set itself up as judge and jury as if Chicago were some plague spot on the world's insurance map?"

But it is admitted that insurance companies, especially Lloyds, have paid heavily in Chicago in the last few years and this has been reflected in the rates being almost doubled since 1921.

Big Raise in Rates.

The rate charged by Lloyds on its policy of "all risks in all situations" is now $100 for $5,000, whereas this same policy might have been bought three years ago for about $45. Lloyds' rates on personal jewelry and fur insurance as effective Feb. 1, 1923, and still in effect, follow:

Up to $5,000	$2 per $100
$5,001 to $10,000	$1.75 per $100
$10,001 to $20,000	$1.25 per $100
$20,001 to $30,000	$1.00 per $100
$30,001 to $50,000	87½ per $100
$50,001 or over	75c per $100

With all these rates the company inserts a clause allowing for a $50 deduction from the full amount of the premium. For policies without the deduction clause the rates run from $1.92½ per $100 to $2½ cents per $100 for amounts over $5,000.

Figures Not Exact.

No exact figures can be given in the case of blanket policies issued to merchants and brokers. These are based entirely on the location in which the gems are kept and the "moral and physical hazard" involved. The number of policemen on the beat, watchmen, burglar alarm systems, number of burglaries in the vicinity, reputation of the dealers and their employes for honesty—all are taken into consideration.

Thus a State street merchant may get a rate of only $800 on $75,000, while a jeweler in a certain location on Halsted street may be charged $1,200 for the same amount, and another merchant on Roosevelt road as much as $1,500. Each rate is fixed after thorough investigation of all records possible.

Not only that, but the entire city has been zoned by the underwriters of Lloyd's, and certain restricted sections marked off in which no insurance will be issued under any circumstances. If a policyholder moves the insured articles from an unrestricted zone into restricted territory his policy immediately becomes void. Several instances have occurred in which residents moved from Sheridan road to certain sections of Douglas boulevard to find they were unable to collect one penny on a burglary.

American companies now offer only limited insurance on jewelry and have been forced to increase their charges to 3 per cent on furs. Moreover, most American companies will not issue the broad policies granted by Lloyd's, nor will they pay theft insurance unless the evidence of robbery is clear and positive. Lloyd's has made a policy of paying without question on losses, no matter how they occurred, and hundreds of persons have made a business of profiting by it.

Cite Typical Instances.

For instance, a Lake Forest woman recently placed $15,000 worth of jewelry in a suitcase, strapped the case on the running board of her car and left it parked at the Blackstone hotel for hours. When she emerged the suitcase was gone. Yet the premium was paid.

In another case a woman went to her friends and borrowed $8,000 worth of jewelry on the pretext that it was just her love of display. She took the jewels to an appraiser and then had them insured. A short while later she reported they had been stolen. It was only by chance the fraud was discovered as the company was about to pay the premium.

"Why, we have almost ceased to insure furs at all," one broker said. "We had to. A woman would buy a fur coat and wear it for two or three years, and it would be badly worn or else it would be out of style. It would be stolen, and the woman would have a new coat without cost. This type of fraud has been legion.

One Woman's Fraud Ruse.

"Then there is the woman who goes out to the bridge party, loses all of her money, and then begins to put up her rings. She loses them, too, and then comes to us to collect. We had one case in which a woman had loaned her ring to her sister, who had worn it on an outing with her sweetheart. The sweetheart took the ring, and the sister reported she had been held up. It was just accident we landed the sweetheart and got the ring back."

Every broker has a long list of such frauds. One company has announced that hereafter it will ask all of its policy holders to refrain from notifying the police at all in cases of robbery.

"We are going to keep a man on duty day and night to answer calls," this agent said. "We are going to make our investigation first. Why? Because we have lost almost as much through the police as otherwise. A squad of policemen arrest a man with $10,000 in loot. By the time the case comes to trial about half of it has disappeared. In some cases we have had to bring suit in order to get the stuff out of the hands of the police. It is unbelievable, but it is true."

But there is one rift in the clouds of dishonesty. That is the "conscience loss."

"Many a time we have had cases of a man who comes home from his club or the cabaret slightly under the weather to wake up in the morning and find his diamond pin gone," another broker narrated. "He reports it stolen or lost. He don't know where it went; hasn't a single clue. We pay.

Then He Finds It.

Six months later he finds the pin stuck away in a corner of some drawer or, like as not, in the chandelier. His conscience bothers him and he returns the money.

American companies cannot compete with the broad policies issued by Lloyds largely because the latter are more of the nature of a gamble than percentages based on accurate loss tables. One policy recently issued by Lloyds for $2,880, on which the premium was only $57.60, had been distributed among 114 individual underwriters.

But after paying out over $3,000,000 in jewelry and fur losses and other kinds of theft in the United States even Lloyds is going to be extremely careful who obtains policies hereafter. The result will be that owners of costly jewelry will be more careful of their diamonds.

Best Spellers of "Jawbreakers" Among 50,000

County Champs

Viola White, 13 years old, of the Elmwood Park school, district 85, in the northwest part of Cook county, proved yesterday that for another year she is the best girl speller in Cook county. Last year she also won first place in the county spelling match.

Here are the words which Viola had to spell to retain her gold medal as the best speller of all the 50,000 grade school pupils in the county schools—gorgeous, epilepsy, executive, sponsoring, rendezvous, competence, unwittingly, billeted, irreparable, insincerity, economic, supersede, impugn, taciturn, anomaly, negotiation, schedule, psychologist, inconsistencies, communist, jeopardize, expediency, unrolling, plausibly, and reprisals. She was graded 92 per cent.

Second place was given Mary Hletko, 13 years old, from District 104, in the west part of the county. She spelled all but one word correctly. Roberta Hayes, 13 years old, of District 152, in the southwest part of the county, won third place.

There were eighty-two contestants, each having won 100 per cent in the matches conducted in his own school district. And most of those contestants were girls, boys making a poor showing in the spring spelling bees.

'MOTHER' IS LAST SPECTACLE OF WANDA DREAM

Letter to Parent Finishes Bohemia Drama

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Three short words, "Matka, droga Matka," written just before Wanda Stopa swallowed poison Friday in the Hotel Statler, Detroit, were received last night by Mrs. Harriet Ines Stopa, 1505 Augusta street.

The letter, signed with the Polish diminutive, "Mamminino," was a silent prelude to the arrival today of the lifeless body of "my little girl," due to arrive this morning at 6:55 via the Michigan Central railroad.

Almost like the chart of an ancient Greek tragedy does the young attorney's life and death work itself out. For it was on this same train, just three days ago (it is now pretty well established) that Wanda Stopa arrived at the Park Row station, summoned Taxi Driver Ernest T. Wood, and drove to Palos Park, there to commit the murder of Henry Manning.

Today the girl will be met by a hearse from Joseph Makarski's undertaking establishment and will be driven to 1121 Noble street.

As Speaks a Child.

Written in ink, on a plain sheet of white paper, this last line of the girl who deserted the stodginess of "Little Poland" for the mirage of "near Bohemia," is as unsensational as her life has been dramatic.

"Mother, dear mother," the message reads. And the signature, also in Polish, brings back the studious little Polish girl of three years ago, before the studio apartment interlude. Folded up in the note is $150 in currency, a 1,000 mark Polish government bond, and a $200 insurance policy made out in favor of Mrs. Stopa in the Polish Woman's alliance.

As Mrs. Stopa reads the letter and sobs, her two sons, Henry and Walter, are on the alert against the possible appearance of "Count Ted" Glasko, their sister's ne-er do well husband, whose return they so much fear that they have obtained police protection for the house.

Denies Hiring Detectives.

Mr. Smith, asked last night to comment on the report of New York detectives that he had been kept in constant knowledge of Miss Stopa's activities during the last few weeks, and the suggestion that he had employed two private detectives to shadow the young lawyer, denied the story completely.

"I was trying to cut the cable, not to reinforce it," he said firmly.

"Not only did I know nothing whatever of Miss Stopa's movements, but I did not want to. And that is the truth."

New York officials further reported that the girl's personal effects, found in the Bossert hotel, Brooklyn, included a letter in Polish from Stopa.

"Don't be foolish," it read, "and give up everything. Lots of women have married as poorly as you have. Don't sacrifice yourself for your husband. He is not worth it."

That Poisoned Candy.

Around Greenwich village they are telling the story of Wanda's friend, "Walter," said to be a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra. It was "Walter," the story goes, who gave Wanda the box of poisoned candy, part of which the girl sent to Mr. Smith, as a plot for his death. She is supposed to have planned to eat some of it and die.

Mr. Smith admits having received the candy, but declined to go into the details of the discovery of the plot.

Among other effects found in her trunk, Brooklyn police said there was a certificate with the signature of former Attorney General Daugherty, showing that in addition to being an assistant district attorney in Chicago, Miss Stopa was also a deputy attorney general.

And so even in death Wanda Stopa's impassioned career of self-expression which climaxed itself in murder and then flared up still higher in suicide, is tapering off dramatically.

Chicago's "Bohemia" wants to bury her.

The Stopa family is planning a church funeral.

And the district attorney's office plan to send official representatives to the funeral of their former associate.

Two Chicago artists, Charles P. Biesel, 1544 East 57th street, and Roy Clarkson, 1551 East 57th street, sent on to Detroit by others in the colony, escorted the body back to Chicago. The "brainy young attorney," according to Mr. Biesel, "inspired scores of artists and authors with her brilliant conversation and wit."

As the two Chicago friends kept a vigil of friendship at the Detroit undertaking establishment, a Mr. and Mrs. James C. Howell, came to pay their respects. Both declared they believed Mr. Smith, the advertising man who paid her bills "because he admired her brains," was responsible for the tragedy.

"Smith only led Wanda on," mused Mrs. Howell, as she looked down at the white sheeted figure.

And Round Her Coffin.

Over the girl's coffin, whoever is in charge, there will meet for the first time the varied bits of Miss Stopa's patchwork life. There will be the neighbors and kinsmen, quiet folk who speak softly of the little girl who used to lead the native folk dances, and then run back to books.

There will be "the people who understand me" from the artists' colony on the near north side, and over on East 57th street.

And there will be the lawyer's professional comrades. John Elliott Byrne, first assistant United States district attorney, announced yesterday that the office would be represented at the funeral and would send a floral tribute to the coffin of the attorney.

But the two key-figures in Wanda Stopa's life will not be present.

"Ted" Glasko, her husband, is evading the police.

And Y. Kenley Smith, for love of whom Wanda tried to kill Mrs. Genevieve Dawley Smith, and did kill Henry Manning, is not expected to attend the funeral of "the brainest girl" he ever knew.

THEODORE E. BURTON.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Mrs. John Kelley, 63 East Elm street, has lived at that address for eight years, and says that Miss Wanda Stopa never roomed there or even visited there. Friday's TRIBUNE gave that address as one of a number at which the girl was reported to have lived.

COOLIDGE PICKS BURTON TO GIVE KEYNOTE SPEECH

Just One Ballot to Be Cast, Is Belief.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—Theodore E. Burton, representative from Ohio, and formerly senator, will be the temporary chairman of the Republican national convention and as such will deliver the address striking the keynote of the Republican canvass for the presidency.

Mr. Burton was chosen by President Coolidge, who was consulted by the national convention not only because he is the titular head of the party, but because he has become, by nearly unanimous consent, the party candidate for President, and will be so designated formally on the first ballot.

Coolidge Wish Is Law.

The gathering will be in reality a Coolidge ratification party and his wish is to be law in the proceedings pertaining to the launching of his candidacy.

The President made known his preference for Mr. Burton when he received John T. Adams, chairman of the national committee, and National Committeeman David Mulvane of Kansas, chairman of the subcommittee on arrangements, at the White House this morning.

Mr. Burton will be selected, according to the White House, because of his eminent qualification to strike the party keynote. He is a profound scholar, a statesman of long and wide experience, and an unwavering Republican.

Their Minds Dovetail.

It is remarked as a matter of significance that he agrees with President Coolidge on virtually every question that will be dealt with in the party platform and presumably the keynote speech, including the world court. Some of those proposed for the temporary chairmanship were at odds with the President on the world court and some other questions.

President Coolidge has not signified his preference for permanent chairman, but it is known that the man favored by most of the leaders is Senator Wadsworth of New York.

J. L. KRAFT BROS. PLAN $7,000,000 IMPROVEMENT

BY AL CHASE.

One of Chicago's tallest and most imposing buildings, to cost in the neighborhood of $7,000,000, and to house the world's largest cheese makers, the J. L. Kraft Brothers company, is to be erected on the north bank of the Chicago river, just across Rush street from the Wrigley, if present plans are carried out. This is on part of the site of the homestead of John H. Kinzie, Chicago's first white settler.

This was learned last night when the details of a ninety-nine year lease by Attorney William R. Manierre to the Kraft concern were disclosed.

Plans Great Structure.

J. L. Kraft admitted that his company intends erecting a sky rubbing cheese factory, cold storage and office building, to be used entirely by the owner. He has not yet engaged an architect, but said he intended having one of the finest structures in the city.

It is understood, in view of the practical removal of Chicago's height bid, that the Kraft tower will climb considerably nearer the clouds than does the Wrigley just opposite. Mr. Kraft says the present seven story warehouse on the site will not be wrecked probably until next year.

Terms of Lease.

The ninety-nine year lease calls for a total net rental from Jan. 1, 1924 of $3,575,000. The terms are: $25,000 for each of the first fifteen years; $27,500 annually for the next fifteen; $32,500 for twenty; $37,500 for twenty-five, and $50,000 yearly for the last twenty-four, with an option to buy at the end of the term at $1,000,000. William Kaplan was broker.

The site fronts 100 feet on Rush, ninety- one on Kinzie, seventy-one on North Water and 110 feet on the river. A patent was issued on March 9, 1837, from the United States to Robert H. Kinzie. On Feb. 25, 1843, it was conveyed by him to John H. Kinzie in consideration of love and affection for $20. After other changes in ownership Attorney Manierre bought it in 1896 for $165,000. The present factory has been under short term lease to the Kraft interests for some time.

LEADERS ARRIVE FOR GIRL SCOUTS' NATIONAL RALLY

Founder of Organization Tells of Aims.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"The modern girl has plenty of hardships and perils to encounter, though they are not the same primitive sort which existed in the days of John Kinzie. For that reason girls should be equipped, mentally and physically, to endure and to progress and to triumph."

Mrs. Juliette Low, the great-granddaughter of John Kinzie and who founded the Girl Guides in Savannah, Ga., in 1912, the name of which later was changed to Girl Scouts, so declared yesterday.

400 Leaders Expected.

Mrs. Low arrived for the Girl Scouts' convention which opens tomorrow at the Hotel Drake with more than 400 leaders from every state in attendance. Two thousand girls are expected to take part in the activities of the week.

"The Girl Scout training is productive of wonderful results," Mrs. Low continued. "The outdoor life in the camps is vastly important."

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, president of the organization, arrives this evening. Tomorrow, which is the first day of the convention, will be devoted to a constitutional revision and a reception at the Fortnightly club at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Week's Program Full.

Mrs. Low will talk this afternoon at a tea at the Chicago Historical society at 3 o'clock. She will speak on pioneer days here and why "the Girl Scouts of today are the pioneers of tomorrow."

Tuesday at 10:20 a. m. Mayor Dever will welcome the delegates and Mrs. Herbert Hoover will report on the year's growth of the body. Girl Scout captains will give ten minute talks on health, education, and citizenship in their relationship to scouting. In the evening a fashion show will be held.

Thursday is to be a big day with a talk in the forenoon by Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin, national director, and a banquet of the delegates and their guests at the Drake hotel. Mrs. Arthur Osgood Choate, chairman of the standards committee, will speak in the afternoon on the new order of the Golden Eaglet, which is the highest rank in scouting.

Friday afternoon Chicago's two "perfect" girls will be awarded the Golden Eaglet by Mrs. Choate. There are only 479 of the 160,000 members entitled to the honor. The award will be made at the 16th street armory, where pioneer days will be depicted.

GIRL SCOUTS CAPTURE CHICAGO

Leaders of the Girl Scout movement arrived yesterday and are coming into town today for the national convention of the organization to be held here this week. Mrs. Julia E. Weill, secretary of the Chicago council, was caught by the photographer as she gave the salute to Miss Juliette Low, right, the founder of the body and a direct descendant of John Kinzie, a first settler in Chicago. POLISH ENVOY TO AMERICA FETED BY CHICAGOANS

Dr. Wladyslaw Wroblewski, Polish ambassador to the United States, was welcomed to Chicago yesterday by Mayor Dever. The diplomat was met by a committee including Ald. Stanley Adamkiewicz [31st], George Barthel de Weydenthal, Polish consul general in Chicago, and John M. Kelly, the mayor's secretary.

"There are some 400,000 of my fellow countrymen in your magnificent city," the ambassador told Mayor Dever. "And, unless I am mistaken, they are good Americans.

"I came to give them a word of greeting, a word of cheer from their mother country. Poland is proud of them."

Dr. Wroblewski was a guest at a banquet given by Consul General de Weydenthal at the Drake hotel last night. This afternoon at 1 o'clock he will be the guest of the Polish Women's alliance at a luncheon given at 1519 North Ashland avenue and at 3 o'clock he will address a mass meeting, sponsored by the Polish Women's Catholic union at Augusta street and Milwaukee avenue.

GIRLS URGED TO HELP PRESERVE WILD FLOWERS

In recognition of Girls' week plans, 300 girls were entertained yesterday afternoon at the Chicago Art institute by the Illinois chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America.

In a short talk to the girls, who filled Fullerton hall, Mrs. C. L. Hutchinson, president, begged that every girl make it her duty to preserve wild flowers that grow along American highways, and that each child do all possible to discourage the "flower loving motorist."

Martin Johnson's film, "Trailing African Wild Animals," was shown before the tea, which was served to the 300 girls in the club room.

Out at the Historical society, 532 North Dearborn street, Miss Elizabeth Beahl, assistant to Miss Caroline McIlvaine, acting secretary of the Chicago Historical society, talked to girls from several city high schools and private schools, on early Chicago history.

A QUIET STUDY OF A QUIET MAN —HARLAN STONE

He's Sitting in Chair That Daugherty Left.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—The man in whom you, as a law abiding American citizen, ought to take the most interest is the unshowiest of all the current Washington notables.

You ought to take a searching interest in him and his attributes because he stands between you and all the highly fiscalized banditti of the land. He is your agent, your proxy, the man you have a right to turn to in trouble or perplexity, or to whom you have turned over certain powers.

That is what the title which Attorney General Harlan Fiske Stone is newly wearing means, for that title is all enmeshed with the old feudalistic and legalistic verb, attornare—to turn to.

No Grand Standing Visible.

But Harlan Fiske Stone wears the title unostentatiously and carries his responsibilities to you and to the republic without grunting or declaiming.

"I'm not much of a phrasemaker," he said when I asked him for some phrases of greeting or counsel to the American bar.

And one Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, which is his hour for the weekly receiving of newspaper correspondents, a dozen of them pinned him fast in his big desk chair with—

"What's the news, Mr. Attorney General?"

He looked across at them with an abstracted grin and was silent several seconds, then saying:

"The reason I hesitate is that I don't know any. I'm just sawing wood."

A massive sort of repose held him motionless and kept him laconic throughout the visit.

What He Is—and Isn't.

So, if you are as interested in him as you ought to be, you will have to be interested in him for the things he isn't.

He is neither austere nor expansive; neither ponderous nor blithe; neither picturesque nor commonplace. He will tell you no anecdotes and be but civilly interested in yours. He will neither bandy epigrams nor paper your desk with mimeographed "statements."

He is a golden-mean man, neither secretive nor wearing a crystal window in his breast for interviewers to peek through.

In short, the things that make him interesting are the opposites of the attributes and manifestations that make most Washington notables interesting.

Two things he thoroughly dislikes. The first of his aversions is dissipation of energy. The second is extravagant language.

To the women of the national committee for law enforcement, who thought they wanted a spacious, resounding pledge from the bearer of a new broom, he said:

"Upon me rests the responsibility of enforcing the laws of the United States. You are perhaps aware that that is a task of some difficulty. I am assuming it with a stout heart, and a cheerful faith in you and your fellow citizens.

"I believe my duty to be to administer the laws without fear or favor, to the end, first, that the law may be obeyed, and, second, where it is disobeyed punishment shall be swift and sure.

"I believe the law to be applicable not alone to violators of the law but to agents of the law."

Women Believed in Him.

Naught flamboyant about that. The women, certainly, took it in earnest, and they did not believe he was using merely a routine of words when he closed by inviting their convention to submit to him "in writing" their suggestions about law enforcement.

They took him in earnest because he was simple.

He was simple in utterance, in demeanor, in aspect; no oratorical tones; no gesticulation; no sartorial elaboration. Talking to them was a weighty man in a short, dark coat, who as soon as he said what he had to say, hurried away.

The attorney general is solidly built; more of the farmer type from which he sprang than of the tenacious, acute, legalistic scholar type which he today represents. Viewing him as to head and shoulders you would give him the word massive; but below the chest he runs to bulk—rather too much bulk for 51 years.

A Quiet and Steady Man.

His large head is comfortably thatched; his face smooth shaven; his nose modified Roman; his chin powerful; his voice quiet and steady; his clothes worn more to cover him than to exhibit him.

When he talks to you he takes off his pince-nez and poises them on the thumb of his right hand, and while he talks he seems never to move. A practiced interviewer finds few things about a man more reassuring than that. Always doubt men of frequent or fluttering movement. They seldom are of much account.

This man, they say, has the strength of a horse. If he is vain or anything he is vain of that—of his capacity for steadfast application. Once in the talk he gave THE TRIBUNE he said about some fishing expedition, "It was the first day off I'd had since April."

His Infrequent Vacations.

That figured out as a period of nearly eight month, and I—not that I have any passion for exercise—said kindly, "But was that so wise for a studious man?" And he said, almost apologetically, "Well, when I do take a vacation I play as hard as I like. Besides I'm reasonable about food, and I take my setting up exercises. In New York I walked two times a day and I'll resume that here as soon as I get things in hand. In New York I would walk from Riverside drive part way downtown—not all the way to Wall street for that would leave no morning—and at night I would get off the train and walk part way home."

About fishing he beamed, but said that the interviewers had given him an undeserved reputation as a fisherman, "although," he added, "I love it." He loves it not alone for itself but because it is a companionable sport.

Sport Makes All Peers.

"To a place where I go," he continued, "come lawyers, millionaires, and—well, men who are not millionaires, but when they get there they're all alike—all fishermen."

That place is Eastport, on Long Island, and when he talked of it and of other fishing places it was the only time during the interview that he did not seem to be being unenthusiastically civil—dealing, I mean, with an incident through which new cabinet members are accustomed to go, and so—well, one should go through it good naturedly.

His constant tendency in conversation is to modify statements that have been made about him, or about matters in which he is concerned. He declined, for example, to validate the Damon and Pythias fable about himself and the President of the United States.

Not Chums at Amherst.

From the way he spoke you could see that Harlan Stone and Calvin Coolidge had not been very intimate at Amherst, and, as to later years, up to the time that Dean Stone was summoned to the White House breakfast where he was invited to become attorney general, he had not seen Calvin Coolidge since he was governor of Massachusetts—a matter of more than three years.

He seemed to think that any mutual Stone-Coolidge enthusiasms now existing dated way back to his father, for he said:

"My father was a vigorous, hard headed man who looked at realities. He was a man of numerous affairs, farming among them, and he would always go to Mr. Coolidge with his legal business. He felt genuine admiration for him from the first, and I think the President, in his way, admired my father."

A Story of Silent Cal.

When the attorney general said "in his way," it was no mere manner of speaking as appeared when he told the story of a morning in the Adams house, Boston, where he and his father were having breakfast together. It is a short story. Simply this: Mr. Coolidge enters the dining room. There are plenty of vacant places at the tables. But he comes out of his way to take the vacant place at the table where his friends, father and son Stone, are sitting. And throughout the meal he speaks not one word.

"If," said the attorney general, judicially, "he had not spoken to us and gone to another table I suppose one might have thought he was unfriendly. But the fact that, not speaking to us, he nevertheless sat with us was proof enough that he was friendly."

So you see that when a man who is speaking of the Calvin Coolidge whom he has known for five and thirty years says "in his way" it really means something.

Another of the attorney general's modifying utterances concerned the present state of the department of justice. He said the public has today "an exaggerated impression" of the deficiencies alleged to exist there.

"Many," said I, "seem to think that you came into a legacy of chaos."

"I did not," said he impatiently, "and such an impression is very unfair to faithful veterans of the department of justice. I do not believe in the issuing of numerous statements, but I may later make a statement on that point.

"It is true, however, that government offices tend to become formalized. In them, as elsewhere, but more especially in them, personal leadership is good. After all, we're all human, and we must take an interest in one another and in one another's work."

32 WOMEN FIGHT WITH HONDURANS TO SAVE CAPITAL

SAN SALVADOR, Republic of San Salvador, April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The government buildings at Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras, are reported to be on fire, in a dispatch reaching here from La Union. Thirty-two women are said to be fighting with the forces of the de facto government which is defending the capital from the revolutionary troops.

According to these advices, peace negotiations between the fighting factions of Honduras have been started on board the United States cruiser Milwaukee, anchored in the Bay of Amapala, with Sumner Welles acting as American mediator. It is expected that there will be some difficulty in arriving at an agreement because of the absence of emissaries to represent Gen. Gregorio Ferrera, who is leading one group of rebels in the attack on Tegucigalpa.

The leader of the other revolutionary faction is represented by three envoys, while the de facto government is also represented by three. There are representatives of the central American republics of Guatemala, Nicaragua, and Salvador, but they are said to be acting only as observers.

100,000 FAMILIES TO FLIT FROM FLAT TO FLAT ON MAY 1

More families than ever will change addresses this year when Chicago city dwellers do their annual May flitting. Based on figures from various sources, the estimated number of households which will place the bedstead and the radio set on wheels for a roll to another block will be about 100,000.

Estimates from the telephone, the gas, and the electric light companies—always barometers of the movements of families of a certain degree of affluence—show that there will be between 40,000 and 50,000 calls for disconnections. These figures are doubled by the experts to include dwellers who do not depend on any of the above companies for service.

There will be increases in rentals this year. It wouldn't be May 1 if there were not. But they will affect a different type of flat, according to the Chicago Real Estate board.

Big buildings containing small flats have been erected so fast, to keep pace with the demand for the one-two-three room cubicle, that there is in certain sections of the city an oversupply of the bandbox type of apartment, it was said.

It is in the larger flats of five, six, and seven rooms that the rents are going up this spring. Nobody has been building them lately.

TAX WARRANTS CRUX OF SCHOOL MONEY PROBLEM

Issue Between Board and City Council.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

To issue or not to issue tax anticipation warrants—that was the question coming to a focus yesterday. For several days it had been coming to a focus; the school board saying it cost a million dollars a year to do so and blaming the county treasurer; the city council rebuking the school trustees for extravagance; Mayor Dever and President Charles M. Moderwell of the board of education explaining and asking public confidence in the board. This was the situation yesterday—that is, it was part of it.

The other part offered several interesting details. It is fairly apparent that the question will not be settled for some time to come, but it is deemed worthy of a few minutes of the taxpayers' study. This, properly, should commence with the statement of Dr. John Dill Robertson, made early last week.

Why He Opposed It.

He, as a member of the board of education, refused to vote for the annual appropriation bill because, he charged, it contained an item of approximately $1,000,000 for interest. Trustee Robertson said $500,000 would be enough if the board obtained its taxes as fast as the county treasurer collected it.

While this charge was being studied, the council on Friday refused to pass a school tax levy ordinance. Ald. Charles S. Eaton declared the school appropriation was $5,000,000 in excess of the expected revenue. Added to the present deficit, Ald. Eaton stated, the school system would be $14,000,000 in debt unless curbed by the aldermen. A roll call found the vote 24 to 16 against the school financial program.

Statements Are Issued.

That was the status of the question yesterday when Mayor Dever and President Moderwell issued statements. The mayor said tax anticipation warrants were necessary and refused to comment on the charges that if the county treasurer were more prompt in his payments they would be unnecessary, or not necessary in such large amounts. He said the present school board found itself in financial hot water when it assumed control a year ago. He added that if he were a school trustee and the public did not want him to spend an amount necessary for additions and rehabilitations, he'd let them find somebody else for his job.

President Moderwell called attention to the great increase in school attendance and said his efforts to run the schools on a business basis evidently were not appreciated.

Mr. Moderwell's View.

"Perhaps I innocently overlooked one of the political aspects," he ruminated. "I suppose I should have sent an explanation to the council with the budget. In the first place, the budget is only in excess of our estimated revenue by $3,546,000, and not $8,000,000, as has been stated. We have $5,500,000 of the building fund still unexpended."

This brings the history to date and gives background to an exploration of the official records.

On the basis of an audit by Smart & Gore on the school board books it was charged that the board was compelled to borrow at 5 per cent while the county treasurer had some of its funds in banks drawing 3 per cent interest for the county. The amount paid by the school board in interest in 1923 was given as $978,529. Treasurer Robertson said $450,000 should be chopped off this year's appropriation of approximately $1,000,000 for interest on tax anticipation warrants.

What Inquiry Shows.

In seeking to learn if, as charged by Dr. Robertson, the interest cost was enormous because of the "apparently unwarranted retention, both by the county and city treasurers, of tax funds accruing to the board of education," it was learned that the school board was only one of 439 taxing bodies for whom County Treasurer Patrick J. Carr acts as collector.

Though being just one of the 439 accounts, the school board is one of the largest accounts on Treasurer Carr's books. In the aggregate of taxes as extended by County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer for 1922 it was shown that, if all were collected, the Chicago school board would derive $46,158,302 from the real estate and personal property taxes for Chicago alone, out of the $144,523,667 assessed in Cook county (back taxes and forfeitures not included).

Deduction Is Increased.

This Chicago school collection, being less than one-fourth of the entire amount collected yearly by Treasurer Carr, in the past has been subject to a deduction of 5 per cent allowed for loss and cost of collection. This deduction in the last year or two has been raised to 8½ per cent, without attempting to fix the reason therefor. It just happened. The $46,000,000 is, however, outside of the percentage of the state school tax which adds a few more millions to the Chicago board's revenue.

Refers to Old Board.

It was easily determined that Dr. Robertson's charges, and Smart & Gore's audit, pertained only to the old board, the one in power during the administration of Mayor Thompson. So an inspection of Mr. Carr's books being practically impossible, due to the enormity of the task, and with no direct statement by Mr. Moderwell to this effect, it is admitted that Treasurer Carr has acceded to every request for money made by the board since President Moderwell has been in charge.

Carr, being a Democrat and in entire accord with the Dever administration, is said to have given every financial aid asked of the Dever school board. Even Smart & Gore could only estimate what the old board should have received from month to month; none, so far as could be learned, is able to say positively that Carr is now in "apparently unwarranted retention of tax funds accruing to the board of education."

One Customary Policy.

As to the policy of borrowing on tax anticipation warrants, practically all public bodies follow the plan, including the city, the representatives of which now say that the school board shall not do as they do, or at least not as much as the city does. Borrowing on the anticipation warrants, it was explained, is necessary because the taxes levied, say, in 1923 are not collected until 1924, though needed for current expenses in 1923.

More figures on Treasurer Carr's financial relations with the school board, as well as with a few of the other 438 taxing bodies, and Mr. Carr's explanation of the reasons and difficulties of tax collecting, together with figures in interest, will be given in succeeding articles.

REDS AND BRITISH FRAME PACT ON PRIVATE DEBTS

Soviets Offer Concessions Equal to Claims.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 26.—Great progress has been made in the Anglo-Russian negotiations here, and it is now expected confidently that the London conference will be successful. The first big step has been to clear out of the way the Russian demand that state and private claims be handled as a unit.

The Russians accepted the British demand that they negotiate directly with private claimants, leaving state claims to be settled later by negotiations between the two governments. Meetings already have been held between representatives of British creditors and a committee of the Russian delegation, at which the Russians put forward an elaborate scheme for a settlement of debts.

The Russians propose that a company be formed, in which there will be two shareholders—an association of British creditors and the Russian government. The Russian government agrees to grant concessions equal to the full amount of claims, namely, £375,000,000 ($1,650,000,000), conditional on the creditors finding extra capital of £100,000 ($440,000), and the British government granting extra credits required under the trade facilities act.

Will Divide Profits.

Fifty per cent of the profits of the company will go direct to the British creditors, and 50 per cent will be held by the Russian government for a final settlement of debts, after which the concessions will revert to the Russian government and the company will be wound up.

The whole matter was fully discussed at a private conference of the creditors and the Russians and was favorably received by the creditors, although not yet finally accepted. The creditors want further assurances of the good faith of the soviet government in carrying out the proposal, but if assured on these points they are ready to accept.

It is stated that if this deal goes through the Russians will make efforts to conclude similar agreements with other foreign creditors. The great advantage of the deal is that the creditors get their money, while the soviet government does not compromise the abolition of private property and retains control of its own affairs within Russia.

Fear Radicals in Moscow.

The only stumbling block seen in the way of a successful outcome for the conference is the growing influence in Moscow of the extreme left party led by M. Zinoviev, president of the third international, and M. Stalin. The Russian delegates in London fear that these men mean to sabotage the meeting, and M. Rakovsky is much worried. It is even reported that some members of the London delegation may be recalled and replaced by men who are more trusted by the extreme communists.

German Reds Form Cheka; Fight Enemies with Germs

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 26.—Throughout Germany communists are operating under the Russian cheka system, spreading bolshevik terror among their enemies, especially those accused of betraying the cause. Not only are these communist cheka agents armed with two pistols, but they carry dysentery, typhus, and cholera germs, which they place in the food of their victims. They have had numerous victims in the last few months.

These sensational disclosures were made in Stuttgart today following a raid and the arrest of numerous communists and the confiscation of their effects. The reports were officially confirmed by the Berlin police, who declare the amount of cholera bacteria and other epidemic spreading germs which have arrived from the Russian cheka for use in Germany is enough to depopulate whole cities. A special detachment of Berlin police is hunting for the remainder of the supply.

Form "Terror Troops."

The German cheka is organized along the lines of the Russian cheka, some of the leaders being Russian chekaists. The cheka also operates an organization known as "terror troops." Each member carries pistols, which the American doughboys called luggers, which have an attachment holding from 30 to 100 bullets.

Among the ammunition which the Berlin police found were many dum dum bullets and gun silencers. The "terror troops" are organized to operate in riots or when a revolution breaks out.

Until such time as a revolution breaks out the German cheka is concentrating its efforts upon terrorizing its enemies. The victims are not notable anti-bolsheviks in political and industrial Germany, but small men in the trades unions, or former members of the communist party who have betrayed red secrets.

May Clear Strange Murders.

Frequently in the last year the police have reported the mysterious murder of certain persons, in which cheka agents were suspected of guilt but proof hitherto has not been established. Today the police announced a long list of prisoners, as well as names of supposed cheka leaders.

Numerous documents were found indicating Russian help. One bankbook shows that the Berlin cheka organization had $30,000. The weekly wages of the terrorists is $15 for single men and $27.50 for married men.

CALL TROTZKY A JUDAS

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 26.—Leon Trotzky is accused of selling out the faction of the communist party he represented in order to reestablish himself as head of the army. The accusation was made by the "workers' opposition" at the seventh convention of the railroad men's union in Moscow.

According to the workers' opposition, they intercepted telegrams which M. Trotzky sent during his vacation in the Caucasus to M. Stalin and M. Zinoviev, wherein he agreed to give up leading the opposition wing and patch up his quarrel with them, provided he regained his old standing.

A group of new members of the Moscow and Petrograd communist party has published a manifesto warning high officials to give up their high living. They demand that one wage be paid to every man and woman in Russia, thus preventing the higher officials from engaging in riotous living.

JURY TO DECIDE CITY'S PART IN EASTLAND CASE

Whether the city of Chicago, through negligence of its officials, was responsible for the tipping over of the Eastland in the Chicago river almost nine years ago is the question on which a jury in Judge John P. McGoorty's court deliberated yesterday afternoon.

The city is defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages, brought by Mrs. Elizabeth Bambas, 1504 West 60th court, Cicero, whose daughter, Emilie, was one of the 812 victims who died in the disaster.

At a late hour last night the jury returned a sealed verdict, which will be read in court tomorrow. It was rumored about the courtroom that the jury found the city not guilty.

Will Set Precedent.

The verdict is expected to set a precedent in suits against the city aggregating nearly $10,000,000, filed by relatives of the victims. Some of the suits also were filed by survivors, who present claims for shock and injury.

In his argument to the jury Attorney Charles Spencer, who represents most of the victims, declared the city had failed in its duty to keep the river bed free from rocks, piles, and other obstacles, and asserted these were responsible for the overturning of the vessel.

City Denies Charge.

City Attorney John J. Kelly, who produced evidence of naval experts to show that the boat was not seaworthy, was a "coffin" from the time it was built, and top heavy, declared that the river bed had nothing to do with the Eastland's heavy list.

Two of the suits already have been heard, but none was given to a jury to decide. Originally the boat owners were co-defendants with the city, but with the trial of the first cases all but the city were dismissed. In the first two suits the courts refused to permit them to go to the jury on the ground the plaintiffs had failed to make out a case.

YOUR WOMEN ARE PRETTIEST, BRITON SAYS

New York, April 26.—The beauty of American women made a deeper impression than anything else in this country on Lord Rothermere, owner of the London Daily Mail and other British newspapers, who sailed for England on the Majestic today.

"I never saw prettier women than in New York," he said.

"Even prettier than in Paris?" he was asked.

"O, yes—much prettier."

"And what of England?"

"For the moment I might even say of England."

BRITAIN'S FROWN KEEPS OUR NAVY RANGE INFERIOR

Plan to Modernize Ships Is Protested, Too.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—As a result of the attitude assumed by the British government, our navy department has definitely abandoned its plan to elevate the big guns on American battleships so as to obtain a range equal to that of British battleship guns.

The British denied they had elevated or contemplated elevating their big guns, and pronounced such elevations a violation of the navy armament limitation treaty of the Washington conference. They maintained their greater gun range had been attained in original construction.

Partly on the basis of statements that the British had elevated their guns, and obtained thereby a longer range, the American navy department had obtained an appropriation of $6,600,000 for gun elevation. When the British denial and objection was registered the gun elevation plan was suspended, and the appropriation recently was repealed. The British navy will continue to outrange ours.

Rum Chasers Get $6,500,000.

With a touch of poetic irony, congress thereupon diverted this $6,500,000 to the equipment of speedy vessels for the prohibition navy, which is employed in chasing rum runners, chiefly of British nationality, along our coasts.

The administration now proposes another modernization plan, with a view to bringing the American navy more closely to the equality with the British navy assumed in the Washington treaty. This plan is to convert six coal burning battleships into oil burners.

As soon as this plan was broached in Washington the British interposed an objection informally by means of an interpellation in the house of commons. In reply to the question, Premier MacDonald stated his majesty's government is of the opinion that the naval treaty does not permit conversion of capital ships from coal to oil burners, or any increase in the elevation and consequently the range of fire of the main batteries of such vessels.

House Board Ignores Protest.

Undeterred by this objection from overseas, the house committee on naval affairs, following extensive hearings, favorably reported a bill authorizing the expenditure of $18,260,000 for modernizing these vessels, including the change from coal to oil burners.

Chairman Butler takes pains to point out that the naval committee, in the program of building and alterations proposed, is not running counter to the treaty limiting naval armaments.

Secretary of State Hughes declined to appear before the house committee, even in executive session, for the purpose of discussing the attitude of the British government toward the conversion to oil burners. He did, however, indicate an entire willingness to go over the matter with Secretary of Navy Wilbur and outline the attitude of the American government.

Secretary Wilbur appeared before the committee a second time and a favorable report was ordered immediately. This action was construed as indicating clearly that Secretaries Hughes and Wilbur concluded that the treaty contains no bar to increasing the efficiency of the older American battleships by substituting oil for coal burners despite the contrary view held by the Labor prime minister of Great Britain.

The bill authorizes the installation of additional deck, torpedo, and mine protection, as well as the conversion to oil burners. The vessels are the New York, Texas, Florida, Utah, Arkansas, and Wyoming. The condition of the boilers of the four last named is such that the navy department ordered them withdrawn from the line during the recent fleet maneuvers in the Caribbean sea because it was not considered safe to permit them to steam at a higher rate of speed than twelve knots an hour. At this speed they could not maintain their positions in the line. The New York and Texas are the newest of the coal burners and have 14 inch guns. Their boilers are in much better condition.

Advantages of Oil Burners.

Coal burning battleships are no longer satisfactory units of the American fleet. Conversion to oil burners will increase the effective steaming radius considerably and place the vessels so converted on a parity with other ships of the battle fleet in this respect.

The navy contemplates installing in these ships boilers taken from battleships sent to the scrap heap under the Washington treaty—that is, unless the British should protest. The saving would be $350,000 per ship, exclusive of installation.

The modernization plan also includes strengthening the deck armor against air attack and applying "blisters" to the side armor as protection against torpedo and mine attacks. In this connection the effect of gun elevation and range extension may be obtained.

Eight New Light Cruisers.

The house bill also proposes construction of eight 10,000 ton light cruisers at a cost of $11,000,000 each. The committee report points out that the United States stands far below Great Britain and Japan in cruiser tonnage less than twelve years old, including vessels built, building and projected.

Great Britain has fifty-five modern cruisers with a total tonnage of 298,370; Japan, twenty-eight cruisers with a total tonnage of 170,980; the United States, ten cruisers with a total tonnage of 75,000. The authorization recommended in Mr. Butler's report would give the United States a cruiser tonnage of 155,000.

Hundreds of ex-service men and their friends are expected to attend on next Friday and Saturday evenings performances at the Auditorium theater of a musical comedy, "A Perfect 48," most of the cast of which is composed of jackies from the Great Lakes training station. The production is under the auspices of the Women's Overseas league, and a portion of the receipts are to go for furnishings of the Hostess house at Great Lakes. On Friday night members of an American Legion club known as the "Forty and Eight" will attend en masse under the leadership of Frank Kee.

ONE POLICEMAN SHOT IN FIGHT WITH BEER AUTO

One policeman was slightly wounded and the lives of four others were endangered late yesterday afternoon when the policemen engaged in a running revolver battle with a supposed beer runner on the west side. About twenty-five shots were exchanged, but the suspected beer runner escaped uninjured.

A confederate and a truck containing a half barrel of supposedly pre-Volstead beer were seized, however.

The wounded patrolman is Albert Brown. He was struck in the right hand by a bullet. The other policemen in the battle were Lieut. John J. Ryan and Sergts. Andrew Aitken, Thomas Alcock, and Martin Murphy of the detective bureau.

The policemen were riding west in 14th street when near South Ashland avenue they sighted the automobile truck containing the beer and gave chase. At 21st and May streets the truck was stopped and one of its occupants opened fire.

His companion was captured as he escaped.

U. S. NAVY DROPS BEHIND BRITISH AND JAPANESE

5-5-3 Ratio Now 3-3-1, with U. S. at 1.

erations. Without such bases they cannot operate in war. How do we compare there? Well, England has nineteen bases, Japan has many, some of them secret, and we have none. On our Atlantic coast the British bases are Halifax, Bermuda, and Jamaica. Each of these has supplies and a garrison. In the Pacific the known Japanese bases are Sasebo, Ominato, Yokosuka, Kure, and Bako. The first four are to be enlarged and strengthened for quick maneuvers. The base at Bako is a few hundred miles from the Philippines. The American port at Manila is useless and undefended. Bako is defended, Manila is not.

Not a Naval Base.

"The United States has navy yards, but not naval bases. The navy has been anxious to have a naval base established at Alameda, Cal. It has been turned down in favor of Mare island. But Mare island is a shipyard, seventy years old and twenty miles inland.

"Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, is the Gibraltar of the Pacific, but what do we find? Remember, it protects the Pacific coast, the Panama canal, the Philippines, and all our Pacific possessions. Yet all that we have there are a few submarines and none of them are fleet submarines.

"Pearl Harbor is in course of construction. The entrance is by a buoyed channel. Passing through the channel the radio station and naval quarters are on the right. The submarine base on the left. The only completed thing there is the Japanese fishing village of Aiea, which lies beyond the wireless station and the submarine base.

"And each morning these Japanese fishermen sail past these points of operation and through the buoyed channel. They see all that is going on and know the chart by heart, as well.

"Only the other day Secretary Wilbur, in a letter to Senator Hale, chairman of the naval affairs committee, said that 4,160,000 barrels of oil are already stored at the present time. Secretary Wilbur, it appeared later, confused proposed tank capacity with actual oil in storage.

The truth of the matter is that all the oil the navy has on reserve at the present time is 1,500,000 barrels and all of it is at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. There is no oil reserve stored on the Atlantic coast. There is none stored on the Pacific coast. All we have is 2,100 miles away in Hawaii, where it could be taken overnight by Japan.

"Last year England spent 9,812,410 pounds sterling for oil and bought 7,000,000 barrels which she stored. She used oil to the value of 3,141,990 pounds sterling as a further current supply. That means that the British fleet has an oil reserve sufficient for three years.

British Control Oil.

"Not only do the British control the world's oil, but they have vast holdings in this country. They control 241,000,000 acres of oil lands, 2,114 producing wells, having a capacity of 76,200 barrels a day, 752 miles of pipe lines, five refineries, 120 stations, and three steamship lines.

"Now turn to the Japanese, for this matter of fuel reserve is important in gauging the relative merits of the three navies. Japan buys most of her oil from the Shell company in the Dutch East Indies. She transports it in Japanese tankers, so it is impossible to estimate precisely just what quantities are being stored.

"The British and Japanese governments support British and Japanese oil companies. We only interfere with ours. At Portsmouth, N. H., the Mammoth Oil company is trying to complete tanks and store 300,000 barrels of oil, but there is government interference.

Interference in Hawaii.

"It is the same thing at Pearl Harbor, where the navy's oil tanks are being built. All we have in reserve is 1,500,000 barrels, which is 80 per cent less than the British, and probably 60 per cent less than the Japanese when the Tokio supply is replenished.

"Outgunned, outnumbered, part of the fleet in a deplorable condition, with no naval bases, and our only fuel reserve 2,100 miles distant, we have lost our position in the five-five-three treaty.

"To establish our ratio, or rather to reestablish it, we need 4,712 officers and 11,175 men, a reserve of 256 officers, and 18,179 men. Japan needs none.

"Such a situation is almost treason to our security."

MAN OF MANY A MATRIMONY BOUT 'SHINES AS HERO

Benjamin Karpen of 5943 Calumet avenue, whose matrimonial troubles have led him into court on numerous occasions, won the compliments of the police last night by marching a colored captive into the Wabash avenue station.

The captive, John Smith of 329 Maxwell street, stabbed Benjamin Goldstein, 5406 Prairie avenue, in a poolroom argument at 329 East 51st street. While Smith was trying to knife Goldstein a second time Karpen seized him and disarmed him.

"This is one time I mixed in some trouble on somebody else's account," the nephew of the founder of S. Karpen and Brothers' Furniture company, announced as he led his prisoner into the station.

Stillman Makes Another Fight on Name of Baby

New York, April 26.—[Special.]—Although legal authorities believed a period was put to the protracted Stillman divorce litigation when, on last March 14, the decision of the Appellate division of the New York Supreme court in favor of Mrs. Anne U. Stillman was announced, James A. Stillman, former National City bank president, is still fighting the legitimatization of Baby Guy Stillman. Notice of appeal to the Court of Appeals from the Appellate division decision sustaining Referee Gleason's report on legitimacy has been served on Mrs. Stillman's attorney, John F. Brennan of Yonkers, it was learned today.

Boys, Crying for Help, Startle Theater Audience

Two youths caused excitement last night in the State theater, 110th street and Michigan avenue, when they fell into a ventilating shaft while wandering about the roof of the theater. Unable to get out, their shrill shouts for help startled the audience. Grappling hooks were used to pull out the adventurers. They were taken to the Juvenile Detention home, where they gave their names as Frank Narkowski, 12021 Union avenue, and Frank Cush, living in the immediate vicinity of 115th street and Wabash avenue, both 16 years old.

Opposition to the Lincoln park improvement plan, which proposes widening Lake Shore drive to more than double its present width between Oak street and the park entrance, has been cleared away, according to announcement made yesterday by committees in charge of the promotional work.

Harry Branstetter of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, who is chairman of the committee representing automobile interests, and Si Mayer, secretary of the Chicago police department, who has had charge of the property owners' petition, both declared that all of the "Gold Coast" property owners have consented to the plan for a single 100-foot roadway. Park commissioners, they added, have ordered plans drawn for the work, and the $500,000 paving job should be under way in May.

Mrs. Charles Munroe, wife of the north shore attorney who represents the property owners and who was out of the city yesterday, confirmed the report.

Objected to Double Drive.

"Property owners were opposed to the plan for a double drive with a parkway between them," she said, "but I understand that most of them at least have consented to the single wide drive, which will relieve the traffic congestion. We feel that the improvement is needed, and I understand that the majority of owners are in favor of the single drive proposal."

In breaking the north side "bottle neck," the park commissioners also plan to add 7 feet to Lincoln parkway right-of-way from Oak street south to Chicago avenue. This will cut away the sidewalk on the east side of the old water tower at North Michigan and Chicago avenues, and divert pedestrian traffic to the west of the landmark on a line with the west sidewalk south of the Chicago avenue intersection.

The improvement will in no way change property rights along its line, say committee heads, nor will it alter the public's rights to the Oak street bathing beach.

Plan More Improvements.

Along other proposals, it is advocating additional pavement width in Michigan avenue between Randolph street on the north and Roosevelt road to the south. This plan would cut 7 feet from the east curb line all the way south and utilize this space for pavement right of way, thus providing for one additional line of traffic in the most congested stretch of the Chicago boulevard system.

Another plan would add at least 7 feet to the pavement in Sheridan road from Grace street, where the road bends to the west, to Bryn Mawr avenue on the north.

CHILDREN CHEER FIGHTING YANKS

This is the way Sally Joy Brown's party of young people looked when they cheered the achievements of the A. E. F. as depicted in the war department movie "Powder River," which 750 children saw yesterday morning. The film was shown under the auspices of the 108th Engineers post, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

SALLY'S 'POWDER RIVER' GANG HAS NO PINKISH 38'S

Two Win Radios; 750 Cheer.

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

There they go—they've won!

My 750 guests at "Powder River" just couldn't help letting out a cheer when the climax came. They had been watching one of the tense moments in the Argonne battle, when hidden machine guns had driven the American doughboys to cover.

Then came the hand grenades, cautiously working forward, a withering, shattering bombardment from the American artillery. And lastly the final rush which made the position ours! What red blooded young American could help cheering when that happened?

None of "38" in That Gang.

And red blooded they were—and splendid citizens, too, every one of them. Bright and early they appeared at the Monroe theater ready for the big treat—750 of them. The theater officials and Albert Dezel on behalf of the 108th Engineers' post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, were ready with a royal welcome—flags, candy, everything.

It took no time at all to have every boy in his place, all "set to go," and we "went," you may be sure, through the entire war from a U-boat at work to Yanks on the Rhine.

First came the awarding of the two grand prizes—the Zenith receiving set and Sunshine batteries to go with them. First prize, $165 Zenith set, like the one being used by Capt. Donald B. McMillan in the Arctic, went to Frank Sayre, 4810 Calumet avenue. Second prize, an $85 Zenith set, was awarded to Hampton Brissey, 14721 Lexington avenue, Harvey, Ill.

The Question and U. S. Reply.

Then came the picture, opening with excerpts from Germany's own war picture of submarine sinkings. Next came the beginning of America's answer—soldiers by the thousands filing quietly aboard huge transports at the New York docks.

We saw the Leviathan swing proudly into midstream with 10,000 of America's best. Then came the somber, anxious days at sea—grim readiness of mighty battleships, hawklike alertness of destroyers, a lurking submarine put to instant flight.

Then the landing at Brest—the approach to the front—and then the fighting!

Yankees at Work—at Ease.

Four great battles—Cantigny, Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, and the Meuse-Argonne—unrolled their tragedy and their heroism. And finally, victory and its symbol—triumphant entry into Coblenz and the "Yankee Watch on the Rhine."

Thus the party came to its end. But I couldn't help feeling, as I saw my 750 guests file out, how little we need fear for the future of America. They are the citizens of tomorrow—and in their hands American greatness will be safe.

THREE KIDNAPERS CAPTURED AFTER STEALING GIRL

Three young men were captured by the police yesterday after they had kidnaped a pretty, blonde haired young girl from her escort, carried her to a lonely shack on the west side, and there tried to attack her. At the detective bureau they gave the names of Frank McKnight, 25, 2138 West 22d street; Anton Bagdon, 24, 2326 West 22d street; and Irving Koretz, 22, 2411 South Western avenue. McKnight was charged with the attempted attack by the girl.

The kidnaping occurred at California avenue and 22d street, when the girl, Miss Constance Sorenson, 21, and her fiancé, Frank Ewert, were returning to her home at 2155 West 22d street. Knocking Ewert down, the trio pushed the struggling girl into a "Red" cab and sped west in Cicero avenue. They girl said they carried her to a shack on a far west side prairie and there tried to harm her, but failed.

Ewert notified the police. The cab was sighted some time later and was halted after several shots had been fired at it. Inside the girl and McKnight were found, the former in a disheveled condition.

TWO MEN, WOMAN DIE, VICTIMS OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

Three more victims—two men and a woman—yesterday were added to the list of automobile dead. The motor death toll in Cook county since Jan. 1 now totals 166.

WALTER H. GANSCHOW. [Killed in auto accident on Friday.]

Injuries received by Ernest Suessmann, 84 years old, 1476 Farragut street, on Wednesday, when he was struck at Monroe and Clark streets by a United States mail truck, caused his death in the county hospital. The driver, James W. Taylor, 4453 South Wabash avenue, was released, but will be rearrested, according to the police.

Miss Dorothy McQuinn, 34 years old, 4741 Sheridan road, died in the Swedish Covenant hospital. The automobile she was driving crashed into a ditch on Irving Park boulevard near Leyden several days ago.

Jerry Donahue, 60 years old, 733 South State street, died as the result of injuries received when he was crushed between a truck and a street car on Randolph street between Clark and La Salle streets.

A large bulldog belonging to Theodore Nashke, 62 years old, 742 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, was instrumental in Nashke's being struck and perhaps fatally injured by an automobile last night.

Nashke was leading the dog by a chain and started across Austin boulevard at West Division street. The dog suddenly broke ahead and dragged its owner in front of an approaching automobile, which hurled him to the pavement. The dog escaped injury.

Nebraskan Murdered and Body Cast Into Canal

Birger Johnson, whose body was taken Friday from the drainage canal at Lemont, was identified yesterday as a man who came from York, Neb., three weeks ago with a gold watch and several hundred dollars.

HANDS OF DEATH

The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1 last.

AHLSTROM TO RESIGN, REPORT; PLAN INQUIRY

Waukegan, Ill., April 26.—[Special.]—Reports were circulated in Waukegan today that Sheriff Edwin Ahlstrom is planning to resign, following appointment of a jail committee by Fred Kirchner, chairman of the board of supervisors, to investigate Ahlstrom's conduct during his term in office.

Chairman Kirschner appointed Supervisors Murphy, Nader and Burke to make the investigation.

Among the cases to be investigated is that which caused Ahlstrom to be cited into Judge Cliff's court on the accusations of women. The hearing was set for the first week in May.

Majorie Moberly and Margaret Dorland, young girls of Des Moines, Ia., accuse Sheriff Ahlstrom of escorting them on a booze party, while they were in the Lake county jail as federal prisoners.

The committee will also carefully investigate complaints from Lake Villa regarding the alleged laxity of the sheriff.

HE HAD HIS FORTUNE TOLD.

Elmer Brown, proprietor of a paint store at 3622 North Crawford avenue, had his fortune told yesterday by gypsies and while they predicted "prosperity, peace, happiness and luck" for Mr. Brown, according to his charge, they also stole his money.

The Outstanding Reason for MASON & HAMLIN
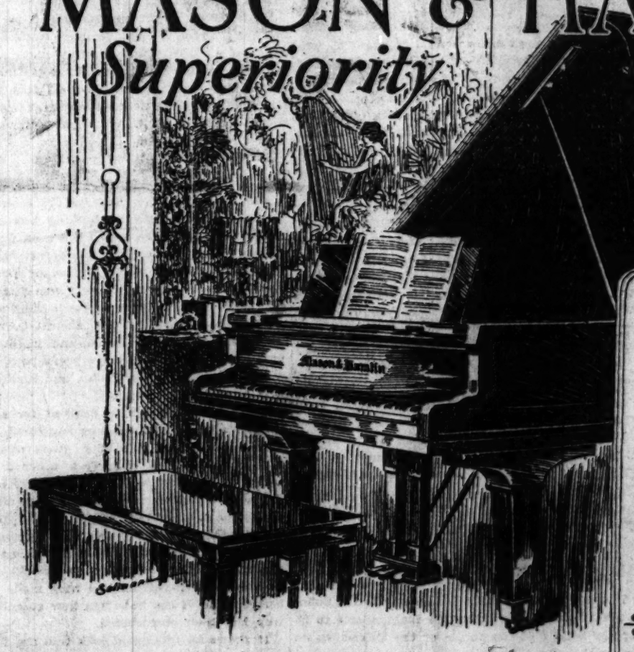
Superiority



THE superiority of Mason & Hamlin tone, and the remarkable permanency of that tone, are due in a large measure to the Mason & Hamlin method of construction.
This construction embodies the Mason & Hamlin Tension Resonator—a patented and exclusive feature, reputed to be the greatest discovery in piano construction during the last sixty years.
Through this simple yet all-important device, the original tension of the sounding board is made permanent—there is no loss in tone quality through the flattening of the crowned surface.
In time, ordinary pianos lose their brilliance and beauty. Not so with the Mason & Hamlin. Years from now, your Mason & Hamlin Piano will possess the rich, pure, sympathetic tone qualities it has today.
Obviously, the Mason & Hamlin costs more to build than ordinary pianos—that is why it is higher in price than any other. But those who are familiar with its exquisite beauty declare that its worth far exceeds its price.

WHY IS A PACIFIST?

The vote of seventy-nine members of the Methodist Student conference that all wars, which must include defensive wars, are wrong and that they will not participate in or sanction any warfare can hardly fail to renew interest in and discussion of the general subject of pacifism in this country. When seventy-nine young people, who owe virtually all they have, or are to this country and to this government, take such a stand it is interesting, though not especially alarming. If seventy-nine world weary old people, or even seventy-nine young women, were to agree upon such a resolution it could be more easily understood. But in this case the pacifists include many young men from whom, normally, we should expect something different.

Looking about for reasons, we may analyze the characteristics of the majority of pacifists, whether young or old, male or female. In general these persons who declare even against war in defense of home, family, and country are quietists on most phases of modern life. Most of them, we believe, are prohibitionists. They oppose excitement, and adventure, and danger. They oppose it even if it is the private, personal, and transitory excitement, and adventure, and danger superinduced by alcohol, or by the necessity of individual decision as to whether to drink or not to drink. They prefer that the adventure and the decision alike shall be permanently eliminated by law. That is a typical characteristic of the quietist.

The same persons, with few exceptions, we observe, are opposed to the recently enacted Japanese exclusion bills. Many of them have petitioned the President to veto the measure. They are eager to sacrifice the principle of United States sovereignty in order to placate the Japanese upon what is a purely fanciful insult. That again is quietism.

This resentment of all possible disturbances they carry to a logical conclusion in agreement to oppose all wars, to refuse to fight for their country in any peril, and to refuse even to roll a bandage or drive a truck. Probably such persons would not fight very well anyway, or even roll bandages very well. Probably they would not even do very well taking care of the ill and senile or infantile in an internment camp, but they might be impressed for that purpose.

The point is that they desire peace at any price, and in peace they imagine only sunshine and flowers, prosperity, stability, good will, and contentment. They see in it no possibility of enslavement, demoralization, degeneration, and misery, although without question such conditions have been imposed upon conquered peoples throughout the ages. It is not extraordinary that some old people and some women could think and act in that way. It is extraordinary that young men could do so. The conclusion must be that such young men have predominant within them the characteristics of decay, or of feminism, or of both.

In such circumstances true Americans will take comfort in looking about them and observing that the vast majority of their friends, acquaintances, or the men whom they pass upon the street or who drive their cabs and their street cars, have no such characteristics. They have life, and life is not pacific.

LET'S GET THE MOST OUT OF MUSCLE SHOALS.

Chairman Norris of the senate committee on agriculture, is opposing an immediate vote on the Muscle Shoals question in the senate, on the ground that there are some half dozen bids which should be considered by the senate before any one is reported out. That is fair. No one but the most rabid partisan can object to it. The country needs and wants the best deal it can get on Muscle Shoals. It has spent approximately $100,000,000 on this improvement, and must spend more, and the greatest possible returns from that money should be obtained.

To that end, every offer which has been made for Muscle Shoals must be considered on its merits, with reference to the greatest good for the greatest number of Americans. Up to the present the subject has been considered almost wholly in relation to the advantages it may bring to the farmer. Such considerations have united the farmers in favor of one bid which pledges the production of approximately 40,000 tons of nitrate fertilizer per year on a basis of cost plus 8 per cent.

It is natural and proper that the farmers should want the fertilizer. It is also natural and proper, we should think, that they would want the most fertilizer possible at the least cost. If they do, they should consider the offer of the southern power companies set forth in the Hull bill. That provides for the manufacture of 50,000 tons of nitrogen fertilizer a year, for sale at 8 per cent above cost; and agreement is made to expend $1,000,000 for research work to keep down the cost of manufacture. Every one of the numerous offers contains some such provision. The farmer is not to be ignored or neglected, regardless of which bill is adopted or who eventually gets the plants.

That ought to be a point of interest to the farmers and ought to win their approval of Senator Norris' insistence upon studying all the offers before submitting any to the vote of the senate.

Another point of interest to industrialists is that of the power involved. Regardless of who gets the property, only one-eighth of the power, at most, is to be used for manufacture of nitrates. The other seven-eighths is to be used for turning industrial machinery, etc. If a single man gets it and controls it, he will have the greatest power trust in the world. If a group gets it for sale throughout a dozen states, it will contribute to the industry and prosperity of every one in those states. Senator Norris is working to give the public and the senate full information on those points. He must be commended, and should be supported in that task.

CITIZENS ON WHEELS.

It is estimated that $48,750,000 will be spent in Chicago this year for automobiles and that 65,000 of them will be added to the rolling stock of the city. If the buyers do not have to hock the works to get the cars it will be good business and good pleasure. If the 65,000 buyers keep sober and drive carefully we may not hurry the death clock hands. If they are careless the citizenry on foot will be bumped off more rapidly. About that we cannot tell.

What can the city do with 65,000 more automobiles? Where are they to go and where are they to stand when they are not going? Every year makes the street car system worse and the more it fails the more the automobile is relied upon.

Mr. Dever is asking Mr. Insull, Mr. Blair, and other persons of importance in traction whether they will sell their lines at a fair price and take Mr. Schwartz's certificates in payment. If they say yes Mr. Dever will be gratified, but no one will be traveling any faster in the cars. Consequently there will be the trend to the automobile. If a citizen could enter a subway coach and be hurried where he wants to go he would leave the automobile in the garage for country excursions. He would not be bothered with it downtown.

Subways would be the line of least resistance. People always will find that. The parking dilemma is increasing. The south park board increases it by asking 25 cents for parking space. That is not much, but it will be resented. Undoubtedly it is bad transportation to have each individual citizen traveling on his own wheels and by his own motive power, seeking a terminal for himself and being engaged individually in the transportation business, but what is he to do if the city will not provide a traction system he can use?

Evidently he must roll his own and he will. He will do it until the accumulating force of error stops his clock in that direction. We have not yet lost the fear that the faults of a present day American community will present a bill that cannot be paid.

MAKING AMERICAN MANHOOD.

In making vacation plans, live young Americans between the ages of 17 and 24 ought to consider the opportunities offered by the Citizens' Military Training camps. We will guaranty any red blooded, clear headed young man an experience he will value the rest of his life. There is good sport in the open, interesting thoughts, inspiring association, a vacation that will last, an investment in health, in self-respect, in pleasant and inspiring memory.

The government describing its object in maintaining these camps says it is: "to bring together young men of all types, both foreign and native born, to develop closer national and social unity; to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship; to show the public by example that camp instruction of the kind contemplated will be to the liking of their sons and that it will develop them physically, mentally, and morally, and will teach Americanism in its true sense."

In schools and colleges and out of them, pacifism is working to undermine the manly fiber of American citizenship. The training camps are an offset. They are schools of manly character and of loyalty to the ideals of the republic. Any one in Illinois, Michigan, or Wisconsin who is interested can get all the information by writing the Citizens' Military Training Camp Officer, 1819 West Pershing road. Early application is advisable.

POOR SOP TO THE FARMER.

Passing an immigration bill similar to the Johnson bill, and one which, in the main, seems to be for the benefit of the people of the United States rather than for the people of various foreign countries, the senate still could not refrain from throwing the customary sop to the farmers.

The senate's sop in the immigration bill is in the form of an amendment offered by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, and adopted by a vote of 46 to 20. It provides for giving preference to experienced farmers and farm workers in making selection of immigrants to be admitted under the new bill.

Such an idea could be based only upon the assumption that the farms need more workers, or are likely soon to need them. Any student of economics knows, or should know, that that is not the case. It is proved daily by the low prices of farm products and high prices of industrial products, of which most of the farmers are complaining. The low price of farm products is due to large supply and small demand. The high price of industrial products is due to comparatively small supply and large demand. The only logical way to adjust this difference is to produce fewer farm products and more industrial products.

Yet this amendment, by indicating that the farmers want more labor, indicates that they want to increase production. It seems to be forgotten that Ford, McCormick, Deering, and others who have provided labor saving machinery for farms have in effect tremendously increased the supply of cheap labor. Tractors, gang plows, harvesting machines, manure spreaders, flivvers, and good roads have created a condition where a single farmer can raise and market more food today than a farmer with half a dozen "hired men" could do half a century ago.

More farm labor, then, is not the need of the farmer. What he needs is better markets, which will not be provided by raising more produce which the country doesn't need. The better markets can be stimulated by increasing industrial production through a movement from the farms to the factories. That should mean lower prices for what the farmer buys and greater demand, with larger prices, for what he sells.

It is no argument in favor of city life against rural life for the individual. The individual should choose according to his tastes and necessities, in so far as possible. But it is an argument in defence of the movement from farm to city which many of our people are decrying. Also it emphasizes the folly of such plays to the farmer as is Senator Simmons' amendment. It is no friendship to the farmer to throw such a sop to him. It is friendship to tell him the truth, regardless of politics, that he may rebuild his prosperity upon a firm economic foundation.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Chauncey Depew is 90 and happy. He says he has laughed a great deal in his life and has made other people laugh. A laughing person is not worrying. In post-maturity worry is a disease. Sometimes it cannot be avoided. It is easy to tell a business man that he should not carry his affairs home and have them at his dinner and with him at bedtime, but if he looks at his family and thinks of insolvency it is a bit difficult not to be worried by the prospect.

Mr. Depew may have been spared worry as to his bank balance. Life can be adjusted in many cases to avoid that misadventure. Even then something remains to be done, and it is the real achievement of Mr. Depew to have done it.

When you start down the western slope you begin to lose things, friends, interests, importance, causation. There is a disturbing clarity of vision. There are midges out now when the sun is warm. There is the last view of Orion on a clear night, going early down the western horizon. In post-maturity a person sees a good deal of himself in the midge and a great deal of his lack of validity in Orion. It strains the egotism to stand this vision. A successful egotism at 90 is an achievement.

We meet the trial of Job better than the trial of David. The former had boils and the latter cold feet.

SHIFTING LAKE LEVELS.

The New York Times, which has taken an interest, strangely intense for one so distant, in Chicago's "robbery" of Canadian and American lake cities through its withdrawals of water from Lake Michigan, prints a letter containing some interesting information on the subject. We recommend the letter to the editors of the Times and to the editors of various American cities who have been shocked by Chicago's efforts to maintain its sanitation.

It indicates that, perhaps, lake levels are not being lowered so greatly after all by this diversion of water. Observations started twenty-five years ago at Point au Baril on Georgian bay assumed the existing lake level as normal. From that point the level dropped fifteen inches in ten years. The Canadian government became much alarmed, as it is now again becoming alarmed, and instituted an investigation. Then, as now, the blame was put upon the Chicago drainage canal.

Yet that report had hardly been issued when the lakes began to rise, and, despite the drainage canal, had reached the original level in seven years. It remained virtually at that level for four years, while the drainage canal continued in business as usual, and then again began to fall, until it is now about sixteen inches below the figure of twenty-five years ago, or one inch below that of fifteen years ago.

That record of fluctuation ought to make it obvious that the Chicago drainage canal is an incident, not a cause, of lake level fluctuation. If that is the case, what's all the shooting at Chicago for? And in any case, why should the Times be het up about it? The tide fluctuates several feet twice a day around New York. We might petition the war department to stop it.

WISE CITY PLANNING.

Announcement of a plan for the eventual construction of six miles of bathing beaches along Chicago's north shore, which has been worked out by engineers and architects and presented to a council committee, marks important progress in city improvement. It reveals vision and imagination turned to practical purposes. Such revelation should mean great things in the city's future. If there had been such vision and imagination so practically applied twenty years ago, Chicago would be a greater city today, and further on the way to still greater things.

There is no immediate demand for all of the six miles of bathing beaches suggested. Neither was there necessity twenty years ago for the Michigan boulevard link, or a widened La Salle street, or an improved South Water street. But the need will grow with the city, and as a result of the comprehensive program now suggested can be supplied with a minimum of cost and effort. Just so some of the street improvements now so urgently needed could be constructed easily and cheaply if preparations had been made for them before some of the buildings now standing in the way had been constructed.

It shows an intelligent look into the future. It may properly be applied to many other phases of city development, as, indeed, it has been to some extent through the work of the Chicago Plan commission.

The proposed shore line improvements are of special interest because they promise to supply and expand one of the features of Chicago life which make this city unique. We know of no city in the world where a summer's afternoon drive reveals more color, gaiety, healthful recreation, and such advantages than are revealed on a casual trip along the shore from Oak street, through Lincoln park. Bathers, tennis players, golfers, baseball squads, and picnickers make a picture which is amazing to visitors from other cities. It forms an invaluable asset to the healthful life of the city, and an unequaled advertisement of Chicago's advantages.

The Other Side

THE TRIBUNE'S POLICIES.

[La Grange Citizen.]

It must have been hard work for THE TRIBUNE to announce the renomination of Gov. Small Wednesday morning. It had gone the limit in trying to prevent the governor's renomination.

THE TRIBUNE is in many ways a very wonderful newspaper. Its news service covers the world and its features are not equaled by any other mid-western paper, but its political influence is insignificant.

For years THE TRIBUNE fought Lorimer but never defeated him; for years it fought Thompson but did not get anywhere. It has been a persistent antagonist of Gov. Small, not hesitating to misrepresent him and his official acts but failed to swing the state or even Cook county to Lessington.

The reason of THE TRIBUNE'S inconsiderable influence is because it is neither sincere nor fair in its politics. It goes so far in its attacks that the reaction helps the one attacked. People respect partisanship even when it is intense, if it is honest and fair; but misrepresentation of facts and unfair tactics defeat their own cause.

The people who admire THE TRIBUNE for its many good qualities have been hoping for years that it would see the light and adopt an honest editorial policy.

Office seekers look upon TRIBUNE support as a handicap; Lorimer, Thompson and Small have profited by its opposition. One wonders how long it will take the men who guide the paper's destiny to see the light.

GOATS' MILK AND FEVER.

FOR many years British army officers stationed on the Island of Malta noticed that their families were subject to a kind of fever, the like of which they knew nothing of. The fever came to be known as "Malta fever." Research showed this fever to be due to a bacillus which was found in goat's milk. It was established that drinking goat's milk was responsible for infection with Malta fever.

The American people are accustomed to drinking cow's milk and know nothing of goat's milk. In recent years a considerable part of our immigration has come from races and nations who are accustomed to milch goats and goat's milk. In addition, our great industrial centers have become too crowded for cows and the milk supply is shipped in to them from considerable distance.

It has been suggested that we encourage these new people of ours, accustomed to goats, their ways and their milk, to take up the production of goat's milk in order to supplement the insufficient supply of cow's milk. To this some people objected that to do so would bring Malta fever into the country.

From Texas there came reports of Malta fever, due to drinking goat's milk. It now appears that Malta fever, or its twin brother, is already here, that it has been here for a long time, and that it is spread by cows and by cow's milk as well as by milk of goats.

Cows are subject to a disease called contagious abortion. When this disease gets into a herd it is eradicated with great difficulty. Dairymen are as much afraid of it as they are of tuberculosis. It has been found that the bacillus of this disease is found with great frequency in cow's milk. The ordinary milk supply of a city contains this bacillus with great frequency. It has been found that the bacillus of this disease is either the same as the bacillus of Malta fever, or its twin brother.

If the people who drink milk containing this bacillus get any sickness at all, it is a mild form of Malta fever or something like it. Usually no harm is done by drinking milk containing this bacillus. Certainly, efficient pasteurization removes the danger when there is any. A community having a pasteurized milk supply is all right. The Malta fever objection to the introduction of milch goats into America is not valid in the light of work done by Kennedy in England and Alice Evans in America.

Those who are fighting the development of the goat industry must get another argument.

LIVER SPOTS.

An Admirer writes: Is there any way of eradicating so-called liver or moth patches from hands and face?

REPLY.

A saturated solution of hyposulphite of soda in water is said to cure some cases. Apply once a day.
I know of nothing else to suggest.

BABY'S HEAD FLAT.

Mrs. D. K. Z. writes: My baby is 9 months old and her head is too flat. I have been told that it is caused by her always wanting to lie flat on her back and that now, since she lies on her side more, her head will fill out. Do you think so?

REPLY.

Most people think so, and I see no reason for disagreeing. Assuming that a child is not rachitic or syphilitic, inheritance is the principal factor in determining the shape of the head. Any change in shape due to bed posture is liable to be temporary.

BOTH ARE WRONG.

Mrs. M. F. writes: Two peace loving people have fallen out because "A" says living near the equator thickens the blood. "B" says living there thins it, and that the reason people who live in hot countries cannot stand cold weather is because their blood is cold.

REPLY.

You are both wrong. It is always true that when two people quarrel they are both wrong. Quarreling brings the emotions into play and that hampers thinking.

Fortunately, nature regulates the thickness of the blood with a hair trigger regulator. Whether in the tropics or in the cold, on a mountain or in a valley, the regulator holds the fluid at just the right place.

People who live in hot places cannot stand cold because they are not trained heat makers. We train ourselves to make much or little heat.

DELAYED BONUS.

Chicago, April 21.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I applied for my bonus through your office in the early part of 1923. A few months later I got a card from Springfield giving me my claim number in the 150,000's. I have moved twice since then but each time I have written a letter to the bonus board telling them of my new address. I have not received my bonus and cannot understand why. I lived in Illinois all my life and in Chicago for five years before I enlisted. What would you suggest? I need the money badly. H. P.

The bonus board has announced several times that no request for change of address will be recognized unless executed on the official change of address form furnished by them. From facts stated we believe that you have not filled out this form. We shall mail you one of these forms if you will send us a stamped and addressed envelope.

LANDLORD WON'T CLEAN.

Chicago, April 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have lived in a six room flat for seven years and have paid my rent regularly. The landlord will not clean or paper the rooms, and they are black from having three stoves going all those winters. He says that he read in your column that as long as a tenant lives in a flat he is under no obligation to clean for them. Is he right, or to whom may I complain of the bad condition of this place? T. F. W.

Where the condition is positively unsanitary the department of health may act to compel the landlord to keep the property clean.

The landlord is, in general, under no legal obligations to the tenant to clean or repair parts of the premises that are under the exclusive control of the tenant.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

EASTLAKE TERRACE.

Chicago, April 20.—[Friend of the People.]—We live in the 7600 block of Eastlake terrace, and our street from Birchwood to Howard avenue is a disgrace to Chicago. There are hundreds of holes in it. We have made complaint about it but get no results. I was told to write to you and you would find out for us whether or not the street will be repaired. H. W.

The pavement in Eastlake terrace is an old macadam one, absolutely beyond repair. The street should be improved at the earliest possible date. All expensive apartments on this street and owners should petition that paving proceedings be started at once.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

"DON'T WORRY ABOUT THE RED FARMER."

Hart, Mich., April 19.—Have just finished reading your railroad editorial of 17th, and would like to state that the so-called Red farmers do not object to a fair return on legitimate railroad stocks. But we do object to paying interest on equipment that has been junk for fifty years. A majority of the class 1 roads are today paying 9 per cent on par value of their stock, and some as high as 23 per cent on market value, and that after making greater purchases for betterment and equipment than at any time heretofore. Now you and the other paid ladies of the press are quick to come to their aid to keep the burden of excessive returns saddled on the people. Now, you know and I know that the price the farmers are receiving for their product will not pay wages and taxes, to say nothing of 5 per cent on $75,000,000,000 of investment. And when a bill comes before congress that will put him on equality with other business prices, do you rush to his aid? Not so as you can notice it. You jump on it with both feet and turn around and write an editorial on how necessary it is to pay railroad stockholders fat dividends and to "hell" with the Red radical. Now, don't worry about the Red farmer. He's far better and fairer to other business than you and they are to his needs. You and they are radical, all right, but not red, as you travel under the skull and cross bones on a black rag. If some one like La Follette runs for President this fall, you will know the farmers have struck, and that isn't maybe. H. H. LESTER.

THE HUNGARIAN IMMIGRANT.

Chicago, April 21.—Raymond Fendrick's Budapest report, entitled "Hungary Picks 5,700 Misfits to Dump on U. S.," is nothing else but malicious propaganda against immigration and utter distortion of facts.

The procedure in selecting emigrants in Hungary is entirely governed by whether or not the prospective emigrant has blood relations in America. Parents, wives, children are the preferred emigrants; then come sisters, brothers, etc. Physical and mental qualifications are always considered. Our immigration statistics will show that the skilled mechanics dominate and laborers who become here railroad workers through their American relatives.

The Hungarian women make up a most desirable portion of the cooks and domestics in the U. S. A., and thousands of Americans will approve when I say we can't have too many Hungarian cooks and domestics, as we need them all and we need them very badly in our homes.

The American consul at Budapest has every possible chance to investigate the prospective emigrant, as one of the staff members speaks Hungarian as well as English, being a native American of Hungarian parentage.

The type of immigration from Hungary since the war is considerably improved, as the present Hungarian emigrant comes with a firm decision to become an American citizen, as they realize that the economical conditions abroad will not improve so much as to provide for them decently, and the U. S. A. is relatively still the land of "milk and honey" for the victims of war and defeat. DR. ERNEST A. LOWINSKA.

NEVER SELL THE U. S. SHORT.

Chicago, April 20.—Referring to your excellent editorial of the 16th inst. entitled "The Business Mood," and to the letter of Mr. Howard Elting commending it published in your "Voice of the People" today, in which he quotes the late J. P. Morgan as saying he "would never sell the United States short," I remember having read some years ago a magazine article describing the evolution of the dry goods merchants of New England of about the '40s, into the international bankers of New York, of about the '60s, in which the father of J. P. Morgan referred to was used as a conspicuous example. In this article the Mr. Morgan under discussion was reported to have preached to the men of his day from a text making the same point clearer, I think, to the average man. His text was, "The man who is a bear on America will go broke."

It is not a great risk to assume that upon this belief was based the general policies which made the house of Morgan one of the greatest forces in the development of America during the last fifty years.

In line with Mr. Elting's thought, if that was a sound policy for business men of the two generations covered, why is it not a sound policy for the business men of today? We know much more about this country now than they did. We have facts, or can get them, about a good many things they could only believe were possible; therefore why any hesitation about the business future?

It should be noted that both Morgans mentioned the country as a whole. The first Mr. Morgan did not say the man who is a bear on the then merchant marine situation would go broke. That did decline. The late Mr. Morgan did not say the man who is a bear on the railroad or agricultural situation would go broke. They have had temporary reverses. Their faith in America led them both to say, in effect, that America, as a whole, was going to grow and it would back up the efforts of men engaged in businesses which contributed to that end who played America, and their businesses with it, to win, and any man who did not would be rolled under.

This is the same America.

AWARD O'MALLEY HARRISON MEDAL AS POLICE HERO

Battle with Gunman Held 1923's Bravest Act.

Policeman John T. O'Malley of the detective bureau, winner of THE TRIBUNE'S $100 hero prize last December, will receive the Carter Harrison gold medal for conspicuous bravery during 1923, the civil service commission decided yesterday.

Ten brother officers, honorably mentioned by the commissioners for devotion to duty in the face of death, will accompany O'Malley when he receives the medal from Mayor Dever in the presence of the city council in a few weeks.

Three of Ten Tribune Winners.

Three of the ten, Policemen George W. Barker, Maxwell street; Michael Carolan, Hudson avenue, and James T. Best of the Englewood district, were TRIBUNE prize winners in 1923.

The others cited by the commission for unusual bravery are Sergt. Thomas J. Mangan, detective bureau, and Policemen Gerhardt J. Veith, Englewood; Fred Koehler, detective bureau, and Albert L. Glass, George F. Brewer, Frank J. Dwyer, and Walter Garazin, all of the West North avenue station.

On Dec. 7, 1923, Policeman O'Malley, then assigned as a plainclothes detective at the Sheffield avenue station, entered the bar at the Rendezvous café, at Diversey parkway and Clark street, to find a drunken man terrorizing patrons of the place with a revolver.

Rounds Up Drunk.

The man, John Sheehy, a well known gangster, was about to "clean house" because a waiter had angered him. O'Malley attempted to pacify him. Sheehy advanced on him with gun, announcing he would kill the policeman. O'Malley offered the gunman an opportunity to search him for weapons. As Sheehy lowered his revolver for a second, O'Malley with one blow sent him reeling to the wall. The policeman ran out a door, intending to race for a rear entrance, where he knew he could surprise Sheehy.

At that moment William O'Malley of the detective bureau, who had been attracted by the noise of the argument and scuffling, burst through the rear door and was shot down by Sheehy.

Kills Two Others.

A second shot from Sheehy's gun killed Leopold Guth, a café steward, and a third killed Henry Bing, a waiter. Sheehy dropped behind the bar to reload his gun.

O'Malley did not return the gangster's fire for fear of hitting waiters, crouched behind Sheehy. Then Sheehy jumped from behind the bar, firing as he came.

O'Malley's first shot entered Sheehy's side and caused his death later in the Bridewell hospital. O'Malley is a veteran of the Belleau Woods and St. Mihiel engagements during the world war, and was cited several times for his ability as a sharpshooter.

NIELS GRON DIES FOLLOWING FALL IN COPENHAGEN

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Niels L. G. Gron, Danish politician and writer and founder of the much debated "potentia movement," died last night. He was recently taken to a hospital suffering from hemorrhage of the brain after having jumped or fallen from a second story window during a fit of nervous depression. He was formerly Danish consul at London.

His wife, who was formerly Miss Sadie Gowan Dusenbury, arrived from New York a few days ago. She was married to Mr. Gron in February, 1923, following the divorce granted his first wife, Mrs. Madeline Masters Gron, sister of Edgr Lee Masters, the poet.

The marital troubles of Mr. Gron and is first wife, Mrs. Madeline Masters Gron, have had a prominent place in Chicago news since 1916 when the wife first filed suit for separation. Mrs. Gron at that time charged her husband with being a visionary and with drunkenness. She obtained a divorce in 1922. The couple lived in many European capitals, occasionally coming to Chicago, where Mrs. Gron maintained homes in Lake Forest and in the city. She was the widow of the late Dr. Carl D. Stone, son of H. O. Stone, real estate operator. Mr. Gron was once known as the "handsomest man in Europe."

PROTESTS BURIAL OF DUSE IN BIG ROME CEMETERY

ROME, April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Marco Praga, an intimate friend of the late Signora Duse, has written a letter to the press protesting against her being buried in the great metropolitan cemetery of Campo Verano here, saying the actress had begged him to remember she desired to be buried in the solitude of Asolo, "because it is tranquil and not far from my adored Venice."

Signora Duse, adds Signor Praga, was one who loved frequently to remain alone with her books and the thought of her friends, and he feels keenly the ineptitude of her being buried in the Campo Verano.

The body of the actress is expected to arrive in Naples May 10 on the Duilio. Meanwhile her legal representative has sealed up her apartment until the arrival of Signora Duse's daughter from England, when her last will and testament will be unsealed and read.

CHINESE UNABLE TO CHECK ATTACK ON FOREIGNERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PEKING, April 26.—Conditions in China are reaching a stage wherein concerted action by foreign powers seems inevitable. The Chinese government appears unable to cope with the situation. In addition to contempt for treaty rights, there are increasing expressions of Chinese hostility toward foreigners.

Much concern is felt over the situation in certain interior provinces, particularly in Szechwan, where American firms are leaving or removing their concessions to Hankow, owing to the high handed measures of Hupeh troops holding Chunking. Recent outrages there will probably cause American and British protests.

The most daring outrage occurred at Chunking, 200 yards from the mooring place of American and British gunboats, when six Standard Oil company junks were attacked and robbed. A landing party from the U. S. S. Monocacy pursued the soldiers into the city, where they were hidden by comrades. A uniformed messenger of the American consulate on an official errand was commandeered by Chinese troops and forced to carry rice. When he protested, showing his credentials, he was told he must carry twice as much because he was working for foreigners.

LIEUT. GRIFFIS GIVEN REST OF PUBLIC'S FUND

Final payment of money subscribed by the public to effect the release of Lieut. Corliss H. Griffis from the German prison to which he was sent for attempting to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll was made to Lieut. Griffis by THE TRIBUNE yesterday.

The amount which remained in THE TRIBUNE'S hands was $2,358.83. It was turned over to the army man when he made showing by affidavit that he had incurred debts of more than $3,000 in connection with his release which remained unpaid. Lieut. Griffis showed that he had borrowed sums of $1,500, $1,200, and $1,000 from banks in Hamilton, O., and that he still owed some $500 in connection with his pardon.

John Clayton, TRIBUNE correspondent in Berlin, previously paid $2,000 out of the original fund for attorney's fees. Griffis was given $500 with which to outfit himself with civilian clothing. The payment of the remaining $2,358.83 depleted the fund.

DENEEN LEAD 9,621 IN COOK, OFFICIAL COUNT

Sen. McCormick Probably Will Ask Recanvass.

Ex-Gov. Charles S. Deneen carried Cook county by 9,627 votes over United States Senator Medill McCormick in the Republican primary, April 8, according to the official canvass of the returns. Deneen's vote was 170,280 and McCormick's 160,623.

CHARLES S. DENEEN.

In Chicago Deneen's plurality was 21,510, the city vote standing 149,204 to 127,694.

Official returns from the downstate were still unavailable yesterday, as three other counties besides Cook—Will, Piatt and Ogle—had not turned in their tabulations to the secretary of state's office. According to the best available information, partially official, McCormick carried the downstate by 2,908 votes, leaving the Deneen plurality for the entire state 5,719.

May Result in Recount.

The close finish between the two leading contenders for the Republican senatorial nomination probably will result in a recount of the ballots, according to most political speculators. Senator McCormick probably will ask for a recount in several downstate counties, as well as Cook.

The city vote for the other three Republican senatorial candidates was: Jenkins, 20,466; Ogden, 7,008; McPherson, 5,927.

Gov. Small carried Chicago by 20,073 over State Senator Essington, and State Tax Commissioner Oscar Carlstrom carried the city by 29,789 over Attorney General Brundage.

The official proclamation of the canvass will be made by the election commission tomorrow.

One Reversal.

One reversal of police returns made by the canvass occurred in the Ninth congressional district, where Judge Walter P. Steffen, anti-Small candidate for Republican state committeeman, defeated the Deneen candidate, Charles E. Peace, by seventeen votes. The totals are: Steffen, 11,995; Peace, 11,978.

E. B. Elder, the Small candidate for committeeman in the Third district, defeated Anton T. Zeman by 512 votes. The police returns, with several precincts missing, indicated the election of Zeman by a slight majority.

State Representative William F. Daley [Rep.] of the Twenty-first district, who thought he had been renominated by ninety-three votes, was defeated by former Representative F. J. Bippus by 1,825 votes.

State Representative Charles H. Weber [Dem.], the wettest wet in the legislature, won renomination in the Sixth district by 7,896.

SIGMUND ZEISLER CHOSEN HEAD OF VOTERS' LEAGUE

Harking back to the days of its beginning, the Municipal Voters' league yesterday elected one of its founders, Sigmund Zeisler, as president. He succeeds Harold F. White, who resigned after heading the league since 1919. Dr. Nathan S. Davis III. was reelected secretary.

Mr. Zeisler was one of the prime movers in organizing the league in 1896 following his activities the previous year in opposing franchise ordinances and boodling in the city council. He has been a member of the league's executive committee since 1898.

The new league president was born in Austria in 1860. He has practiced law in Chicago for forty years. Opposed to Bryan on the free silver issue in 1896, he stumped the country as an "anti-imperialist" for Bryan in 1900. Mr. Zeisler was chief assistant corporation counsel in 1893-1894 and was master in chancery of the Circuit court for sixteen years. His wife is Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.

Queen of N. J: Rum Fleet Is Captured in Canada

St. Johns, N. B., April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The British steam yacht Istar, called "queen of the fleet" along the New York-New Jersey coast "rum row," dropped anchor here today with a cargo of liquor and promptly was seized by Customs Collector Lockhart, to be held pending instructions from Ottawa. Sir Broderick Cecil Hartwell, barnoct and internationally advertised rum seller, was reported recently to be owner of the Istar's cargoes.

Flyer Carries 550 Lbs. to 29,460 Feet, a Record

Dayton, O., April 26.—[United Press.]—Lieut. Harold R. Harris today holds a new world flying record, having attained the official height of 29,460 feet with a dead weight. His instruments were calibrated by the United States bureau of standards, and announcement was made through McCook field. Harris carried 550 pounds and beat the French record by a wide margin.

STATE TO PAY FOR LEN'S INK? NIX, SAYS COURT

New Looting Stopped by Injunction.

A temporary injunction restraining State Treasurer Oscar Nelson and State Auditor Andrew Russell from paying out of the state contingent fund one of Gov. Small's campaign printing bills amounting to $44,214.10, was issued at Springfield yesterday by Circuit Judge E. S. Smith. Attaches of the court were sent immediately to serve notice of the suit on the state treasurer and auditor.

The suit was filed at Springfield by Edward McDonnell, a Chicago contractor, who happens to be a Democrat.

For Printing Booklets.

Mr. McDonnell sets forth in his petition that the bill in question was for the printing of 1,850,000 booklets on pardons and paroles. Four printing companies in Springfield and one in Danville handled the job.

The bill contends that although the booklets were "printed by authority of the welfare department," their only purpose and the only use to which they were put were for Gov. Small's own private business as a candidate for renomination in the Republican primary of April 8. Through the booklets, the petitioner recites, the governor made his answer to attacks on his record of wholesale pardons and paroles for political purposes.

Women Deny Indorsement.

Recent public statements that women who fought against Small's renomination have indorsed him along with the rest of the state ticket since he won in the primaries drew a hot retort yesterday from two leaders of the Essington Women's Republican club—Mrs. Lloyd Smith, president, and Mrs. Effie R. Redman, secretary.

"We want to state emphatically that we are not for Small and never will be," said Mrs. Smith, speaking for herself and Mrs. Redman. "Mrs. Redman never authorized the use of her name to any such indorsement. We fought for a principle and we are still for it."

DEMOCRATS PLAN MEETING AFTER MURPHY FUNERAL

Al Smith's Candidacy Big Issue in Gotham.

New York, April 26.—[Special.]—While preparations were being made today for the funeral on Monday of Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, personal and political associates of the late Democratic chieftain denounced as premature reports that the Tammany organization would name a new leader immediately.

Thomas F. Foley, close friend to Mr. Murphy, voiced the predominant sentiment in these words.

"C. F." left an organization which will trust in his spiritual leadership for some time to come."

Effect on Smith Boom.

In the meantime chief interest centered on the probable effect of the Tammany leader's death on the presidential aspiration of Gov. Alfred E. Smith. Generally, it was felt that overnight the governor had become the actual Tammany leader.

Democratic leaders said today they expected Gov. Smith would meet the crisis by taking over the management and direction of his own campaign, with George Brennan, Chicago leader, replacing Murphy as his high political adviser and Norman Mack, New York Democratic national committeeman, acting as his chief field marshal.

A decision on how best to "carry on" with the Smith boom will undoubtedly be reached here soon after Mr. Murphy's funeral Monday.

Taggart Won't Be There.

A political conference between these men and other friends of the governor was said to be unavoidable, although no arrangements for a meeting have been made and none will be until after the funeral.

Thomas Taggart of Indiana, a close friend of Mr. Murphy and frequently an ally in national politics, will not be here for the funeral, word having been received that he would be unable to attend. Mr. Taggart is committed to the candidacy of Senator Samuel M. Ralston of Indiana and could not consistently take any part in a conference of supporters of Gov. Smith.

Mr. Murphy will be buried in Calvary cemetery in Long Island City. Burial will be preceded by a solemn requiem mass in St. Patrick's cathedral. Simplicity will mark both services. Auxiliary Bishop John J. Dunn will celebrate the mass. There will be no dirge, no parade of Tammany organizations, but there will be a mighty outpouring of the people.

Mrs. Murphy, widow of the Tammany chief, has suffered a nervous breakdown, according to her physician. She was in Atlantic City yesterday when she was told of Mr. Murphy's death. She immediately came to New York. Her condition is not serious.

CHICAGOANS ATTEND RITES.

Thirty Chicago Democrats left for New York last night to attend the funeral of Charles F. Murphy, Tammany chief, tomorrow.

The delegation was led by George E. Brennan, whose name frequently has been coupled with those of Murphy and Thomas Taggart of Indiana, the three being described as the "triumvirate of Democracy."

Others in the party were the following:

Patrick J. Carr,	John E. Traeger,
Timothy J. Crowe,	M. K. Sheridan,
Michael Rosenberg,	Edward J. Kelly,
Clayton F. Smith,	Thomas D. Garry,
P. A. Nash,	Ald. Dennis A. Horan,

Two Postal Workers Held for Gun Thefts

A. B. Hintop and Ardell C. Rogers, colored clerks in the parcel post division at Quincy street station, were arrested yesterday on a charge of stealing revolvers from the mail. The arrests were made by Postal Inspectors K. E. Kenney and J. W. McWhorter.

LONE ROBBER GETS $15,000 IN GEMS.

Portland, Ore., April 26.—A lone robber today entered the jewelry store of Frederick L. Miller, bound the clerk, forced Miller to take $15,000 worth of jewels from the safe, and escaped, according to the police.

1 YEAR SOLDIERS ARE SLOW ABOUT GOING INTO ARMY

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—Only 16 per cent of the recruits to the army have been for one year enlistments since former Attorney General Daugherty ruled that the war department must accept such enlistments, according to the war department.

Partial explanation of the small number of one year enlistments may lie in the fact that the war department has ruled that one year men may not be sent more than 100 miles from the recruiting station, because of the expense of bringing them back from such distant stations as the Philippines, Hawaii, Alaska, Panama, etc., after twelve months.

The enlisted strength of the army today is 116,500 men. The grand total of recruits for April is expected to be 5,400, which will fill up the losses due to discharges and bring the army up to full pay strength of 118,750 men by July 1, if the ratio is kept up.

Pittsburgh Street Car Men to Take Strike Vote

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 26. — A strike vote of the 3,200 motormen and conductors of the Pittsburgh Railways company will be taken Monday.

PINCHOT CHARGES COLLAPSE OF DRY LAW ENFORCING

Tells Women He'll Fight On Despite Defeat.

BY KATE WEBBER.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 26.—[Special.]—Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania tonight hurled defiance at those who opposed him in the state. He was addressing a mass meeting in connection with the fifth annual convention of the National League of Women voters. Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland also spoke.

Mr. Pinchot said the most conspicuous example in our government not only of failure but of refusal to do its allotted work is the federal prohibition enforcement bureau.

"Not only in Pennsylvania, where its scandalous break down floods the state with liquor," he said, "but in many other commonwealths its willful neglect has brought degradation, disease, and death upon the people. The law has given the enforcement service power to enforce the law; all it lacks is the will."

Ritchie Urges State Rights.

Gov. Ritchie took a firm stand on state rights. This, in a way, opposes the stand of the League of Women Voters, which favors federal centralization and such bills as the Sheppard-Towner act.

"Over-centralization," Gov. Ritchie said, "means that the federal government is taking away from the states the right to administer things which the states can administer far better themselves. The distinction between what the national government can do and what was reserved for the states to do is the arch on which the institutions of our country were rested.

"In the first place, the term 'federal aid' is a misnomer. It implies that the federal government is giving the states something for nothing. All the government does is take money from the people of the states with one hand and give it back to them with the other."

Gov. Ritchie said there is endless expense in maintaining large bureaus at Washington to administer the "federal aid" funds.

Surprise in One Report.

Miss Esther Dunshee, chairman of the committee on uniform laws concerning women, created amusement when, reading her report, she announced that the committee had voted not to indorse the proposed federal amendment establishing uniform divorce laws. Friends of the idea will fight to save it when it comes up for vote on Monday. It was recommended by the national board in its "program of work."

Mrs. James W. Morrisson of Chicago, speaking on "getting out the vote" at the Illinois primaries, referred to the coöperation between the Woman's City club committee, headed by Mrs. Florence Bennett Petersen, and the Illinois league, represented by Mrs. Kenneth Rich. She also said that the 25 per cent increase over the 1920 primary vote was only a start toward the real work to come in the fall.

"Efficiency Government."

Miss Belle Sherwin, who presided at the morning session, presented the efficiency in government plan, which calls for no legislation, but study and work in all branches, as well as a shorter ballot and adoption of the budget system.

Miss Ruth Morgan of New York, advocate of war prevention, launched her campaign by recommending that the women study the questions of reparations, interallied debts, league of nations, and the Bok peace plan.

The general impression is that the league members are for world peace with a certain amount of preparedness as a means of defense. There is a strong pacifist movement astir, and the fight will come on the floor of the convention next week.

Mrs. Ann Webster of New Mexico, chairman of the social hygiene committee, announced that several states had requested that the league study sterilization of the unfit.

Seeks Birth Control Laws.

Dr. Rachelle Yarros submitted a petition, signed by more than 100 delegates, which sought to add to the line of study of an amendment including birth control, of methods of bringing the sterilization of the unfit into effect, and of amending federal and state birth control laws.

Mrs. May Wood Simons of Chicago spoke on the citizenship schools conducted in Illinois and announced that a prelection school is to be held this fall in coöperation with the University of Chicago. Announcement also was made of an institute of politics to be held in coöperation with the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor July 21-26.

Mexico Cuts Expenses, President Obregon Says

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, April 26.—"The financial situation is rapidly improving." President Obregon said to THE TRIBUNE today. "We are reorganizing the army so as to cut expenses, and are doing the same thing in other government services with the same end in view. Taxes, import and export duties, and other government sources of income are improving steadily, and the government is taking measures to meet the financial situation face to face in case it is not possible to secure a loan on acceptable conditions."

BUSINESS COURTESY.

Courtesy is an easy habit for salespeople and other employees to acquire, and it grows easier to maintain, each day.

There is little effort required to say: "Thank you," "I beg your pardon," "I'm sorry; that was my fault," or any other expression that marks efficient store service. And it is no more difficult to let a customer go through a doorway or enter an elevator first and follow the customer going out of a doorway or an elevator.

These are only suggestive examples. They seem simple, but in addition to the really more substantial service they are the hallmarks of the store which holds old customers and attracts new ones through efficient, courteous service.

CREEDS UNITED IN WELCOME TO NEW CARDINAL

Committees Named for Prelate's Homecoming.

BY THE REV. W. E. NORTON.

His eminence, Cardinal Mundelein, will receive a welcome when he arrives in Chicago on his homecoming May 11 that will represent an impressive array of the city's best citizenship. In the selection of the committee, which was given out yesterday by Dennis F. Kelly, Knight of St. George, chairman, denominational church lines have been forgotten in the desire to recognize the new cardinal as a great Chicago citizen and his elevation to the cardinalate as a recognition of this city's leadership in the church and its significance in the eyes of the world.

Among the Jewish leaders who have accepted places on the reception committee are Rabbis L. L. Mann and Joseph Stolz and Gen. Abel Davis. Protestant leaders are the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, Episcopal bishop; Dr. Thomas F. Holgate, president of the Chicago Church federation, representing sixteen denominations and 700 churches, and George W. Dixon, president of the Chicago temple church board, both of the Methodist Episcopal church; Charles M. Moderwell and James A. Patten, Presbyterians; Marquis Eaton and Wyllys Baird, Congregationalists, and Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university.

Political and business representatives are: Mayor Dever, former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, Col. A. A. Sprague, Dr. H. N. Bundesen, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, J. Ogden Armour, E. J. Buffington, and others.

To Be Met at New York.

Two trains will carry delegates to New York to welcome Cardinal Mundelein when he arrives there and escort him back to Chicago. The train carrying the clergy headed by Bishop E. F. Hoban will leave Tuesday, May 6, and the Twentieth Century special carrying the laymen headed by D. F. Kelly will go Wednesday, May 7.

The committees named for the various activities connected with the arrangements for the homecoming of the cardinal are as follows:

Waist and Hips Reduced Quickly with New Kind of Girdle

The Madame X Reducing Girdle, at $9.85 and $11.85

The moment you put on this new kind of girdle your waist and hips look inches thinner—and you get thin while looking thin, for this new invention produces the same results as an expert masseur. Makes fat vanish with surprising rapidity while you walk, play, work or sleep, yet does it so gently that you hardly know it is there. No more heart-straining exercises—no more disagreeable starving diets—no more harmful medicines—no more bitter self-denials.

Actually Reduces Fat!

The Madame X Reducing Girdle is built upon scientific massage principles. It is made of the most resilient rubber—especially designed for reducing purposes—and is worn over the undergarment. Gives you the same slim appearance as a regular corset without the stiff appearance and without any discomfort. Fits as snugly as a kid glove—has garters attached—and so constructed that it touches and gently massages every portion of the surface continually! The constant massage causes a more vigorous circulation of the blood, not only through these parts but throughout the entire body! Particularly around the abdomen and hips, this gentle massage is so effective that it often brings about a remarkable reduction in weight in the first few days.

At last! A wonderful new scientific girdle that improves your appearance immediately and reduces your waist and hips almost "while you wait!" The instant you put on the new girdle the bulky fat on the waist and hips seems to vanish, the waistline lengthens, and your body becomes erect, graceful, youthfully slender! And then—with every step you make, with every breath you take, with every little motion, this new kind of girdle gently massages away the disfiguring, useless fat—and you look and feel many years younger!

The Madame X Reducing Girdle takes the place of stiff Corsets, and gives you, with comfort, Fashion's straight, boyish lines. Makes you look and feel years younger.

IS YOUR NAME ON THE ROSTER OF HERO FUND?

Amount on The Tribune List $11,230.50.

The Curran hall fire claimed the life of another fireman last night, bringing the total number of dead in the flames to ten. The ninth fireman to die was James Carroll of truck No. 12. His death occurred at the County hospital. The other person killed was a civilian.

Contributions to the hero fund for the families of firemen who died in the Curran hall fire continued to pour into THE TRIBUNE yesterday. Two checks for $100 each were received. Several donations of smaller amounts brought yesterday's receipts to $282 and made the total of money raised by THE TRIBUNE $11,230.50.

When this fund has grown to its limit it will be distributed evenly among the widows of the firemen who lost their lives in the Blue Island avenue disaster.

A total of $172 was received by Mayor Dever yesterday for the hero fund. The mayor announced that he would turn this sum over to the committee, which, headed by Ald. Ross A. Woodhull, is setting about to raise $250,000 so that the family of every fireman and policeman who dies in line of duty will receive $5,000 in addition to the $5,000 paid by the city.

ATTY. McCALLUM ARRESTED WITH ANOTHER'S WIFE

Attorney William W. McCallum, 1245 Jarvis avenue, with offices at 7 West Madison street, who figured in a divorce suit about a year ago, was taken into custody with Mrs. Inga Carlson, 7624 Sheridan road, last night as they left the Colonial theater. The arrest was brought about by George Carlson, husband of the woman, who said he had followed them to the theater. He hurried to the night court where he obtained warrants on charges of disorderly conduct.

SENTENCED

Former Detective Sergeant Edward Smale gets two years for tampering with federal jury.

SENTENCE POLICE HI-JACKERS FOR JURY TAMPERING

Edward Smale Jr. and Thomas Carlisle, former detective sergeants of the Chicago police department, yesterday were sentenced to prison terms in Leavenworth penitentiary for conspiracy to obstruct justice and tampering with a federal jury in connection with a liquor case in which they were defendants.

Smale was sentenced to serve two years and pay a fine of $2,500 and court costs. Carlisle received a year and a day and $1,000 fine, with no costs. Sentences were passed by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

According to Assistant District Attorney Edwin L. Weisl, who prosecuted Smale and Carlisle in the hi-jacking case which led to the conspiracy trial, it was the first time in United States courts' history that defendants had been found guilty and sentenced to prison for tampering with a federal jury.

Mr. Weisl said he would go before the court on May 6 and ask retrial of Smale and Carlisle on the hi-jacking charge, of which they were acquitted, on the grounds that neither is entitled to the constitutional privileges which allow a defendant to be "placed in jeopardy" but once for an offense.

The government attorney will meet arguments of Attorney Everett Jennings, defense counsel, with the theory that the former policemen never have been "in jeopardy" for stealing 200 cases of whisky, inasmuch as they were assured by means of the jury tampering of which they have just been convicted, of the outcome of their trial before the verdict was considered.

JAP FEELING ON U. S. EXCLUSION IS COOLING OFF

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, April 26.—Press comments and public utterances on the exclusion of Japanese from the United States under the new immigration act have calmed down wonderfully while the entire nation is watching the developments in Washington. The feeling is growing here, however, that somehow the White House will discover a way to avoid the expressed discrimination.

Official circles consider the advisability of announcing the continuance on the part of Japan of the gentlemen's agreement, whatever may be the fate of the immigration bill. The Japanese contend that an international agreement cannot be abrogated through domestic legislation by one signatory. Therefore, Japan will continue to sift out admissibles from inadmissible persons when issuing passports to America, Mexico and Canada, thus not leaving the burden of proof on American immigration officials.

SAVANTS TALK OF TALLEYRAND AND CLIMBING FISHES

Philosophers Tell of Many Marvelous Things.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.—[Special.]—The reconstruction of ancient history through clay tablets excavated from the capital of the Hittite kingdom in Asia Minor, achievements by the United States navy in long distance underwater signaling by sound waves, the story of a species of jumping fish that crossed the Andes, and proof that the French statesman Talleyrand had taken out his first papers as an American citizen—these were a few of the many varied themes discussed today by scientists and scholars at the American Philosophical society.

Overturns Old Beliefs.

Dr. Paul Haupt, professor of Semitic languages at Johns Hopkins university, said, in discussing history, that the Hebrews were not Semites at all, but a mixture composed largely of Hittites; that it was not the face of Helen that launched the thousand ships and burned the topless towers of Ilium, but that the Greeks besieged Troy in order to suppress Trojan piracy; that the Latin language is apparently connected with the Hittite and possibly, through the Hittite, with the Sumerian, a language that was spoken along the Tigris and Euphrates more than 7,000 years ago.

Recent work of the United States navy in measuring ocean bottoms was described by Dr. Harvey C. Hayes of Annapolis.

Sixty Mile Sound Wave.

Sounds traveling under water for sixty miles have recently been caught and their direction accurately detected by an instrument called the M. V. hydrophone, developed by the navy, according to Dr. Hayes.

The historical proof that Talleyrand had shaken off his allegiance to France was of special interest because Talleyrand was both a resident of Philadelphia and a member of the American Philosophical society.

During the French revolution Talleyrand went first to England and then to America with a number of other noted French refugees. He took out his first citizenship papers in 1795, but changed his mind and returned to France, where he became foreign minister of France under Napoleon and after.

The Sky Scraping Fish.

The fish which climbed the Andes was described by Dr. Carl H. Eigenmann of Indiana university. The fish is called "huijas" in Ecuador. Its tremendous leaping powers were observed while Dr. Eigenmann was seeking fish which would eat the larvæ of yellow mosquitoes.

The fish was traced clear up the Atlantic slope of the Andes and then found in streams on the opposite sides of the mountains, proving that it had crossed over.

CONFEREES DROP EXCLUSION; LET COOLIDGE WORRY

See Happy Ending for Controversy.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—While President Coolidge today was proceeding with efforts to settle the Japanese exclusion problem in a manner acceptable to the exclusionists and yet not offensive to Japan, house and senate conferees spent a day straightening out wording of the immigration bill without more than casually touching the oriental angle.

Tonight sentiment was that the conferees would not attempt to make or recommend any change and that any of the much rumored "settlement" would have to come from outside. At the same time, most conferees expressed themselves as convinced that "every one would be happy within a few days," so far as Japanese exclusion is concerned.

Coolidge Calls in Hughes.

President Coolidge conferred with Senator David Reed [Rep., Pa.], who was floor manager for the senate bill, and then called Secretary of State Hughes into conference. Nothing was given out as to the result of the discussions, but later Representative Albert Johnson [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the house immigration committee, expressed himself as satisfied the President's hopes for satisfaction for both pro and anti exclusionists would be realized.

The national committee on American-Japanese relations, an organization which announces itself as "composed entirely of American citizens," submitted two proposals to the conferees as a basis of action on the Japanese question. They were:

Let congress follow the proposal of Secretary Hughes and regulate Japanese immigration by the general immigration law, under which Japan's quota could not exceed 146 immigrants in any year.

Suggest Conference with Japan.

Let congress empower the President and secretary of state to enter into conference with the Japanese government for prolonging the gentlemen's agreement in some acceptable form or for revoking it in accordance with the usual forms of ordinary politeness in international intercourse. This would call for suspension of the restrictive provisions while the conferences were in session.

The only comment forthcoming from those receiving the proposal was that "the immigration bill itself covers the question."

Italy Halts Emigration of Wives and Children

New York, April 26.—Lloyd Sabando steamship officials today announced receipt of cable dispatches from Italian immigration authorities at Rome advising that no further passports would be issued to wives and children of Italian naturalized or resident aliens in America.

ALL North American food portions are BIG. Here's an example:—

Half of the dark meat from a 9 or 10 pound Roasted Turkey—with stuffing and cranberry sauce—75c

A nine or ten pound turkey is big enough for six or eight people. Yet for only 75 cents the North American Restaurant gives you half of all the dark meat—an entire leg and second joint—with delicious stuffing and cranberry sauce. Or, for only 85 cents you can have a quarter of all the white meat on a turkey of the same size. Either portion is usually ample for two people. And you can have it hot—right from the oven—or cold, as you prefer.

And roast turkey is only one item which illustrates what we mean when we say that North American food portions are BIG. Meat, fish, poultry, salad or dessert—in most cases one portion is amply large for two people. And unlike most dining-places the North American makes no extra charge when one portion is shared by two people.

Yet in spite of the low prices prevailing for our big portions it is a fact, often commented upon, that the quality of food cannot be beaten anywhere.

Halibut and Peas: The portion—is usually enough for two people 40c

Fried Premium Chicken: Breast of Premium Milk-fed Chicken, with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce . 65c

Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy tenderloin with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c

And Our Breakfast Specialties:

Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c

AH! 'TWILL BE CAL VS. "THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK"

Gridiron Club Holds Its National Convention.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—A national political convention, set to music, was convened by the Gridiron club at its spring dinner at the New Willard hotel tonight. Before it adjourned a hodge-podge of song and satire had reduced the forthcoming assemblages at Cleveland and New York to the category of nonessentials.

The Republican nomination was accorded to Calvin Coolidge. The perplexities of the Madison Square Garden convention were dissolved. The Democratic standard bearer was introduced to the club's guests. He proved to be the most famous "dark horse" in history—"The Man in the Iron Mask."

All Official Washington There.

In accordance with the best practices of present day Washington the famous dinner club, composed of Washington newspaper correspondents, delved into the pages of history to produce an inquisitor general. He conducted the principal skit of the evening for the enlightenment of the guests, who included the President, the cabinet, justices of the Supreme court of the United states, senators, representatives, party managers, and other national figures of politics and business.

The club had little difficulty in picking the Republican nominee. The problem of the Democratic convention was much more perplexing. From his place in history the inquisitor general was called to issue subpoenas for a number of distinguished personages. He brought with him his executioner.

The Mysterious Stranger.

Convinced that the "Democratic ticket to date reads like a John Doe warrant," the inquisitor general decided to subpoena "the most famous John Doe in history—the Man in the Iron Mask."

"Who are you?" demanded the inquisitor general.

"The Man in the Iron Mask," he replied. "Some men think I am Samuel Ralston, and some identify me with 'The Moon Shines Bright Tonight Along the Wabash.' I have been addressed as John W. Davis and asked to trade fat retainers for a nomination. Some call me McAdoo and ask whether I am from New York or California.

"I have been toasted as James M. Cox and assured that 7,000,000 aren't so many after all. I have been called Senator Underwood while the band played 'Dixie,' and some others said 'Hello York.' Some believe my name is Houston and dub me the leading resiguary legatee.

"I am identified as Copeland, the Medicine man of Tammany tribe. Col. Harvey thinks I am Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas. They once called me Reed before Jim tried to show 'em in Missouri. Some even think I'm a college president—I've forgotten his name. I have only one consolation. Nobody has suggested that I am Bryan."

President Coolidge a Speaker.

President Coolidge, Sir Esme Howard, the new ambassador of Great Britain to the United States, and John W. Davis were the speakers at the dinner. Under the Gridiron rule that "reporters are never present" their remarks are not published. When Representative Clifton A. Woodrum of Virginia, known to his colleagues as "the troubadour congressman," because he "sang his way into congress," was called on to speak, he burst into a song full of significance to seekers after public office.

The Gridiron players dramatized the third party idea in the form of a 1924 version of Hamlet. Assisting the "Melancholy Dane" of present day politics, made up to resemble La Follette, were two grave diggers—the Nonpartisan leaguer and the Farmer-Labor party, who were preparing graves for the coffin of the "grand old party" and Miss Democracy, visible in the shadows of the stage.

John C. Christensen, architect for the board of education, will be appointed state architect, it was learned yesterday, to fill the post left vacant by Edgar W. Christensen is expected to remain in his present place until Nov. 1, at which time he will have completed twenty years' service with the board and will be eligible for a pension.

EIGHT MORE OF 'LOST BATTALION' GIVEN CLEMENCY

Leavenworth, Kas., April 26.—[Special.]—Eight of the twelve men originally sentenced to hang or serve life sentences in the United States disciplinary barracks in connection with the death in July, 1918, of Shelby Hisle, general prisoner in the barracks, have received commutations of sentence as a result of recommendations made by Maj. James Stansfield and Maj. F. K. Ross, it was announced today by Warden W. I. Biddle of the federal prison.

The action is a further result of the recent demands of newspapers and patriotic societies for review of the cases of soldier prisoners.

So far seven full pardons have been granted, twenty-eight life sentences have been reduced to twenty-five years, and twenty life sentences reduced to twenty years. Several other life terms have received reductions.

REALTY MAN KILLS SELF TO FIND RELIEF

Brooding because of persistent ill health is believed to have led Burt D. Underwood, 49 years old, a real estate dealer, to shoot himself to death early yesterday. The body of Underwood, a former typewriter mechanic and reputed to have been worth over $100,000, was found in the living room at the home of his sister, Mrs. Bennett Ray, 4210 North Hermitage avenue.

Near the body lay a 32 caliber revolver from which one cartridge had been fired. A note, which read "Suffering too much. Good-by—Bert," was found on a table in the room.

TWO HELD AFTER POLICE RAID.

Donald Monroe and Charles White are booked as keepers of a disorderly house as the result of police raids yesterday on a place at 2401 South State street.

ORDERS TRACTION COMPANY TO PAY MEN 73 CENT RATE

Employers are required to pay a "market" price for labor, just as they pay for coal and other commodities, it was held yesterday by Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend. He granted a wage increase to eighty-two motormen and conductors of the Chicago and Interurban Traction company.

In reply to the plea of W. W. Crawford, receiver for the company, that its finances were low and that it could not easily pay the increased wage, Judge Friend declared that if it could not pay a reasonable wage and still make a profit, it should cease operation.

The men were paid 63 cents an hour, which was 10 cents an hour less than is paid employés of other city and interturban lines. The 73 cent rate was held fair under a recent ruling of an industrial arbitration board.

FEAR OF GOSSIP LEADS WIFE TO KILL SELF, BABY

For weeks Mrs. Harry Struno, 25 years old, of 2631 South Clifton Park avenue, brooded over the fear that her neighbors were gossiping about her.

"I just know they are talking about me," she often sobbed in confidence to her mother. "I heard one woman say that she thought I was an untidy housekeeper."

Yesterday morning Mrs. Struno's husband was awakened by a neighbor, who had detected the odor of gas.

Struno investigated. Upon the bathroom floor he found his wife dead. In her arms she clasped Helen, her 11 months old daughter, also dead. Gas was escaping from a jet. The keyhole had been plugged with paper. A coroner's jury decided the mother took her own life and that of her baby while temporarily deranged.

SENATORS WILL ACT MONDAY ON MELLON TAXES

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 26.—[Special.]—Normal and surtax rates will be called up in the senate for action Monday, according to plans announced today by Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the finance committee.

Although consideration of the tax on corporation earnings already has commenced, Senator Smoot said it was his intention to ask that the committee amendments on normal and surtax rates be given precedence.

Senator Smoot added that if the Mellon rates, as provided in the committee amendments, are rejected he then will offer a substitute amendment increasing the maximum surtax from 25 to probably 30 per cent. If the 30 per cent rate is voted down he intends to go to 32 per cent, then to 35 per cent and finally to 37 per cent.

Hopes to Keep It Down.

The Longworth plan maximum of the house bill is 37½ per cent, while the maximum of the Simmons plan of the Democrats is 40 per cent. Senator Smoot hopes to keep the maximum below either the Longworth or Simmons plans, but whether he can do so is considered doubtful.

Full publicity of tax returns is provided in two additional amendments to the bill introduced today in the senate. One was presented by Senator Dill [Dem., Wash.], and the other by Senator McKellar [Dem., Tenn.]. A somewhat similar amendment offered by Senator Norris [Rep., Neb.] also is before the senate. Sponsorship of the amendments by these senators indicates that the radicals in both parties will champion full publicity of tax returns as well as proceedings in contested tax cases.

Wants Everything Public.

The Dill amendment provides that "all returns and all proceedings, records and evidence made and used in connection with proceedings for the adjustment of returns shall constitute public records and shall be open to public inspection."

The McKellar amendment provides that tax returns "shall be open to public inspection by any citizen under rules and regulations prescribed by the secretary and approved by the President." It also provides that "all claims for abatement or refunds of taxes shall likewise be public property."

Another Dill amendment provides for striking out the new tax proposed by the finance committee on radio sets.

Summer Travel-Time Has Arrived!

Long sunny days and wonderful moonlit nights are already beginning to stir the pulse and turn your thought to the lure of touring.

Buying time is here! Don't delay. Come see these superb Nash Six Touring models.

Take one for a ride! Its striking beauty invites you to the wheel. Its smooth and powerful performance will amaze you.

Here's why! Nash gives more real intrinsic value and devotes more care to construction than any other builder of rival-priced cars.

As an example! All Nash connecting rods must total the same weight in each motor—with this weight equally distributed in each rod.

Each piston in each motor must weigh precisely the same—and is checked down to a ten-thousandth of an inch for variation in size.

Finally, a special testing machine detects even the slightest distortion in the piston and rod assembly—thereby assuring perpendicular piston-travel in the cylinder.

Come in today! This car's behavior during an hour on the road will sell you completely.

APPEAL MADE TO WEALTHY MEN FOR PORTRAIT

$40,000 Now In and $35,000 More Needed.

The fund which is being collected by the Art Institute, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and the Herald and Examiner for the purchase of the Gilbert Stuart painting of George Washington yesterday passed the $40,000 mark. Donations of yesterday amounted to $706.40.

The goal set by Mayor Dever's Committee of Seventy-five is $75,000. That amount must be raised before Chicago can boast of owning the historic picture of the nation's father. A bit of arithmetic shows $35,000 more necessary. The campaign has been in progress for about eight weeks. Of late the contributions have been small and few. Officials of the Art Institute and members of the committee yesterday decided that a few lines of appeal to the wealth of Chicago might help.

Just the Facts About It.

This, then, is the truth about the campaign.

Many patriotic Chicagoans have responded to the call, but patriotic Chicago, the city that sent thousands of soldiers to the colors in the war, the city that staged the greatest patriotic parade in history, the city that is known everywhere for its patriotism, has not given wholehearted support to the plan of buying the painting. The fact that $40,000 has been raised speaks well for any city, but it does not measure up to Chicago's name nor does it bear out Chicago's slogan of "I Will."

Here is an opportunity for our city to own a painting, which has been valued at $150,000 by art experts. It is a genuine Stuart, who was the leading painter of the eighteenth century. All doubt of the painting's lack of genuineness has been dispelled by a searching investigation. The Art Institute, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and the Herald and Examiner all vouch for the portrait.

Appeals to Wealthy.

"The millionaires of Chicago have not come forward," said Emil Schulze, head of the mayor's committee yesterday. "We have received thousands of single dollar subscriptions and a great many contributions from the wealthy, but after eight weeks of work we have only $40,000.

"I appeal to every millionaire in Chicago for a check for $1,000. Thirty-five millionaires can make this picture ours in two days."

Gifts of a Day.

The following contributions were received yesterday by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

GRANDPARENTS' CLUB.

Milson S. Florsheim, for Mary Elizabeth Florsheim and Nancy Jane Florsheim, $20.

J. Harry Jones for John Rolland Mathews, $10.

$100.

Cyrus H. McCormick.

$56.

Jahn and Ollier Engraving company and employés.

$25.

Chicago Carton company.

$20.

Employés of Schulze Baking company, west side plant.

$10.

Gordon Strong, John B. Drake, Philo A. Otis, Louis Rossel, W. N. Jarnagin, Edward K. and Ralph Renwick Jr., Stewart-Mowry Varnish company.

$7.50.

Anonymous.

Richard G. Schmid Jr.

$5.

Jeanette Reynolds, E. Woltersdorf, George W. Hall, M. D.; Mrs. George W. Reinecke, and the household art girls of the Carl Schurz school.

Three hundred and forty contributions of less than $5 were received yesterday. They are not listed here, but are on the official records at the Art institute.

A list of contributions received by THE TRIBUNE on April 24 was omitted from the issue of April 25. It is: P. E. Niles, $20; Mrs. A. S. Trude, for her eleven grandchildren, $11; Gamma chapter of the Sigma Alpha Iota sorority, $10; Woman's Relief Corps, $10; Anan Harmon chapter, G. A. R., $5.75; Thomas F. Mooney, $5; F. H. Millord, $5; I. C. Gary, M. D., $5; R. Lucchesi, $2; Anna Moore, $1; Frank H. Knapp, $1; Golden Rule Club of Logan square, $1; Miss Louise Peterson, $1; Mrs. W. H. Terrell, $1.

FRENCH FLYER MAKES LONG HOPS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 26.—Hopping off from Bucharest, "Pivolo," as Lieut. Pelletier-Oisy is affectionately known in the French aviation service, flew along the Aleppo railway across the Arabian desert, landing at Aleppo at 5 o'clock last evening, according to reports recived by the ministry of aviation. Today he is on his way to Bushire, Persia.

Flying straight across the Balkan mountains, "Pivolo" crossed Bulgaria, hitting the Black sea at Burgas, skirting the coast to the Bosphorus, following it to Constantinople, and then crossing into Asia.

Climbing to an altitude of 15,000 feet, "Pivolo" struck straight across Asia Minor, following the line of the Bagdad railway without alighting, and hitting the sea again at Alexandretta. Turning eastward, he speeded on to Aleppo.

After two days of flying Pivolo is half way to Karachi, India, where the British round the world flier was last reported, after three weeks en route.

DENIES HE TRIED TO POISON WIFE; GIRL MENTIONED

White Plains, N. Y., April 26.—Charged with having attempted to murder his wealthy wife by poisoning her food, Clarence O. Baring, eastern advertising representative for the Minneapolis Heat Regulating company, tonight was held without bail after having pleaded "guilty to the charge except as to the intent to kill."

The mild-mannered, aristocratic looking prisoner, who is 40 years old, maintains offices in the Grand Central Terminal building in New York City, and is reputed wealthy, was near collapse as he was arraigned, handcuffed to state troopers at Yonkers. A special grand jury was called for Monday.

All the authorities would reveal was that Mrs. Baring, a few years her husband's senior, filed the charges last April 14; that she was expected soon to become a mother; that a young woman living in the west was named in connection with the case.

Bridge Repairs Cause Rerouting of Street Cars

To permit of repairs being made upon the Harrison street bridge, all street cars routed across the structure will be detoured over Van Buren street for the next thirty days, beginning Monday, it was announced yesterday. West bound cars will move north in Wells street, west in Van Buren, and south to Harrison. East bound cars will switch to Van Buren at Clinton street and swing back to Harrison at Dearborn street.

Dolly Sisters Booked for Three Years in U. S.

PARIS, April 26.—The Dolly sisters today signed a contract with John Murray Anderson, producer of the Greenwich Village Follies, to leave Paris early this summer and proceed to America, where they are booked for three years.

MARTIN BATTLES BLINDING SNOW TO REACH CHIGNIK

Forced to Land Once to Get His Bearings.

Chignik, Alaska, April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Maj. Frederick L. Martin, leader of the United States army round the world flyers, who arrived here yesterday in his plane Seattle from Kanatak, Alaska, expected today to leave Monday for Dutch Harbor, Alaska, to rejoin his three comrades, who have been waiting for him there.

In a severe snowstorm Maj. Martin broke his flight of 150 miles from Kanatak by alighting in Kumlik bay, half way between.

Maj. Martin and his mechanician, Sergt. Alvin Harvey, buffeted head winds all the way here. The sea was rough and the snow was driven and whirled by a southeast wind as they left. This current, which was at the backs of the travelers, soon gave way to the head winds, which shot the snow into their faces.

Maj. Martin's Log an Epic.

Maj. Martin's log of the trip follows:

"Finally escaped Kanatak, cauldron of winds.

"Arose 3 a. m. Calm morning. Tide insufficient to float plane from retreat in creek.

"Constructed drag. Pulled plane out with Standard Oil tractor to bay by 12:30.

"Southeast wind since 11 made sea very rough. Endangered plane, as could not return to creek.

Flies at 400 Feet.

"Landed Kumlik bay for check position and escape severe snowstorm, 4:45. Left 5:15. Arrived Chignik 5:50.

"Trip terrible strain, as forced to follow shore line to check position.

"Maximum altitude 400 feet.

"Storms Kanatak terrible strain plane personnel.

"Luckily escaped disaster.

"Will join flight at Dutch Harbor."

Chignik is Maj. Martin's last stop on the North American continent. Dutch Harbor, 400 miles to the westward, is in the Aleutian islands.

Briton Forced to Land.

BOMBAY, India, April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Stuart MacLaren, British airman engaged in an attempt to fly around the world, was forced to land at Parlu, 172 miles from Ajmer Rajputana, western India while attempting to fly from Karachi to Nasirabad. He is not expected to arrive at Nasirabad for some days.

ROBBINS-ODELL WEDDING AMID BLUE AND GOLD

Reception Follows the Ceremony.

Blue, gold, and white formed the color scheme for the gowns of Miss Frances Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Robbins of 1180 Lake Shore drive, and her bridal party when she became the wife of William Rice Odell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Odell of 65 Cedar street, last night at the Fourth Presbyterian church. There the Rev. John Timothy Stone read the service.

The bride's gown was fashioned of white satin trimmed with bands of white beading in the Greek key pattern, and with a small cluster of orange blossoms at her left shoulder. The plain, unruffled tulle veil was caught to her head with narrow banding, and fell over the long court train. Miss Robbins carried a sheaf of Easter lilies.

Miss Isabelle Robbins, the bride's sister, wore gold satin trimmed with ostrich feathers of the same hue, and her bouquet was of long stemmed yellow roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Anna Marquis, Miss Lydia Hibbard, Miss Clarissa Donnelly, and Miss Beatrix Thorne of Chicago, Miss Julia Porter of Niagara Falls, and Miss Sarah Johnston of Baltimore, wore gowns similar to Miss Isabelle Robbins' of robin's egg blue moire, trimmed with matching ostrich. Their flowers were long white roses with ferns, and their coronets were rhinestone. Miss Marjorie Sawyer Goodman, daughter of the bride's sister, Mrs. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, as flower girl for her aunt, was attired in a beruffled frock of pale yellow tulle with a head band and sash of vari-colored flowers, and she carried a small formal bouquet.

A reception at the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Robbins followed the ceremony.

Richard D. Sears of Boston was Mr. Odell's best man, and Lawrence Williams, Charles H. Wilmerding, J. Sanford Otis, William C. Hibbard Jr., and Arthur Dixon of Chicago; Julian C. Bolton of Cleveland, and George A. Brownell of New York ushered.

200 COREANS DIE AS SHIP COLLIDES WITH JAP VESSEL

TOKIO, April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Two hundred Corean students were drowned off the west coast of Corea near Chinnampo when a steamship taking them for a visit to a group of Japanese destroyers anchored off shore collided with one of the destroyers and capsized. Owing to the rough seas only a small number of students could be rescued.

BODY OF MISSING WOMAN ARTIST FOUND IN LAKE

Believe Despondency Led to Suicide.

The body of Jeanette Stedman, an artist, 238 East Huron street, was found yesterday in the lake at the foot of Ridgewood avenue by two boys, Nicholas Kauser, 7662 Sheridan road, and Robert McDonald, 7847 Greenview avenue. The body was recovered by the Rogers Park police. It is believed Miss Stedman committed suicide while despondent over ill health and financial troubles.

Once Noted Artist.

The body was identified by Mrs. Walter Willits, 238 East Huron street, with whom Miss Stedman lived. Mrs. Willits told the police that at one time Miss Stedman was one of the leading landscape artists of Paris. She disappeared on Feb. 23. At that time her sister, Mrs. A. W. Allen of Peoria, Ill., came here and with the police searched the hospitals for her. Later Mrs. Allen engaged Attorney Fred Lowenthal, 127 North Dearborn street, who took up the search.

Mrs. Bertha Kribben and Mrs. Ellen Hill, both of the Cosmopolitan School of Music, 368 South Wabash avenue, and friends of Miss Stedman, were unable to throw any light on what prompted her to end her life.

According to Mrs. Hill, Miss Stedman was a capable artist, but was unable to continue her work because of ill health. It was in Paris that she suffered a broken leg in an accident. Since then she has been forced to use a cane.

Member of Three Arts.

Miss Stedman was a member of the Three Arts club, 1400 North Dearborn. She was 44 years old, and well known in the artists' colony. When Miss Stedman disappeared from her rooms a purse containing $25 was found by the police.

Miss Stedman considered a life portrait and a copy of Madonna as two of her best works. Frequently, before her disappearance, she told Mrs. Leona Abrams, a close friend and former schoolmate, that "when I am gone I want you to have those two works." A few days later Mrs. Abrams received the portraits.

Edward A. Dato's Advice to the Man Who Would Accumulate Wealth

IT is too bad that eighty-two men out of every hundred die penniless. Because financial independence is the heritage of every man. Every one of us has the opportunity to acquire wealth and share the comforts of the successful. You have but to take advantage of the opportunity today—look ahead now, and definitely lay your plans as you wish them to be.

You may acquire wealth in three ways: [1] Inheritance; [2] Speculation; [3] Systematic Investment. Inheritance is uncontrollable and applies to only a few: Speculation is too risky to be considered: Systematic investment is the only way that works every time it is tried. And you will be glad to know that the systematic investment idea for accumulating wealth is really very simple.

Your first step is to plan your living so that you spend a little less than you earn each day—and save the difference. Do this systematically as a part of your every day life. Even though you save only a few cents a day you will quickly build up a surplus that will be the foundation for your fortune.

Take this money and make a small down payment on some good undeveloped Chicago Real Estate. Be sure to pick property located in a neighborhood that is on the upward trend, having the advantages of convenient transportation and accessibility. And be sure to make your deal with a Real Estate firm that is unquestionably reliable. You will be able to arrange for monthly easy payment terms as low as a few cents per day. These monthly payments, even though they are small, quickly mount up and before you know it your lot will be paid for.

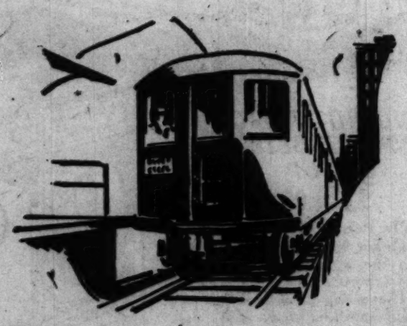
Chances are that even while you're making the first installment payments on your lot, its value will jump and make you a handsome profit. Real Estate is the basic form of wealth and good Chicago Real Estate has made countless fortunes for the men who bought when the land was in its undeveloped stages.

It was only a few short years ago that property in the Wilson Avenue and Broadway "L" Terminal District went begging at from $50 to $60 per foot. Then this property was sand and shrubbery. Today this property is the location of one of Chicago's busiest high grade sections and values have doubled hundreds of times. The very extension of the "L" made millions for property owners in this district.

Similar opportunities exist for you today. A new Northwestern "L" terminal is soon to be built at Niles Center. Property here is now undeveloped and can be purchased at lowest prices. It is in the direct course of Chicago's greatest growth and should eventually become an even greater district than Wilson Avenue. It has a much larger territory to draw from, in all directions and it is not hemmed in by 200 acres of cemeteries on the west, or the Lake on the east.

The new Dempster Street "L" Terminal at Niles Center will turn sand lots into gold fields for the men who buy now. You can accumulate your wealth here.

The firm of Krenn & Dato is a gigantic institution whose fundamental aim is to enable those in modest circumstances to obtain, at an honest cost, good Chicago Real Estate that will make them financially independent. Phone for an appointment—arrange to see the property—learn the true facts—you will not obligate yourself.



Follow the "L" to Fortune

PADDOCK SETS WORLD MARK AT DRAKE

SARAZEN TAKES LEAD OVER BRITISH GOLF CHAMP

THREE UP AFTER FIRST HALF OF 72 HOLE MATCH

Record Gallery Follows Title Opponents.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.—[Special.]—Before the largest gallery that has watched a golf match here this season, Gene Sarazen, American professional golf champion, piled up a lead of three holes on Arthur G. Havers, British open title holder, at the end of thirty-six holes of play today at Cedarbrook Country club. The match is at seventy-two holes, and the last half will be played tomorrow over the course of the Westchester-Biltmore Country club, New York. The match is for the unofficial championship of the world.

There was no comparison between the games of the rivals today. While Sarazen did not play as well as he can, he was superior to the Britisher.

Havers Off on Putting.

Two clubs in the bag of the Englishman became unmanageable, and it was not until late in the afternoon round that he regained control. His putter refused steadfastly to obey his will and putts accumulated in a surprising number. Then his mashie balked and his approaches were seldom up.

Sarazen took 76 for the morning round and 77 for his eighteen hole journey in the afternoon, but even these comparatively high totals were beyond the reach of Havers. Sarazen never was pressed.

Long Lead for Gene.

At the turn on the afternoon round, Sarazen was 5 up, but on the final home trip Havers braced and cut this lead to two holes at the seventeenth. A trapped approach on the eighteenth cost the Englishman the final hole. Sarazen was aided by several stymies which cost his opponent four holes. The cards:

FIRPO REFUSES TO FIGHT ROJAS AFTER JOHNSON

BUENOS AIRES, April 26.—Owing to the fact that Tex Rickard has refused to postpone the bout between Quintin Romero Rojas and Floyd Johnson until Luis Firpo was given an opportunity to fight Rojas, Firpo said today he would not fight Rojas afterwards. He added that his offer to meet the Chilean heavyweight, therefore, was withdrawn.

Firpo declined to say definitely whether he would change his mind with regard to accepting other offers to fight in the United States, including a proposition made by James J. Johnston to fight George Godfrey and Harry Wills.

KENTUCKY LIFTS BAN ON OWNER AND 2 JOCKEYS

Lexington, Ky., April 26.—C. T. Worthington, owner, and William Kelsay and Walter Taylor, jockeys, have been reinstated by the state racing commission. Worthington and Kelsay were suspended last fall after the victory of Worthmore, Kelsay up, in the Breeders' futurity, in which it was asserted the horse showed a surprising reversal of form. Taylor was suspended for his ride on Betty Beall, also in the Breeders' futurity.

Hirsch Center Swimmers Defeat Oak Park Y.M.C.A.

Hirsch Center swimming team last night defeated the Oak Park Y. M. C. A. squad, 45 to 23, in a dual meet, the south side boys winning first places in seven of the eight events. Northwestern university's crack relay team gave an exhibition, equalling the intercollegiate mark for the 500 yard relay.

In the Wake of the News

INTERNATIONAL SPORT.

THIS is a big year in international sport. First, of course, in variety of competition, come the Olympic games, in which our athletes meet the pick of the world.

Not less in public interest are the Davis cup contests, where our chances threaten to be dimmed by the "baiting" of Champion Tilden into voluntary retirement, and the series of three match races in which the great French horse Epinard will appear on American tracks.

Then there are incursions of American pro and amateur golfers after the British titles and probable return visits by Britons for our championships. Several other features are in the making.

America has fared well—taken more than its share of laurels—in recent years. During the world war and immediately thereafter, The Wake felt we had an advantage because war exacted a less heavy toll of our young manhood than it did from European countries.

Time has almost wiped out that margin. We may accept what victories we now acquire without qualm. If the Davis cup situation rights itself we have no fear results will not show our proportion of victories.

The Song of Peter Pan.

Harken to Peter Pan's playing!
The love song comes over the hill
Into the amethyst valley
And into the heavens so still.
Harken to Peter Pan's playing!
The firefly has lighted the rose,
The bluebells are ringing so spritely,

The wood nymph is poised on her toes.
The red moon and millions of bright stars
And quaint little gold daffodilies;
Enshrouded the world in a silver mist,
Over the pond and its lilies.
Harken to Peter Pan's playing!
The love song comes over the hill
And the world on its toes stops to listen
And even our heartbeats are still.

Derby Reservation.

Dear Wake: Every one who has attended the Kentucky Derby of recent years knows the terrific demand for hotel space. Many rooms are reserved a year in advance. On the day before the Derby last May, Bert Humler, a well known and well liked man in Louisville, received this wire from a Chicago friend: "Kindly reserve for me best room available with bath; arriving Saturday."

Humler wired back: "Glad to be of assistance. Have reserved attractive room and bath for you at the Sinton, Cincinnati." Tyrone.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Detroit, Mich., April 26.—[Special.]—Rough usage wore the White Sox ragged today and the scrappy Tygers mopped up a 16 to 7 affair that started with a riot of base hits and passes and almost ended in a riot of fans because Lou Blue, thinking the game was over, tossed the ball away and let Maurice Archdeason make the circuit on an infield hit.

For weird and peculiar happenings, even exclusive of the confusion at the finish, the affair was a record breaker. Five pitchers performed and three were terrible flops, eight errors were perpetrated, two collisions occurred in the outfield and the upshot of it all was that a good share of the 25,000 present walked out before the show was completed.

The Grand Finale.

The grand finale in the ninth started with a pass to Falk and Pratt's fumble on French. Then Cobb and Heilmann bumped on Crouse's fly and it was muffed to load the sacks.

A double play followed and next came Archdeacon with a roller in front of the plate. He stepped down to first with his customary briskness and Ump Owens ruled him safe.

Blue, without consulting the arbiter, gave the ball a healthy toss into the Tyger dugout, and with his mates started running off the field. The crowd surged onto the diamond and Archdeacon kept going. By the time he reached third he was lost in a milling mass of fans, but he wormed his way along until he had reached the plate. Meanwhile the Tygers had awakened to what was going on and frantic efforts were made to recover the ball, but it could not be found.

Mr. Cobb Gets Excited.

The fiery Cobb was the most excited man in ten counties. With his gang in his wake he rushed out to Ump Owens to find out what the shooting was about. In the twinkling of an eye there were at least 5,000 fans packed around the scene of the argument. After several minutes of gesticulating by Cobb and some robust booing by the patrons, police took a hand and drove the fans back of the base lines so that Hooper could ground out to complete the struggle.

Most of the Sox troubles were caused by wild and woolly hurling. Ted Blankenship started and his mates presented him with a three run lead in the first, but he couldn't hold it. He was wild and ineffective and with the help of a muff by Collins the Tygers collected four runs in their opening half.

Blankenship Gets the Air.

Blankenship was yanked after the first batter had knocked him for a single in the second and Mike Cvengros made his first appearance of the season. He finished that inning without mishap, but in the third, after the Sox had tied it at four apiece, Mike went to the dogs completely and five more Tygers nicked the pan. Another scored in the fourth and in the fifth came another deluge of five runs, three of them resulting from Mostil and Hooper colliding. Mike quit right there.

Starting the sixth, Leverett went to the turret and turned out a good piece of work, but in the meantime his mates could make no headway against Halloway, who permitted only three hits in the last six innings. The Tyger hurling in the previous rounds was handled by Whitehall, who wasn't able to fool the Sox with his southpaw stuff.

The most active gent in the Tyger attack was Harry Heilmann, who showed no respect for the feelings of Blankenship and Cvengros. Heilmann hit Ted for a single after two passes in the first inning and Pratt followed with a double. In his next appearance in the third Heilmann doubled. Later he singled and doubled again and all his blows brought results in the run column.

BRIGHT STARS OF DRAKE RELAYS

DE HART HUBBARD. DON KINSEY. CHARLEY PADDOCK.

Among the many features that made the fifteenth annual relay games at Drake university, held in the National stadium at Des Moines, Ia., one of the greatest ever held there was the sensational work of Charley Paddock, California sprinter; De Hart Hubbard, University of Michigan jumper, and Don Kinsey, University of Illinois hurdler. Paddock, who was an extra attraction at the meet, took part in two special events and won them both. He broke the world's record in the 125 yard dash, covering the distance in :12, which was four-tenths of a second faster than the record made by C. H. Sherrill of Yale, which had stood for thirty-five years. Paddock also won the 100 yard dash in :09 9-10, winning handily. Hubbard won the hop, step, and jump, breaking the Drake relay record. He covered 46 feet 1 1-2 inches. He won the running broad jump with 24 feet 2 3-4 inches. Kinsey won the 120 high hurdles in :15 6-10.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The fleet two mile relay team of Boston college raced to track glory that carried with it international victory and a world record today in the outstanding performance of the closing day of the Pennsylvania relay carnival on Franklin field.

More than 40,000 thrilled to the smashing triumph of Coach Jack Ryder's speedy quartet over Georgetown, Cambridge university of England, and Penn State in the two mile relay championship, bringing to a brilliant climax the gigantic athletic spectacle, one of the greatest in years, which, in its closing hours also saw the toppling of one American and six carnival records in a maze of sensational feats of speed and brawn.

New World's Record.

The world's record time of 7 minutes 47 3-5 seconds, eclipsed by one and a fifth seconds, the former standard, set in the same event a year ago by Penn State's fliers, who disappointed their followers by finishing fourth and last today. It was the fifth time in the history of this event and the third successive year in which the world's record for the distance has been shattered.

The light blue of Cambridge, lowered in defeat for the second time in the meet, was carried to third place by Lee, star English anchor runner, who flashed a brilliant half in 1:55 4-5 to overtake Helffrich, Penn State captain, in the final drive down the stretch.

Penn State was regarded as a favorite before the races, but the Nittany lions suffered a heart-breaking stroke of ill-fortune when Fitzpatrick, their second runner, fell at his take off, dropped back to last place, and lost practically fifty yards before he handed over the baton to Schuyler Enck, hero of State's 1923 victory over Oxford.

Liddell Loses Again.

America made it a clean sweep over Britain in the two days of international competition when Chester Bowman, Syracuse university star, flashed to spectacular victory in the 100 yard dash, in which Eric Liddell, little Scotsman who holds the British sprint title, could do no better than fourth. Besides Bowman, who was clocked in ten seconds flat, Liddell also was forced to trail Louis Clarke of Johns Hopkins, victor over the Briton yesterday at 220 yards, and Conway, Penn State, who got third place by inches from his noted rival.

All told, including the four setbacks administered to Britain, the Stars and Stripes were triumphant in seven international tests during the two days of competition that brought together more than 4,000 stars from over 500 schools and colleges.

Canada's colors trailed in defeat in the other international features, and Huntington school of Boston, which turned back the invasion of Hamilton Collegiate institute yesterday in the interscholastic medley relay championship, conquered its dominion rival again today by winning the two mile interscholastic title event in the American record time of 8:17 1-5. Hamilton finished last in its other bid for honors, the one mile high school championship, which was won by Brooklyn Tech.

Occidental Team Wins.

Occidental college of Los Angeles, after finishing a close second to Pennsylvania in the half mile race, swept to its first triumph of the meet in the one mile class B championship, establ-

The Question.

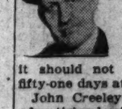
Do you think fifty-one days of horse racing in a stretch will hurt the game in Illinois?

Where Asked.

Monroe and Clark streets.

The Answers.

T. V. Beckwith, 208 South La Salle street, real estate—I am much in favor of the fifty-one days of horse racing. It will not hurt the game. Years ago they had three months of racing at a stretch. It is a clean sport, and there is no reason why it should not continue longer than fifty-one days at a meeting.



John Creeley, 602 Garrick building, advertising business—It will make business very good in Chicago, and it will bring tourists. Horse racing is a very clean sport, and it could go longer than fifty-one days at a stretch. I do not think a fifty-one day racing program would hurt the sport in Illinois.

Nezsie Blumenthal, 1841 Wabash avenue, tire salesman—Horse racing is one of the best of sports. Horse racing is clean, and I am for a race meeting in Chicago over a three month period. A meeting of fifty-one days' duration will in no way harm the sport in Illinois. The longer the races the more people will turn out to see them.

M. J. Mullaney, 1700 West Madison street, clothier—I think that fifty-one days of horse racing will be a good thing. It will help business. It will bring many people to the city and it should continue for three months if the race track promoters see fit. A fifty-one day period of racing, I should say, will not be too long for our city.

Ben Rhams, 1064 West 13th street, salesman — I am in favor of ninety days of racing. The longer the races are run the more people will go to them. Such a meeting, which brings many people to the city, will be good for the business of Chicago, and I hope they have a long period of racing here this summer.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Des Moines, Ia., April 26.—[Special.]—One world's record was shattered, a national interscholastic mark lowered, and four other records for the event went by the boards with the holding of the fifteenth annual relay games of Drake university in the natural stadium here today.

Charley Paddock, formerly of the University of Southern California, and who is generally recognized as the fastest sprinter in the world, ran 125 yards in :12. This performance bettered the former world's record of :12 4-10 made by C. H. Sherrill of Yale university back in 1889.

In smashing the record three sprinters were given handicaps of four yards. Young of Drake and Evringham of Iowa set the pace for the Californian, who caught them at seventy-five yards and beat them to the tape by two yards. Charley left his holes in faultless fashion, gathered quickly, and ran smooth all the way. He made his customary leap for the tape and two of the three watches agreed upon 12 seconds flat.

Officials O. K. New Mark.

Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan, who was active referee, had the course measured with a steel tape and then placed his signature, along with those of other officials, on the application blank for a new world's record.

Later in the games, Paddock ran 100 yards in :09 9-10. At the 50 yard mark the muscles of Charley's right leg tied up, and rather than take any chances of pulling a tendon, Paddock did not extend himself. He was given a rousing ovation as he trotted around the track after his record breaking performance in the 125 yard dash.

Next in importance to the performance of Paddock was that of the Cedar Rapids High school quarter mile relay team, coached by Leo Novak. This quartet, composed of Knapp, Potts, Loftis and Cuhel, the latter a football player of ability, stepped the distance in :45 6-10. The performance lowered the national interscholastic record of :46 8-10 for the event. In 1910 the University High school team of Chicago hung up the old record, which has stood the attacks successfully in the intervening years.

Hubbard Wins Two Events.

De Hart Hubbard of the University of Michigan was among those who established new Drake relay records. The Wolverine bettered his mark of 45 feet 2 inches, made in yesterday's running hop, step and jump trials, by leaping 46 feet 1½ inches. Hubbard, however, was unable to better his record breaking effort of 24 feet 2¾ inches, made in yesterday's preliminaries.

In the pole vault Earl McKown of Kansas State Teachers cleared the bar at 13 feet for a new Drake relay record. The former mark was 12 feet 10 inches, and was made by Dean Brownell of Illinois, last year. McKown tried to clear 13 feet 3 inches but the soft condition of the runways handicapped his efforts. His new record is 1 inch below the national intercollegiate record, held by R. A. Gardner of Yale.

In the finals of the shotput, Purma of Kansas State Teachers, tossed the ball 43 feet 8¾ inches. This performance bettered the mark of 43 feet ½ inch, made by Hartman of Nebraska in yesterday's trials.

Two Mile Relay Record Broken.

The other Drake relay record to be broken today was in the two-mile college relay, which was won by Monmouth. The Illinois boys stepped the distance in 8:10 3-10, which bettered the old mark of 8:10 5-10, made by the same team in last year's games.

DeHart Hubbard of Michigan, and Carl Schjoll of Minnesota, were the only double individual first place winners. The Wolverine won first places in the running broad jump and running hop, step and jump, while the Gopher was returned victor in the javelin and discus throws. Milton Angier of Illinois, who is recovering from a sprained knee, and who holds the American record in the event at 203 feet 9¼ inches, had to be content with third place. The Orange and Blue athlete hurled the shaft 187 feet 9 inches.

Illinois in Double Victories.

Illinois was the only team to win double victories in the university section of the relay races. Coach Harry Gill's boys won first places in the half mile and four mile events. The downstaters made a strong bid for honors in the one mile, but the strong Iowa quartet was a trifle too strong. Charley Brookins, the Hawkeye anchor, ran a strong relay and stood off the challenges of Fessenden, who made a gallant effort to overtake one of the best quarter milers in the country.

Northwestern, coached by Frank Hill, won another notable victory in the two mile, although an unavoidable accident on the first turn of the opening relay prevented a closer race. In some unaccountable manner Bendon of Creighton fell on the tape. Milner of Iowa and Cochran of Michigan, who were running directly behind, stumbled and fell over the prostrate Creighton runner. All regained their feet, but the spill lost all three teams so much yardage none was able to get within striking distance of the Purple after the accident. Reinke, the last Wolverine runner, made a great effort to catch Martin, the Northwestern anchor, but fell short by twenty yards.

Wet Weather Slows Work.

It drizzled this morning, and the sky was overcast when the first event was called. Later in the afternoon the sun broke through the clouds, but too late to dry up the course. Despite the unfavorable conditions, a gathering of 10,000 sat in the stands to see one of the country's leading track and field events.

STANFORD SWATS CALIFORNIA U.'S TRACK CHAMPS

Palo Alto, Cal., April 26.—[Associated Press.]—The University of California, whose track teams have won the national intercollegiate championship for the last three years, was buffeted, swept aside and hurled down to defeat this afternoon in its thirty-first annual track meet with its most ardent rival, Stanford university.

Stanford won by a score of 83 to 48. It was the first Stanford victory at track since 1919. Stanford authorities had announced before the meet that in the event their team won, it would enter the eastern college meet at Harvard the last of May.

Stanford won eleven out of the fifteen events. Of California's first places, three were field events, the javelin, pole vault and broad jump, and the other the two mile run. Hartranft, weight star, and Leismer, dazzling hurdler, both won two first places for Stanford.

Hartranft, intercollegiate record holder in the shot put, won that event with 49 feet 8½ inches. The old record was 47 feet 8¾ inches. He then threw the discus 146 feet 11¼ inches, against a previous record of 137 feet 4 inches. Miller ran the quarter mile in 49 5-10.

V. Dodson won the javelin throw for California with a heave of 190 feet. The crowd was estimated at 25,000.

JOCKEY CLUB AT HAWTHORNE TO BE FORMED SOON

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Hawthorne Jockey club will be formed this week, it being the final step in the organization work leading to the summer racing season at Hawthorne, which opens on July 3.

John Irwin, local provision broker, who is chairman of the jockey club organization committee, made the announcement last night, adding that enough charter members had already affiliated with the club to assure the building of the clubhouse at Hawthorne, work on which he expected would be under way by May 1.

Several Chicago sportsmen have been mentioned for the presidency of the club, among them Mr. Irwin, but it is understood that he is slated for either secretary or treasurer.

Social Side of Racing.

The jockey club will have charge of the social side of the racing, and while entirely separate from the Chicago Business Men's Racing association, which will conduct the racing, will have a voice in all questions of policy, and the general program to be followed in the permanent restoration of thoroughbred racing in Illinois.

Several new members were added to the organization committee yesterday by Mr. Irwin, among them being Harman Mack, John Leahey, Harry M. Lubitner, George L. Bollard, Joseph Prinz, Charles Krutckoff, Harry Fish, Henry P. Murphy, E. Reinhold, John L. Bauler, and Benjamin Greene.

Condition Books Ready Soon.

General Manager Joseph A. Murphy of the Business Men's Racing association notified the Chicago office yesterday that he will have the condition books for the first two weeks of racing ready for the printer within a few days and that they will be ready for distribution on May 10.

Two Chicago racing stables made reservations for the Hawthorne meeting yesterday. August Riley, owner of the Friars Inn string, reserved fifteen stalls, and Al Brumeister, acting for the International stables, asked for room for eighteen horses. Both stables are now quartered at Louisville awaiting the opening of the season at Churchill Downs.

Mr. Riley has been commissioned by well known Chicago business man to purchase several horses, it is said, for the beginning of a stable which may become among the more pretentious in the country.

GRANTHAM AGAIN LANDS IN FAVOR AS COMING STAR

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

It appears that George Grantham has "arrived." Players of both the St. Louis and Cincinnati clubs, all of the Cubs and a majority of the fans who have seen him in action at the Cub keystone sack are predicting a great year for the Kingman, Ariz., kid, who, after the disastrous city series of last fall between the Cubs and Sox, seemed certain to return to the bushes.

If Grantham does come through, and at this early stage of the National league race there is every indication he will be one of the bright stars of the year, he can thank Manager Will Killefer. Killefer stood by Grantham in the midst of all of his disfavor with the fans last year, and even battled, it is said, with the board of directors of the Cubs to retain the youngster on the squad.

Fades in Mid-Season.

Coming up from the Omaha club of the Western league at the start of the 1923 season, Grantham for the first few weeks gave every indication of becoming a star. He had the difficult task of making himself over from a third sacker to a second baseman, and appeared to have the position mastered, when suddenly in mid-season he weakened. The final months of the 1923 race saw an unsteady Grantham, and to cap the climax he had the misfortune to fumble away two of the city series games for the Cubs.

Fans were howling for George's blood, but Manager Killefer stuck. "I'll make him a star, or he won't stick in baseball," the Cub pilot declared.

A spring at the training camp made a wonderful improvement in Grantham. George has changed his style of batting under Killefer's coaching, while the veteran infielder, Bobby Wallace, took the young gent in hand and taught him the whys and wherefores of de luxe second basing.

Greatest Change in Batting.

The change in Grantham's batting, perhaps, has been the greatest. George hit for a mark of .281 in 152 games last year. In eleven games to date he is socking the ball for a merry mark of .435. He hit eight home runs during the entire last season, but already this year he has three circuit smashes to his credit.

In the eleven games to date, George has been to bat forty times, has hit safely seventeen times and scored twelve runs. Besides the three homers, he has pounded out two triples, three doubles and nine singles. He also has six bases on balls and three sacrifices to his credit.

Grantham aspires to lead the league in stolen bases. Last year he hung up forty-three stolen sacks, which just fell shy of the record set by Max Carey of Pittsburgh. This season, George has tried for stolen bases nine times, and has succeeded on four occasions.

Slow Grounders Only Weakness.

His fielding also has improved to a great extent. The only weakness George displays now is the inclination to field slow rolling grounders with indifference. His great speed enables him to chase down many hard chances and convert them to outs, and he not only covers the infield, but hoofs it back into the outer gardens in quest of pop flies.

While the rain yesterday caused the postponement until June 23 of the fourth and final game of the series with the Cardinals, the Cubs still are in third place. Killefer's men hope to leave Chicago for a short western trip next Sunday at the top of the heap, and are hopeful of a clean sweep during the week.

The Pittsburgh Pirates open a four game series on the north side this afternoon. Grover Alexander or Tony Kaufmann are ready to pitch for the Cubs, while the Pittsburgh asignment probably will fall to Wilbur Cooper or the ancient Lee Meadows.

WABASH Y.M.C.A. CELEBRATES ITS PAST VICTORIES

Athletes of Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A. participated last night in the eleventh annual athletic program at the Wabash Y. gym. The Wabash teams won third place in the intercity junior swimming meet, third place in the intermediate division of the gymnastic tournament and two divisional basketball titles.

Morton Seniors, Austin Juniors Win Track Meet

Morton Seniors captured first place in their dual meet with Austin at Cicero, taking 59½ points to Austin's 46½. The Austin Juniors were winners, 40 to 37.

Capt. Walter Anderson of Austin, was high point man of the meet, tallying 23 points, getting first in the 50 and 100 yard dashes, and the 60 yard high and low hurdles, and third in the broad jump. Mazenkas of Morton, got first in the pole vault and second in the high and low hurdles.

Fred Delaney of Austin was high point scorer winning the 50 and 100 yard dashes, the 60 yard low hurdles, trying for second in the high jump, and placing third in the broad jump.

CHICAGO "Y" TO TEACH SCHOOLBOYS TO SWIM IN SPRING VACATION

SEVEN thousand grammar school boys are going to learn how to swim during school vacation week, April 28 to May 3, if the Chicago Y. M. C. A., through its eight departments can teach them. Sears Roebuck "Y" alone has 1,461 applicants. These boys are from 136 different schools. They have their parents' consent to take free lessons at the Y. M. C. A. department.

Some experts figure that for every thirty who learn to swim, at least one life is saved, this would mean the saving of 233 lives.

Every boy who learns to swim the length of the tank, or 60 feet, will receive one of the national Y. M. C. A. swimming buttons.

Central "Y" will use the week to teach swimming to every one interested over the radio station WJJD at 6:30 p. m. and again at 7 next morning.

SOX NOTES

DETROIT, Mich., April 26.—[Special.]—The Sox will go back at the Tygers tomorrow just as though nothing ever happened.

After the fifth Crengros didn't wait to be told that he was through. He simply walked off the field into the clubhouse.

Bill Barrett stole home in the first inning, and, to all appearances, had his foot on the plate before Bassler got the ball, but Ump Holmes, standing on the wrong side of the plate, called him out. Barrett started to kick lustily, but Evers chased him away. It's hard to imagine John dodging arguments with umpires.

Bigney hit a triple in the fifth, but it wasn't legitimate. It was merely a fly ball, and Hooper came racing in for it, but he came too far, and the ball sailed over his head. It occurred just after Heilmann had driven two men home with a two bagger.

Lou Comiskey, treasurer of the Sox, came over from Battle Creek to see the game. Lou picked a bum day to see his dad's team perform.

American Olympic Rugby Players Lose to British

TWICKENHAM, England, April 26.—The American Olympic rugby football team was defeated by the British Harlequins today, 21 to 11.

The local team put its strongest fifteen in the field and won by three goals and two tries to one goal and two tries. It was a hard game, the tackling throughout being tremendously keen. A heavy rain in the morning had made the ground wet and hence the ball was greasy!

A bad accident occurred in the first half, J. M. Currie of the Harlequins breaking his leg in a collision with one of the Americans.

LOGANS HELD HITLESS AS NASH COPS, 1 TO 0

Kenosha, Wis., April 26.—[Special.]—Nash Motors blasted the lid off the Midwest league race here by blanking the Logan Squares of Chicago, 1 to 0, in seven innings. Wet grounds prevented the teams from continuing. Tom McGuire, veteran spitball artist, covered himself with all kinds of glory by turning in a no-hit, no run contest. King Lear was the star with a home run wallop that cleared the center field wall in the third for the lone tally. Score:

Although played on a rain soaked field, the game was of midsummer caliber, Jimmy Baxter keeping Beloit's hits well scattered, while Phillips, too, was effective. Joe Doyle's homer over center field fence and three double plays aided in providing a day of thrills.

U. S. JAVELIN RECORD BEATEN AT GEORGIA TECH

Atlanta, Ga., April 26.—One American record was bettered and several new southern conference marks set in the annual Georgia Tech relay carnival here today.

Priester of Mississippi A. A. and M. college broke his own southern record and lowered the American record when he hurled the javelin 205.04 feet. The present national record, which has stood for a number of years, 203.5. The meet, however, was not under the supervision of the Amateur Athletic association, and therefore the records established today will not displace former ones.

Mississippi A. A. and M. was the sensation of the meet, winning every relay and placing in every other event in which its team was entered. More than forty schools of the south, represented by approximately 500 athletes, participated in the meet.

The Maroons scored two runs in the first, when Forkel's circuit drive brought in Howell. His in pinches produced the other Chicago tallies in the fifth and sixth, with Forkel figuring. In the second Purdue eked out two runs on a lone hit by Allsopp, stolen bases by Allsopp and Pierce, and some loose plays. ILLINOIS, 4; WISCONSIN, 1.

Madison, Wis., April 26.—Wally Roettger's offerings were too much for the Badgers and Illinois won the game, 4 to 1. It was extremely cold and few spectators stayed to witness the finish. Ragged fielding gave the Badgers scoring chances, but Roettger tightened in the pinches. He struck out nine men. The Illini bunched enough hits in the sixth inning to bring in three runs. Score:

NOTRE DAME SHUTS OUT LOYOLA, 5 TO 0

Notre Dame, Ind., April 26.—[Special.]—Loyola was held to five scattered hits and Notre Dame hopped on Lefty McGraw for seven bunched binges and a 5 to 0 victory. McGrath pitched airtight ball for the locals, being in trouble only in the initial inning. After two visitors had hit, McGrath walked Trahan, but a sparkling double play, Sheehan to Prendergast, and Sutherland's easy infield roller retired the side. Stange relieved McGrath in the seventh and set the visitors down without a hit for three innings. Score:

DES MOINES, Ia., April 26.—[Special.]—Dean Brownell of Illinois, holder of the world's indoor record in the pole vault at 13 feet, ½ inch, may be lost to America's Olympic team.

Brownell injured his right shoulder while preparing for the dual meet with California recently. Although he won the event against the Golden Bears, he has been unable to vault with any degree of success since.

LITTLE FELLOWS LAG IN OLYMPIC DRIVE FOR FUNDS

The small subscribers are the ones that are lagging in the drive to raise Chicago's quota of the U. S. Olympic fund, according to the local chairman, Everts Wrenn.

"Our big donators are responding very well," Mr. Wrenn said, "and I think the thousands of Chicagoans whose share runs from $5 to $25 will start coming in as once, but they have been lagging in the early part of the drive."

All subscriptions should be mailed to Everts Wrenn, 511 Gas building, or to William R. Dawes, Central Trust Company of Illinois. Some of the more recent subscriptions follow:

$2,000—R. T. Crane.

$1,000—Stanley Field, W. V. Kelley, Robert Lamont [American Steel Foundries company], Potter Palmer.

$500—Samuel Insull, Intercollegiate Conference A. A. [$500.50], Norge Ski club, University of Chicago.

$300—Northwestern university, Charles H. Swift, Marsh & McLennon.

$150—George F. Porter.

100—Hugh Blythe, Colin C. H. Fyffe, Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, Marvin Hughitt Jr., George F. Harding, Holabird & Roche, Harold McCormick, Col. A. A. Sprague, Maj. Frederic McLaughlin.

$50—Central A. A. U. [$55], Danish-American A. A., Homer L. Dixon, Earl H. Reynolds.

$25—W. B. Storey, Courier-Lee Warehouse company, Griswold & Walker.

Dana M. Evans, athletic director at Northwestern university, announced to Mr. Wrenn that the net proceeds of the official Olympic wrestling tryouts for Wisconsin and Illinois, to be held at Patton gymnasium of Evanston April 30 and May 1, will go to the Chicago Olympic fund.

The tryouts will be open to the general public at moderate admission charges. Special accommodations are being made for 2,500 spectators.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

Nearly all games are won by play—good play by the declarer or the other kind by his adversaries. Comparatively few deals will secure game if not handled correctly.

The deals which follow illustrate some beautiful plays which are quite out of the ordinary.

THE HANDS.

Score: East and west, 10; north and south, 0. North dealt and bid one spade; east two diamonds; south passed; west bid two hearts, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

11	6S	D2	D6	8S
12	7S	DJ	D7	QS
13	KS	D5	D10	HJ

West secured nine tricks.

West did not dare to allow his partner's bid of two diamonds to stand and tried hearts rather than no trump.

At trick two, north continued the club suit, expecting that his partner would complete an echo and trump the third round. And this play cost the game. It would have been much better to have taken the ace of spades from dummy at trick two than to have given up command of the clubs immediately.

North was misled by declarer's holdup of the deuce of clubs at trick one, which made him think that south had started an echo.

West recognized the ten of spades as a singleton and therefore refused the trump finesse, preferring to bang out three rounds of trumps at once.

When the queen of diamonds fell at trick nine, it was easy to place all of the remaining spades in north's hand, and all the remaining diamonds with south.

West, therefore, cleverly refused to overruff south at trick ten, compelling the latter to lead into dummy's tenace in diamonds.

The deal was difficult and was extremely well played.

"Drive"

the new V-63

BECAUSE of its known leadership, the Cadillac has been purchased with greater confidence than almost any other automobile.

People have bought this car much as they would buy Government Bonds—with unquestioning trust in its value and dependability.

In many instances, they have even dispensed with demonstration rides, taking the position that the Cadillac has been demonstrated and that its very name denotes its quality.

Naturally, the New V-63 has been purchased in this same manner—with the same implicit confidence in Cadillac performance based on its reputation.

But almost immediately, the New V-63 owner discovers this striking truth—that fine and efficient as have been past Cadillac types, and enviable as has been their reputation, they nevertheless afforded him no adequate criterion of the quality of this new car.

The New V-63 simply cannot be compared with previous Cadillacs—splendid as was their performance—

And certainly not with any other automobile, either foreign or American.

The New V-63 is extraordinarily different—must be judged by new standards—higher than have ever before been associated with a motor car.

This difference is in vital phases of performance. It is due chiefly to Cadillac's new harmonized and balanced 90° V-Type eight cylinder engine, and can be realized only by riding in the car.

Consequently, even though you have taken for granted the surpassing quality of Cad

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With THE TRIBUNE'S third annual bicycle Derby scheduled to be held in Humboldt park on May 25 at 2 o'clock in the morning, entry blanks for the seven races appear on the sports pages of this paper. These blanks will appear every day, and entry can be made by clipping them and sending them to THE TRIBUNE as directed.

No entry fee is necessary. The only requirement and this is not one of THE TRIBUNE'S—is that all riders must be registered with the Amateur Bicycle League of America, the controlling body of the sport in this country. Those who are not already registered can do so by getting in touch with Julian T. Fitzgerald, western representative of the A. B. L. of A., at 2346 West North avenue.

Write Names Plainly.

Contestants are urged to write their names plainly on the blanks and to adhere to instructions as nearly as possible. Riders who represent clubs or other cycling organizations are requested to have their captains or managers make the entry. This can be done by writing all names on one piece of paper, stating the events clearly, and sending it in as directed. Such lists of nominations, however, must be signed by the captain, manager, or some official of the club which the riders represent.

If riders and club officials adhere to this request they will save the registration committee and the handicapper a deal of trouble. In the past there have been several duplications. This was due to overanxiousness on the part of club riders to enter. Instead of notifying their captains or managers they sent in their own blanks, while others were received from the clubs.

There is no restriction on the number of races in which riders can enter, but all contestants are urged to name one event and prepare for it instead of entering several and starting in only one. The twenty-five mile handicap is open to all riders, regardless of class.

Certificates for Prizes.

In the boys' race contestants must be under 16 years to race. Any boy who is 16 years old must enter the other races. No age limitation is placed on the girls' race. The board of control of the A. B. L. of A. will see to it that no riders compete out of their classes. The handicaps will be allotted by the handicap committee appointed by the board of control.

As stated in a previous article, merchandise certificates will be given the winners of places in all races, while time prize victors in the twenty-five mile handicap will be rewarded with the same prizes.

MICKEY WALSH, OPAL CYCLIST, TO RIDE IN EAST

Edward (Mickey) Walsh of the Opal A. A., Illinois amateur bicycle champion, will ride his last race of the season in Chicago on May 11, when he competes in the annual Derby of the Opal A. A. at Douglas park. Immediately after the Derby, Walsh will leave for Boston, where he will compete all summer with the amateurs on the board track at Rivere beach.

Walsh was a consistent winner last season, and expects to repeat this year. If he can win among the amateur riders at Boston, it is probable that he will enter the professional ranks next winter or fall and take up the six day racing game.

Seven events are on the program of the Opal A. A. Derby for May 11. The races carded are:

Boys under 16, 2 miles; girls, class A, class B, class C, novice class, and a six mile open.

Entry blanks may be secured at local bicycle stores or at the Opal club, 2623 West 22d street, phone Rockwell 2980.

D. J. McIntyre, president of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, controlling body of the amateur sport of this country, yesterday confirmed the reappointment of Julian T. Fitzgerald as western representative of the league. Through Fitzgerald the national amateur championships were staged in Humboldt park last summer and were sponsored by THE TRIBUNE.

Eastern Team Grabs Title in Pennsy Bowling Meet

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 26.—The Chicago Terminal Division men's bowling team of the Pennsylvania railroad copped the system championship to the Eastern Region, which scored 2,815 against Chicago's 2,650 here today. J. Bailey of Chicago maintained an average of 206 in the tournament.

The Chicago Terminal men's duckpin team found more than their match in the Philadelphia General Office quintet, which scored 1,965 while the boys from the Windy city rolled 1,574 for fifth place.

Defeated by the Pittsburgh General Office girls, who have been Pennsylvania railroad system champs for the last three years, the Chicago General Office girls' duckpin team also pulled a fifth place berth.

PILLERS RELEASE 2 PITCHERS.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 26.—Two pitchers with the Minneapolis American association club today were released to the teams from which they came. Phil Redgood was returned to Cleveland, and Godfrey (Lefty) Yelle to Washington.

LEWIS' RIVAL

Mike Romano, Italian aspirant for the heavyweight wrestling crown, who meets the champion, "Strangler" Lewis, at the Coliseum Tuesday. Romano, the photo shows, also has a headlock which is said to be almost as dangerous as the champion's. He is shown practicing it on Johnny Meyers, former middleweight champion.

Headlock vs. Headlock When Romano Meets Lewis on Mat

When Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight champion, steps into the ring at the Coliseum on Tuesday night to defend his title against Challenger Michael Romano, the Italian, in the windup of the wrestling show to be conducted by Ed White and Joe Coffey, a battle of headlocks should result.

Although Lewis knows other holds, cradle and toe especially, it is more than likely he will rely mostly upon his bone crusher. The champion surprised the fans by defeating Stanislaus Zbyszko in their last match with toe locks, and he may resort to the same tactics against Romano.

Romano Knows Grip.

In their last meeting Romano applied the headlock to good advantage and near the close of the bout had the champion in a bad way. In fact, Lewis purposely went to the ropes on several occasions to avoid punishment and keep from being headlocked. It is doubtful if the champion can resist the punishing hold as well as his opponent, and many believe the result will hinge upon the ability of either to keep away from the dreaded grip.

Since the match with Lewis, Romano has perfected the head hold. In fact, many grapplers maintain the Italian's lock is more punishing than that of the champion. The wrestlers claim Romano has more strength in his arms and a firmer grip in his hands. Romano is not quite as efficient with the hip check when bringing opponents to the mat after securing the lock as the champion.

Both Look Good.

In their recent workouts at the Arcade both appear to be in excellent condition. They have applied the head lock on their partners and they have permitted their mates to apply it so that necessary practice in breaking the deadly hold could be had. In their training bouts they have wrestled with lighter opponents for speed and have used the larger partners for the mauling part of the preparation.

Lewis and Romano are about evenly matched. There is little difference in weight, but the champion is an inch or so taller. The titleholder is the more experienced and will have this decided advantage. Regardless of the results of the preliminaries, Lewis and Romano will enter the ring at 10 o'clock.

Circus Seats to Be Used.

Pat McGill, the Nebraska Harp, will meet Clarence Jenkins of Kansas in one of the preliminaries and Wayne Munn, former Nebraska football player, will clash with Andrea Costenos, the Spanish heavyweight, in the other. The first bout will go on 8:15 o'clock and doors at the Coliseum will open at 7 o'clock.

The same seats which have been used for the circus will be available for the mat show. There will be 10,000 seats, most of which are elevated at such angles that a clear view of the ring can be had at all times.

FLOWERS WOULD BOX GREB.

Atlanta, Ga., April 26.—Walt Miller, local promoter, today wired Tex Rickard, offering to match Tiger Flowers, Negro middleweight, with Harry Greb, champion, for any distance on the New York milk fund boxing program late in June. He said Flowers would ask merely expenses.

AUTOS TO WHIZ AT HAWTHORNE TRACK MAY 11

Hawthorne, Chicago's historic race track, is being transformed into a place of beauty both for the auto racing championship events to be held there on May 11 as well as for the horse racing schedule to begin in July. The call to the knights of the throttle has gone forth from the National Motor Speedway association, for its events which will usher in the auto racing season in Chicago.

Assurances have been received by Manager Engstrom that all the western champions, as well as the national titleholder of the dirt track, will be on hand May 11. Inquiries regarding the race have been received from many states.

Officials Hard at Work.

While officials are rushing plans for the opening test of the racers, architects, carpenters, and laborers have been busily engaged in transforming Hawthorne.

The Chicago Business Men's Racing association, which purchased this track recently, has had a large force of men at work making improvements in the grand stand and bleachers, revising the fencing arrangement, building a clubhouse, constructing an inner course, making more commodious parking facilities, and otherwise transforming Hawthorne into a place for service to automobile and horse racing enthusiasts who will visit the course this year in search of amusement.

Race Open to All.

President John Owen of the new speedway association sponsoring the auto championship races at Hawthorne, today reiterated his early announcement to the effect that the events were open to drivers of all affiliations.

"We are running an open dirt track meet," he said. "Our meet is open to members of the A. A. A. or any of the associations of the middle west. We bar no driver if he is able to pass the test in the time trials."

The races were between varsity and junior varsity crews. Navy varsity's time was 6:44, and the junior varsity's time was 6:59.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

THE "GLASSY EYED" WALLEYE IS A NIGHT PROWLER.

ALTHOUGH the trout, bass, and muskies may occupy the center of the fishing stage for the majority of anglers, the walleye (or walleyed pike, as it is commonly called) is not without its boosters, as this member of the perch family is quite gamy and affords plenty of sport for the lake or stream fisherman.

The walleye is widely distributed, so anglers in both Canada and the United States have had a chance to get acquainted with it. The fish has many names, including yellow pike, blue pike, walleyed pike, salmon, and jack salmon. In Canada it is known as dore or "pickerel." The color of the walleye varies in different localities, which in some cases is responsible for its different names.

The walleye is the submarine of the fish tribes, as this fellow likes to cruise around in water of good depth, only coming in the shallower parts of a lake or stream during the spawning period or at night when it is eating time. Along toward dusk is one fine time to fish for them, as they are on the move for food and then a live minnow dangled in front of a hungry walleye is sure to bring action. Some of the best walleye fishing we have ever seen came last summer when we were on the French river, in Canada. We didn't leave camp until 6 o'clock, and by the time we reached the pool where the big ones were known to loiter our fishing place was in the shadows cast by the setting sun. In fifteen feet of water we worked our live minnows, which soon stirred up things a-plenty. Within a few minutes we had a dozen good sized walleyes, the twelfth fish weighing an even five pounds. On another occasion (a cloudy, foggy day), when we were fishing the Manitowish waters, our guide, the "Chief," led us to a sandy bar in one of the lakes in the Manitowish string for some fun with the walleyes. Again conditions were just right, as the fish sure did grab our lures in fine style.

Look for the walleye in deep pools at the edge of riffles or at the entrance of a stream, on rocky and sandy bars, or under shelving rocks and banks but always in fairly deep water. Some of the deep pools in the Nipigon were just filled with walleyes and just before sunset one could catch 'em on a variety of artificial lures. A trimly built fish, with a rather slender body and a mouth full of sharp teeth, the walleye puts up a pretty good fight when hooked, although its scrapping is all under water. It takes live bait eagerly and can also be caught with artificial flies on a fly rod. There isn't much snap and dash to the antics of the walleye when he is hooked, but at the same time he keeps up a constant tugging and pulling so that with light tackle a fisherman can have a pretty good time with large sized specimens.

In Canada we saw very little casting done for this fish, as trolling was the method commonly used in the Lake of the Woods country or on the French. Artificial bass lures were put down deep and were usually successful. One moonlight night we saw a troller come in from his favorite stretch of water in the French river with a six pound walleye. No need to worry about this fish being able to see after dark. That big, prominent glassy eye enables it to find its prey (mostly small fishes) without much difficulty, and it certainly does make way with a bunch of 'em in the course of a season.

MULKERN ADDS 2 MORE BOUTS TO MILWAUKEE SHOW

Frank Mulkern, the Milwaukee promoter who has booked Bud Taylor to box ten rounds against Pete Sariemento, the Filipino battler at the Auditorium, Milwaukee, May 12, has closed two more ten rounders to support this scrap.

Joey Sangor, the Cream City featherweight, who won from Danny Kramer last Friday night on a foul, has been paired with Mike Ballerino of New York, and Frankie Garcia will meet Benny Bass of Philadelphia, who is running up a long string of knockout victories over the boys in the 124 pound division.

Garcia now is under the managerial wing of Eddies Long and Kane, who have also taken Billy McCann, the Cleveland lightweight.

Long left last night for Louisville to confer with the promoters of the Sammy Mandell-Jack Bernstein twelve rounder on the eve of the Kentucky Derby. It is likely that some of the local boxers will appear in the preliminaries.

Dave Shade, middleweight, passed through here yesterday from Omaha, where on Friday night he took a referee's decision from Merrie Schlaifer. Shade was accompanied by Manager Leo Flynn, and they are bound for Wilkesbarre, Pa., where tomorrow night Dave and "Allentown" Joe Gans tangle for ten rounds.

Alex Trambitas and Tillie Herman, who meet in a ten round bout on the East Chicago card on May 5, already are in hard training. There will be an eight round bout and a six rounder on the card.

Larney Lichtenstein, manager of Ernie Goozeman, leaves tonight for Milwaukee, where he will second Ernie in his ten rounder with Eddie Shea, west side Italian battler.

Your Next Car

Will be this Light-Six, if you learn the truth

WHEN you buy a car in the "thousand-dollar" class, here are some things you should know.

We made a canvass of men who bought rival cars in this class. And we found that 96 in each 100 bought without knowing these facts.

So, for your sake and our sake, we want to present them to you.

Save $200 to $400

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. It builds in model factories, modernly equipped. It has spent $38,000,000 in the past five years on new-day plants and equipment.

By quantity and up-to-dateness it saves large sums per car. A car like this Light-Six, built under ordinary conditions, would cost $200 to $400 more.

11.4% less to run

This supreme quality means lower operating cost. Owners of fleets of cars in this class made audited records to prove this.

They compared 329 cars, running up to 25,000 miles each. And they found that the Studebaker Light-Six cost 11.4% less to operate than the average of its rivals. This includes depreciation. The saving was nearly one cent per mile.

The reasons are these

The Studebaker Light-Six, in its chassis, represents the best we know. In steel and in workmanship it is identical with the costliest cars we build.

It is designed and superintended by an engineering department which costs us $500,000 yearly.

Each steel formula has been proved the best for its purpose by years of tests. On some we pay 15% premium to makers to get them exactly right.

Each car in the building gets 32,000 tests and inspections.

The crankshafts are machined on all surfaces, as was done in the Liberty Airplane Motors. This extra care costs us $600,000 yearly, but it means perfect balance in the motor.

More Timken bearings are used in this car than in any competitive car within $1,500 of its price.

There are 517 operations in making this car exact to 1/1000th of an inch. And 122 are exact to one-half that.

Genuine leather cushions, ten inches deep. Unusual equipment. Scores of extra values.

Made by the leaders

This is one of the cars which has made Studebaker the leader in quality cars. Our sales have almost trebled in three years. The trend toward Studebakers has become a sensation.

Last year 145,167 people paid $201,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Back of this car is an honored name, which for 72 years has stood for high ideals.

Behind it are $90,000,000 of assets, staked on pleasing you better than others.

Before you pay $1,000 or more for a car, these are facts you should know and compare. You owe that to yourself.

Mail us the coupon below. We will send you free our new book that will inform you on five simple things which reveal the value of a car.

For instance: It will enable you to look at any car and tell whether it's been cheapened to meet a price or offers true quality.

It will tell you why some cars rattle at 20,000 miles and others don't. It shows one single point in a closed car which measures whether you're getting top or medium quality. The book is free—clip the coupon below.

RAIN FAILS TO HALT GOLFERS AT OLYMPIA FIELDS

HOLE-IN-ONE CLUB

J. M'N WRIGHT appears to be the first "ace" of the season in the Chicago district. Playing at Beverly on Monday in company with D. A. Hallin and George L. Hervig, he downed his tee shot at the tenth hole, 190 yards.

H. M. Caldwell on Wednesday made the second ace of the Chicago season, doing the trick at the seventh hole at Jackson park, 150 yards. His companions were Miss Fitzgerald, Mrs. Elinor Johnson, and J. M. Eaton of 6004 Woodlawn avenue.

Howard F. Henrichs became the third ace of the week when at Jackson park yesterday morning he sank his tee shot at the thirteenth hole, 116 yards. His comrades were Everett Walker, S. O. Druki, and Bert Hoffman.

Although rain fell intermittently yesterday afternoon, it did not deter many of the early season golfers and there were fair sized crowds at most of the courses which are in condition.

At Olympia Fields close to 500 members were out, and two hundred played golf. The others came out to draw for lockers. The new locker room is nearly finished. The second and third courses were open yesterday.

Butterfield Holds Handicap.

Butterfield Country club secured the honor of staging the first event of the local season. It was a handicap event which was won by W. J. McCullough, 105—26—79; J. A. Greenwood being second with 100—27—73, and H. O'Callaghan, 91—15—76. E. H. Dailey took the guest prize with a score of 27 for five blind holes. H. E. Johnson was high guest with 45. Three hundred and fifty members and friends were at the dinner and stag party.

The Green Valley club, which scheduled an event in aid of the Olympic athletic fund, postponed it until May 11. About 100 players were out.

Chick and Jock to Play.

This afternoon Chick Evans, western amateur champion, and Jock Hutchison, western open champion, will appear in an eighteen hole exhibition at the Palos Hills forest preserve course at 2:30 o'clock. Several of the forest preserve officials will be on hand for the event, which will mark the opening of the full eighteen hole course.

Chick Evans has given his services for the benefit of the Citizens' Trust fund for the firemen and policemen at Chicago on Sunday afternoon, May 4. Chick will give exhibition golf shots from the stage. He will knock a dozen rubber balls into the audience, and those who capture the balls can redeem them for a package of golf balls by taking them to Thomas R. Wilson & Co.'s store.

The new Evergreen course will not be ready for play until Memorial day. The deferred opening is due to having planted the greens by the sod stolon method, after they had almost been finished in the old fashioned way. Work on the club building is proceeding rapidly, and everything will be ready for the accommodation of the players during the formal opening. The course is at 91st street and Western avenue (Woodrow Wilson road), and under the care of Professional Jack Yergan and his assistant Tom Mike.

Some years ago Crafts W. Higgins, when secretary of the Western Golf association, advocated a rule making it unnecessary for the reigning champion to qualify. The Women's Western Golf association adopted this plan, and it has been in vogue several years. This year the United States Golf association has admitted Bobby Jones, the open champion, into the title event without having to qualify, and a few days ago the Western association announced the passing of a similar rule. It is hoped the U. S. G. A. will follow suit in the matter of the amateur champion, Max Marston.

Beverly Country club will inaugurate its season on May 10, when members and guests will compete in a handicap for the benefit of the American Olympic fund. Under the presidency of Charles R. Walgreen Beverly has arranged for an unusually interesting season, which will be formally inaugurated on Memorial day. Dr. W. D. Mahoney has accepted the chairmanship of the grounds committee, and, as the club has secured the services of Harry Collis of Flossmoor in an advisory capacity, the members are looking for fine fairways and greens. By the middle of June the new fairways, laid out by Donald Ross, will be in perfect shape. Beverly has reengaged Carl M. Nelson as manager, Ralph Healy as professional, and Frank Murphy as caddy master.

CHESS WIZARD REVISITS CHICAGO

Dr. Emanuel Lasker, former world's champion and winner of the recent international chess masters' tournament in New York, revisited Chicago yesterday after an interval of eighteen years and gave an exhibition at the City club. The photo shows the master with a cup of coffee by his side, playing C. N. Owen, while to Owen's right Don Levi is getting ready for the next move. Owen and Levi both got draws with Dr. Lasker. Dr. Lasker played thirty-seven simultaneous games, winning twenty-nine, drawing six, and losing two.

DAVIS BOARD ACCEPTS TILDEN'S RESIGNATION

New York, April 26.—[United Press.]—William T. Tilden will not be a member of the American Davis cup team this year. His resignation was accepted by the Davis cup committee last night.

A letter has been forwarded to Tilden at Philadelphia by Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the Davis cup committee, accepting the resignation. One section of the letter reads:

"As you have been previously advised, you are eligible to compete for your country in 1924."

The letter goes on to state that after Jan. 1, 1925, Tilden must discontinue his practice of writing for newspapers to retain amateur standing.

CITY CUE LOOP WINDS UP ITS SEASON'S PLAY

Final games in the annual three cushion tournament of the Chicago Billiard league were played last week, and also the playoff for the Hemmer trophy. Art Thurnblad won the championship and the William J. Blake trophy. The Julian Fitzgerald trophy for the best showing away from home was won by Charley Le Gros, who won sixteen games and lost three.

Pierre Maupome took the best single average prize of $25 with a mark of 1.43, made when he scored 60 points in forty-two innings. F. E. Reid won the best average prize according to handicap, and Augie Kleckehefer landed the high run award with 15.

RICHARDS ALSO LOST TO AMERICAN OLYMPIC LAWN TENNIS SQUAD

NEW YORK, April 26.—[Special.]—Vincent Richards, besides Bill Tilden, will be lost to the American Olympic tennis team and probably to the Davis cup squad, he disclosed here today.

The Davis cup committee has not taken any public steps as far as he is concerned, but the youthful fourth ranking star, who has been a member of the last two Davis cup teams, declared he would go abroad as a newspaper man, as a result of which, in writing about the Olympics, he would be barred automatically from the American international team.

"Although my status as a possible member of this year's Davis cup team has not been determined," Richards said, "self-respect may compel me to withdraw from the list of candidates the U. S. L. T. A. recently announced. If I will be ineligible after next Jan. 1, when the tennis player-writer rule goes into effect, as I have been given to understand, I am ineligible now."

INDIANA GOLFERS DEFEAT PURDUE BY 14 TO 9 COUNT

Lafayette, Ind., April 26.—[Special.]—Purdue lost to Indiana in golf here today by a 14 to 9 count. Bixler and Taylor of Purdue won from Ingstrom and Brouwer of Indiana in the afternoon foursomes, while Utley and Redding won for the Crimson from Gude and Murphy of the Boilermakers. Bixler of Purdue had the low medal card of the day's play, 159 for thirty-six holes.

GREENLEAF RETAINS POCKET TITLE CHANCE

Minneapolis, Minn., April 26.—Frank Taberski of Detroit won an easy victory over Andrew St. Jean of Minneapolis, 125 to 60, in today's contest of the third series for the world's pocket billiard championship here. Taberski's high score was 27, and St. Jean's 25. The match took twenty-five innings.

Ralph Greenleaf of Philadelphia, title holder, remained in the running by defeating Benny Allen of Kansas City, 125 to 82, in 20 innings tonight. A victory for Allen virtually would have cinched the title for him. Greenleaf had the high run of the evening, 42.

The final round of the play for the title will begin Monday at Detroit. The standing to date:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Allen	7	2	Greenleaf	5	4
Taberski	5	4	St. Jean	1	8

Wheeler, Star at Beloit, to Be Coach at Elgin

Elgin, Ill., April 26.—[Special.]—Arthur F. Wheeler of Beloit college, one of the greatest all around athletes that ever played with the "Gold," has been signed as head coach and athletic director at the Elgin junior college and academy to succeed Elden Link, resigned. Wheeler, a star in all four sports, will be graduated from Beloit, in June. Wheeler was an all-state football player at Lawrence college, before entering Beloit.

Carpenter to Sail Week Earlier than Scheduled

New York, April 26. — A dispatch from Paris to the French line officers here announces that Georges Carpentier, who is coming to fight Tom Gibbons, will sail May 3, a week earlier than he had expected. Carpentier will be accompanied by his manager, Francois Deschamps, and several boxers.

ROBERT STEPHAN, a 16 year old Hyde Park high school boy, yesterday jumped into the elite of Chicago chessdom when he vanquished Dr. Emanuel Lasker, former world's champion and winner of the recent international masters' tourney in New York.

Dr. Lasker spent the day in Chicago and in the afternoon gave an exhibition at the City club, playing 37 games simultaneously. Stephan, a spectator, was given an opportunity of finishing one of the games when another player had to leave, and to the surprise of everyone, beat the master. Charles W. Phillips, a veteran, was the only other local player to get a win. Dr. Lasker was held to a draw by six of the players while he won twenty-nine of the games.

After the match the former champion sent a short note to young Stephan seeking an opportunity to compliment the young man in person.

HOPPE TO PLAY KIECKHEFER AT THREE CUSHIONS

For several seasons there has been much verbal controversy as to the ability of Willie Hoppe, champion of the balk-liners, to compete with the leading three cushion players. Hoppe has thousands of adherents who believe he could successful cope with the men who specialize in the angle game, while the three cushion fans hold opposite opinions.

It is not possible for Hoppe to try for the three cushion championship, as only players who take part in the National Three Cushion Billiard league race can qualify for the title play.

Willie to Play Augie.

So far the arguments have been verbal, but at last have reached a definite stage. Hoppe, when in Chicago on his way to the Pacific coast, arranged with Augie Kleckhefer, former world's three cushion champion, to play a match here in October.

It will be a three night affair, and may include afternoon games, but that detail will be settled later.

For one day last week John Layton of St. Louis had a higher percentage in the National Three Cushion league than Bob Cannefax, who has led nearly all season. Bob broke even with Jackson at Milwaukee and with Maupome at Chicago, but dropped two games to Layton at St. Louis. On the following day he defeated Tiff Denton at Kansas City and regained top place.

Faces Hard Schedule.

This week Layton will be on the road, and has a tough prospect ahead of him, as he opens here tomorrow against Kieckhefer and then has to meet Heal at Toledo on Wednesday, Copulos at Cleveland on Thursday, Wakefield at Pittsburgh on Friday, and Cannefax at Detroit on Saturday.

While Layton is close to Cannefax, he has played ten less games, so it looks as if Cannefax has first money cinched. Standings:

MOON states some pertinent facts for every man and woman who expects to buy a car in the next six months

AS YOU go up and down the street, you cannot escape the fact that car manufacturers are bidding actively for your business.

This means that as a buyer you do not have to take any car you can get.

You can afford to be choosey. You can take your time, and shop around to be sure you are getting the best money's worth.

It will interest you to know that the MOON dealers in Chicago have on their floors only 25% as many cars as a year ago.

Practically the same condition prevails in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Minneapolis and other cities where the MOON is sold.

To get the full significance of this fact, bear in mind that in the month of March the MOON factory built and shipped more cars than it has ever built and shipped in any month of the seventeen years it has been producing motor cars.

THE enviable position of the MOON car today is not a matter of luck.

It is the result of the sound business judgment of a thinking automobile manufacturer, who realizes that, sooner or later, the fundamental principles that apply to all business must prevail in the automobile industry.

The MOON people have always kept the ultimate purchaser uppermost in their minds. They want, above all things, to win and to hold the good will of the public, for they realize that that is the only substantial foundation on which any business can be permanently built.

They have never for a moment forgotten that the purchaser must get full value for every dollar he paid—in distinctive appearance, in mechanical excellence—in safe, comfortable, dependable and economical transportation.

This is why the MOON has never been drawn into the mad race for quantity production.

This is why the public is demanding and absorbing more MOON cars every year.

The MOON has never had a spectacular year. But it has had a steady, persistent growth, thanks to the reputation that MOON drivers have given the MOON car.

WE MAKE the bold statement that MOON will sell more cars in 1924 than MOON sold in 1923.

We base this assertion on the fact that MOON is ahead of its 1923 sales for the first three months; and on the further facts that MOON sold more cars in 1921, the worst automobile year in a decade, than in 1920; and that MOON has consistently sold more cars each year than the year before.

The fundamental principles of MOON policy make a strong appeal to the thinking automobile buyer.

The MOON people have always built a fine car at a low price—a car that looks well, rides well, and runs quietly, efficiently and economically.

The MOON is built with the fact in mind that you may want to trade it in, after two or three years and get a new car; and that when your car is two or three years old it must have the appearance of a current model and have the mechanical soundness which makes it possible to rejuvenate the car and make it a 100 per cent satisfactory purchase for the second owner.

This is why MOON never makes any sharp break in models—never makes any radical changes in appearance which depreciate the value of MOON cars in the hands of owners.

Yet MOON design is so fundamentally right that the MOON is admitted to be one of the smartest cars in the country—and that regardless of price. When a thing is fundamentally right you don't have to be constantly tinkering with it. The canons of good taste don't change from year to year.

THE MOON people are just as sound in engineering principles as they are in design.

MOON calls on all the resources of the automotive industry.

MOON is built throughout of standard specialized units such as:

Special MOON-Continental Red Seal Motor.
Special MOON-Timken Axles—front and rear.
Special MOON-Delco Starting, Lighting and Ignition.
Special MOON-Warner Transmission.

MOON doesn't stop half way. It follows out the idea of specialist-made units to its complete and logical conclusion, and lets the MOON engineers develop their specialty—the fine skill and utmost care in designing and constructing the finished car.

Furthermore, every one of these standard units is designed by the specialist engineers working together with MOON engineers.

They are designed for the MOON Car. They are designed to go together.

Then they are built into the finished MOON Car with plenty of good, old-fashioned hard work.

THIS, in brief, is the policy that has made MOON success—the reason why MOON is today growing in popularity and in sales faster than any other car in America. Why you will want to see the MOON before you buy a car this year.

Now the best way for you to check up on what we say about the MOON is to let one of the MOON dealers put a car at your disposal.

You can drive it yourself—and check what we say by what the MOON does.

MOTORDOM

Conquest of South America Is Aim of Fearless Tourists

Daring Race Around Coast Starts from North of Panama.

GUATEMALA CITY.—This spring a group of motorists, starting from Guatemala City, Central America, will compete for a prize offered by a local club to the winner in the longest race undertaken since Prince Borghese went from Rome to Vladivostok, crossing most of Europe and the whole of Asia. The contestants will try to encircle South America by going down along the Pacific coast, bridging the Panama canal, and passing through Colombia, Ecuador, and Peru as close to the coast as the mountainous topography of those countries will allow.

But the most serious difficulties of such a descent into South America are not bad roads or the total absence of highways. Rivers of deep and swift current and innumerable minor streams rolling down from the Cordilleras are bound to stop the expedition or at least to force the motorists to enormous detours. Jungles, forests never penetrated by the sun's rays, and sand wastes in succession will offer other kinds of difficulties and put to the severest test the resourcefulness of the travelers and the endurance of their cars.

On reaching southern Peru the expedition will have accomplished its second leg of the trip. The northern half of Chile offers no very serious obstacles; nevertheless, it will be the first time that automobiles will have made the crossing of the nitrate fields and the Atacama desert in a continuous trip. As they approach the southernmost portion of the South American continent the real trouble will become evident. These are regions of almost constant rain, giving source to a thick nest of rivers and rivulets, generally dangerous to ford and as a rule making necessary the flat boat as the only means of crossing. Further south the travelers will be forced to turn their backs on the Pacific, as the ocean has eaten up the land and penetrated into the furthest recesses of the Andes in truly Norwegian fashion. The scenery is extremely picturesque, but this affords small comfort for the competitive spirit of an automobile racer.

The expedition will now be traveling through a zone of low temperatures, blinding snowstorms and damp surroundings, even in summer. The test will be therefore one of human endurance as well as of mechanical ability and engineering perfection.

Turning north from the vicinity of Punta Arenas, the southmost city in the world, the company will find on the Atlantic coast difficulties of a very different nature. Water will be scarce again—sweet water in a land where the rain quickly absorbs the nitrous substances of the earth. Another difficulty will be the descent and ascent of river banks in a territory where the currents have eaten out canyons hundreds of feet deep in the alluvial soil of Patagonia.

Buenos Aires will mark the end of the third stage of the trip. Some 4,000 miles will have then been covered. To continue through Uruguay and Brazil, as they have planned, will mean a second plunge into the tropical lands, with changes of temperature so sudden, as the one from Sao Paulo to Santos, that only a three hour flight from the spring climate of New England to the summer heat of New Orleans would give an approximate idea thereof.

If the travelers do not drown themselves in the Amazon or in one of its thousand tributaries, they will cross the Guianas, Venezuela and Colombia, from the east before meeting their own track from Panama south. This race should afford opportunity for a camera man to get, as he goes along, the most dramatic, and at the same time one of the most varied of pictorial records. For the travelers will find in the course of their journey not only the highest mountains in the western hemisphere, the broadest river and the largest forests in the world, but they will also meet the ruins of the oldest civilization in America, and find on reaching Patagonia survivors of the most savage and destitute Indian tribes, the Fueguinos.

Snow capped mountains, flaming volcanoes whose flashes in the tropical night bring back to view vast panoramas as if the magnesium light of a photographer was playing upon them, forests extending beyond the horizon, covering valley and hill, and strange people and animals—all this should tempt the graphic chronicler.

INTO THE UNKNOWN

Motor pioneers in the true sense of the word are preparing to blaze a seemingly impossible trail around the continent of South America. This map shows a little of what they are facing in the long pull from Guatemala to the antarctic and back again in what is going to prove the most interesting and dangerous of world tours in 1924.

Trolley Interests Turn to Motors for Akron Service

AFTER experimenting recently with a haphazard bus service for twenty-seven days, Akron, O., went back to the trolley. But the result of this experience apparently has been to increase the popularity of the bus rather than to discredit it.

The Northern Ohio Traction company, which operates the trolley service of the city, has recently placed orders for twenty-eight busses, practically doubling the number it uses within the city limits of Akron supplementary to street car service.

When trolley service was stopped in Akron as the result of a controversy between the trolley company and the city administration over an increase in fare city officials tried to handle the entire city passenger traffic with jitneys and buses for a 5 cent fare.

Reliable bus operators and the latest types of buses could not be obtained, because no assurance of franchise rights was given, and the fare of 5 cents was too low to yield a legitimate profit on modern bus equipment.

Furthermore, organized and systematic service was lacking, some districts getting more service than under the trolley régime and others getting less.

The traction company will operate fifty-eight busses within the city of Akron when those ordered are received. It also operates, together with a subsidiary company, twenty additional busses at Canton and in intercity service between Cleveland and Akron.

Cars Last Longer

After careful studies by research bureaus it has been determined that the average life of the present day built automobile is six years.

That there has been a great improvement in automobile construction in the last two years is indicated by the fact that in 1921 the average life of all motor cars made was 5.33 years. These figures were arrived at from statistics of annual production, yearly registration in all states and from the number of cars imported and exported. Care put into construction at every stage has added to the life of cars.

It has been emphasized that the first cost of careful building is higher, but later costs more than prove the wisdom and economy of building cars to last. How long the individual car will last is a primary thought of every customer.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," The Tribune, Chicago. For today's question C. H. Higbee, 624 York place, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

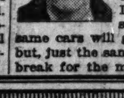
Do you think that free camping in Grant park should be abolished?

Where Asked.

Grant park.

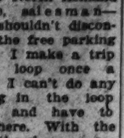
The Answers.

M. J. King, 6230 Blackstone avenue, chauffeur—I do not approve of the abolishing of free space here. The South Park commission already has a revenue from the charge of space in the park where 25 cents is charged and the cars watched by police officers. There are many people who do not feel they can afford this charge every day and it will keep them from using their cars in their business.

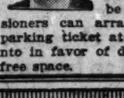


Harold Cook, 1432 Elmwood avenue, Evanston, clerk—The free space is the best place for parking right now. It has good police protection and it means a lot to hundreds of car owners in Chicago. I suppose if the free space is closed, these same cars will go into charge spaces, but, just the same, it looks like a tough break for the motorists.

J. A. Berkery, 4309 North Ashland avenue, salesman—They shouldn't discontinue the free parking space. I make a trip to the loop once a week. I can't do any parking in the loop proper and have to come here. With the police guards around the charge space the free parking space has been safe heretofore. I can understand that it doesn't help the looks of the park, but it is a big convenience.



Grace McGarr, 1200 Sherwin avenue—I do not think that they should abolish this free parking space. I run down to the loop maybe once or twice a week and park the car an hour while shopping. It really isn't worth 25 cents for that time and, even when cars are left in the guarded area, they get just as dusty as in the free space. Perhaps a smaller charge with the guard extended would be reasonable.



Pat Hawkins, 3533 West Fillmore street, business man—Charging for all of the space is hardly just, I believe, unless the parking space can be moved nearer to Michigan avenue. It is too far over now. It may be that the commissioners can arrange for a monthly parking ticket at lower rates. I am nto in favor of doing away with the free space.

Oil Royalties Smooth Wyoming Highway System

DEVELOPMENT of a network of graded highways covering all Wyoming, a project begun in 1917, was continued during 1923 under direction of the state highway department.

Every county in the state was the beneficiary of 1923 road work and there is hardly a settlement that cannot per be reached over a road feasible for automobiles of low power. The highway program is mapped out far in advance and systematic development will be continued during the coming year.

Highway construction, in its earlier phases, financed through the issuance of state bonds, now chiefly is financed by federal oil royalties and federal aid funds. Of the federal oil royalties disbursed in 1922, the state highway department received approximately $915,000. The department also is the beneficiary of the 1 cent a gallon gasoline tax imposed by the 1923 legislature.

During 1923 notable improvements were made on the Lincoln highway, which traverses the southern tier of Wyoming counties, these improvements including the elimination of the steeper grades, straightening, broadening of curves, resurfacing and bridge and culvert work. An important improvement not completed at the end of the year is the elimination of the dangerous Ozone grade crossing, twenty-four miles west of Cheyenne. There a new section of the highway was built during the year and will be put into service early in 1924, when a steel and concrete viaduct over the Union Pacific's double track is completed.

Double Width Is Ordered on Old Boston Post Road

State Solves Congestion Problem in New Program.

WIDENING of the Boston Post road from the New York state line to New Haven from its present width of eighteen feet to thirty-six feet is contemplated in plans now being carried out by the state highway department. This is the outstanding development of a road building program prepared by Commissioner John A. MacDonald that will require about five years for fulfillment.

Complete hard surfacing of all the through main line routes in the state is a part of the proposal, and ultimate completion of the scheme will see Connecticut covered by a network of hard surfaced highways from all transportation centers to the state lines of New York, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

This plan involves four distinct routes that carry the main burden of motor transportation through Connecticut from New York to Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and vice versa. The most important of these are the Boston Post road from New York to New London, and the main branch of this route from New Haven through Hartford to Springfield.

The others are the Housatonic Valley highway from the southwestern corner of the state northward through Fairfield and Litchfield counties to Massachusetts, which is fast nearing completion, and the route from New London through Norwich and Putnam to the state line at Massachusetts.

Added to these is the present military concrete highway from Hartford to New London. The hard surfacing of the projects mentioned above, therefore, will give the state a complete chain of roadways on its main line routes.

Doubling the width of the Boston Post road from New York to Bridgeport to thirty-six feet is now being carried out in three places. When the work has been carried as far as Bridgeport, contracts will be awarded for similar treatment of the Milford turnpike from Bridgeport to New Haven.

The plan for doubling the width of this highway was decided upon after due consideration had been given by the department to the proposition of constructing a separate parallel highway to share the heavy traffic on the post road through this section. The thirty-six foot road, which will be one of the few of its kind in the country, is expected to remove traffic congestion here, which now is heavy and which is increasing steadily each year.

SCHOOL OF THE ROAD

Accidents happen easily and extremely fast when the beginner takes the wheel of a new car. To protect the United States, as well as the new driver, a Los Angeles dealer has devised this double control which gives the teacher constant supervision of the direction.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic).

Turn to Motors.

Ten additional motor rail cars with trailers have been added to the equipment of the Ferrocarrill de Monte Alto, operating between Mexico City and Antizapan, carrying passengers and light freight.

Since May, 1922, a milk train with trailer has made two daily round trips between Pedregal and Mexico City. A train between Tlanepantla and Pedregal makes daily trips. During the first year these trains carried 362,000 passengers.

It is proposed to operate similar trains from Toluca to Tenango and San Juan, also between Chalchicomula and Tlalchichuca in the state of Puebla.

Georgia Drivers Shoulder Burden of Heavy Taxes

ATLANTA, Ga., April 26.—[Special.]—The way of the Georgia automobile owner is hard. To him goes the privilege of paying about $3,000,000 in gasoline taxes this year. That sum will be collected by the state from the special tax of three cents on each gallon of gasoline sold at filling stations.

The tax was imposed by the Georgia general assembly last summer. Previously for several years there has been a tax of one cent a gallon. This, also, had been passed on to the consumer by the fuel companies. One-third of the revenue derived by the state from this source is paid to counties for road construction, one-third goes to the state highways department, and the remainder is used to retire notes given in discounting the rental of the state-owned Western and Atlantic railroad.

The first three months of 1924 show light collections—$710,000, with about $25,000 yet due—because of the fact automobiles are much less used during the winter season, but Controller Wright, on the basis of the first quarter's returns, estimates the year's total will reach the $3,000,000 mark.

AFTER WINTER.

Batteries that have been fully charged, washed, dried, and laid away require a filling with a similar acid electrolyte.

This Judge Cites Figures to Show Speeder Remedy

Jail Bars Most Effective Barrier to Coast Wrecks.

THE jail sentence has been an effective measure in reducing public traffic accidents in Los Angeles, says a safety council bulletin. It has had an effect not only on the speeder but upon all other classes of traffic law violators; this, in a large measure, is said to account for the reduction of accidents in that city.

Judge Joseph F. Chambers, police magistrate, inaugurated a campaign to reduce accidents in Los Angeles by giving jail sentences to all speeders and reckless drivers brought before him. In spite of the belief of the average individual that his violation of the speed laws—and the consequent endangering of life, limbs, and property—is not a matter of sufficient moment to receive such drastic treatment, 166 people were put behind the bars by Judge Chambers during the first week of his campaign, with sentences of from twenty-four hours to 100 days.

The 100 day sentence was imposed upon those convicted of driving while intoxicated; the one, two, and three day sentences were for those convicted of driving in violation of the speed laws. Judge Chambers has not given any suspended sentences, or any fines. Every case of speeding and reckless driving has been given a straight jail sentence, regardless of station in life, sex, color, or any other factor which might have entered into the average person's calculation.

In the nineteen days preceding the inauguration of this drastic campaign against speeders, seventeen people were killed in automobile accidents in Los Angeles. In the eleven days subsequent to the imposing of jail sentences for speeding and reckless driving, there were no automobile fatalities reported to the coroner's office. The only traffic death reported was that of a city fireman who, leaving his fire truck in an effort to stop an oncoming street car, was crushed between the street car and the fire truck.

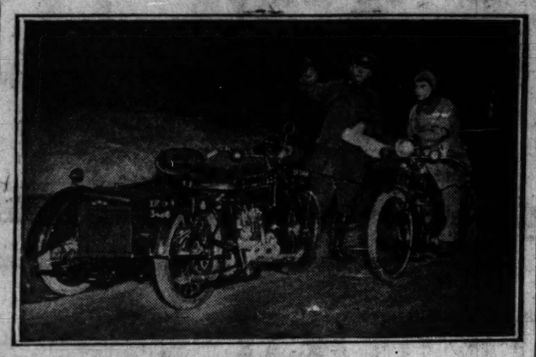
The number of injured persons brought into the receiving hospital was decreased by a third, and the injuries of those brought in were of a much less serious nature than before the jail sentence plan was adopted, according to the officials. General driving on the street was improved considerably.

"The desire for the sensation of hurrying through space does not justify the killing of citizens," said Judge Chambers. "Consequently, I have resorted to the jail sentence.

"Women are not exempt in my court and have received no special consideration because of their sex. I believe that when they break the laws and endanger their fellow-citizens they must expect to pay the same penalty that men do. The individual who is run over by an automobile, suffers the same whether the injury was caused by a pretty girl or a truck driver."

Those who have been incarcerated for these short jail terms are practically unanimous in declaring that they will never again take chances on breaking the speed laws, and that the time they may have saved by their hurry does not compensate them for time wasted behind the bars.

THE NIGHT PATROL.



Old Man Trouble has been warned away from the main traveled highways of Europe by the night road patrol established this season by the Automobile Association of England. The patrol, equipped to deal with all mechanical troubles, will be found on the roads both day and night until 1 a. m. [Photograph copyright by Automobile association.]

Early Road Program

That Connecticut will witness many important improvements in its highway system during the coming summer is indicated by a statement prepared by the state highway commission and made public yesterday, showing that the value of work now under construction aggregates $4,442,046.52. This includes all moneys unexpended on contracts for new construction as well as major repairs and indicates the spring and summer road building program that the state has put under way.

Always Visible

A luminous tip from an old watch or clock hand applied to the indicator of a gasoline tank gage obviates the use of dangerous lights.

Better Highways Give Minnesota $67,000,000 a Year

BETTER roads were perhaps the biggest single factor in the 1923 reduction of the automobile expenses of Minnesota county agents, which shows a decrease in average mile cost to less than 57 per cent of the 1920 cost.

George A. Pond, cost accountant at the University farm, made a statement to that effect in further comment on the division bulletin on the subject. Other things which helped to bring down the auto costs, he said, were the long, dry season making for greater mileages, the lower prices of gasoline and tires, and the smaller fixed costs, all held interesting to car owners, present and prospective.

Fifty-six county agents in as many parts of the state ran their cars an average of 8,924 miles each last year at a total mile cost of 6.49 cents, compared with the showing by fifty-one agents of 6,447 miles each at 11.51 cents on 1920 averages. All but two or three of the machines were light, four cylinder machines, the bulletin explains, that fact accounting for the mile costs so much below those based on all motor vehicles, trucks included.

Good roads savings are reflected in lower depreciation, gasoline and tire expenses, although the bulletin cites the fact that prices of cars, gasoline, and tires were lower last year than in 1920 by perhaps 20 per cent. Still greater reductions will be noted, however, in the comparative costs for the two years.

Mile costs of gasoline dropped from 2.31 cents in 1920 to 1.30 cents in 1923; oil from .32c to .26c; tires and tubes from 1.58c to .61c; repairs from 2.57c to 1.32c, and miscellaneous operating items went up from .09c to .10c, and under fixed charges garage rent dropped from .62c to .47c; depreciation from 3.15c to 1.95c, and interest from .73c to .31c, while insurance advanced from .13c to .14c a car mile.

A good roads credit of four-fifths of the savings on depreciation, repairs, gasoline and tire items would account for 3 out of the 5 cents a mile. Further, 3 cents a mile on 450,000 motor vehicles registered in Minnesota at 5,000 miles a year agerage would aggregate $67,000,000 annually.

How to Clean 'Em.

Mud splashes on the headlight glass should be gently soaked off with plenty of warm water and a soft cloth or soft sponge. A few drops of household ammonia in the water will aid in thoroughly cleaning the glass, but the ammonia must not be allowed to get on the finish of the car.

Movement of World to Be Speeded Up by Detroit Meet

MORE than 100 motor car and motor truck companies will be represented in the world motor transport congress which will be held in Detroit May 21-24.

This occasion, which is the first international event of its kind ever attempted by the automotive industry, will be a conference for mutual education and motor transport development in all countries.

The American factories are sending delegates in order to be informed of the conditions and opportunities abroad.

On the other hand, the foreign visitors are making a special study of merchandising methods in this country. It is believed that foreign sales can be tremendously increased, not alone through better roads and cheaper fuel supply abroad, but likewise through bringing to the attention of the public in all countries the possibilities of motor transportation making for increased efficiency in many businesses and occupations. There have been seventy acceptances from forty foreign countries to date.

The Better Way To Buy a Motor Car

Most persons dislike mechanical details. But how a motor car is engineered and built, and what it is built of, are both extremely important.

That is why automobile buyers today are discounting glib selling talk and demanding assurance that a car will stand up and give low-cost service.

There is only one way you can get such assurance. You must see for yourself how it is engineered and built—and of what it is built.

The Hupmobile Parts Display gives you the Hupmobile story at a glance. It is interesting—and enlightening. You should by all means see it. Come in soon.

Hupmobile

Brake and clutch pedals are good examples of the safety built into the Hupmobile. They are drop-forged, double heat-treated steel, as are also the hand-brake and gear-shift levers, brake-rod clevises and toggles—much stronger and safer than the less costly low carbon steel or malleable castings which are often used at these points. For example, in a recent test, a cast brake pedal broke under 340 pounds pressure, while it required 570 pounds to break a Hupmobile drop-forged pedal.

Here are the Reasons Why
OLDSMOBILE - SIX
meets every test of motoring!

LAST week, Oldsmobile asked the public to suggest some new test—further to prove the stamina and all-round merit of this wonderful car.

Olds Motor Works has done everything conceivable to demonstrate the quality and performance of Oldsmobile Six—and it agrees to do everything else within reason that any prospective buyer might suggest.

It may sound like an extravagant offer—this plan of letting the public choose the tests—but we cannot possibly lose. The car has literally done everything any reasonable motorist could ask of it. Moreover we know what's in the car—finest materials, bought at advantageous General Motors prices, and manufactured into cars with all the combined experience and skill of Oldsmobile and General Motors.

Here are a few of the reasons for our confidence in Oldsmobile Six—and things that influence 500 people a day to buy it—

This amazing car traveled from coast to coast in high gear—with low, second and reverse gears removed. It pulled through hub-deep mud where other cars were stalled—crossing the highest mountains—and established an economy record of 27.8 miles per gallon of gasoline, throughout the entire 3674 miles of the trip. Arriving at Los Angeles—it ran 68 miles an hour on the Los Angeles Speedway, under official observation!

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

Engine—Its six-cylinder engine represents the finest talent and work of Oldsmobile and General Motors engineers. It develops 40 H. P.—has full force-feed lubrication to all bearings—oversize crankshaft with main bearings almost as large as the cylinders—water circulating space between each cylinder—cylinder heads with dome-shaped combustion chambers—interchangeable Chadwick bronze-backed bearings.

Coachwork—All Oldsmobile closed bodies are built by Fisher—a fact that in itself is a complete guarantee of quality, refinement and comfort. The bodies of the open models are fabricated by Oldsmobile, from parts manufactured by Fisher.

Chassis—Oldsmobile Six uses Delco starting, lighting and ignition system—popular with the finest cars. It has a Borg & Beck clutch—the best known. It has a Harrison radiator, Klaxon horn, Willard storage battery, Zenith carburetor, Alemite chassis lubrication.

Equipment—High grade non-skid oversize cord tires are standard equipment. All Oldsmobile open models have every necessary feature that would contribute to satisfactory motoring—the closed models embody a wealth of added accessories and refinements.

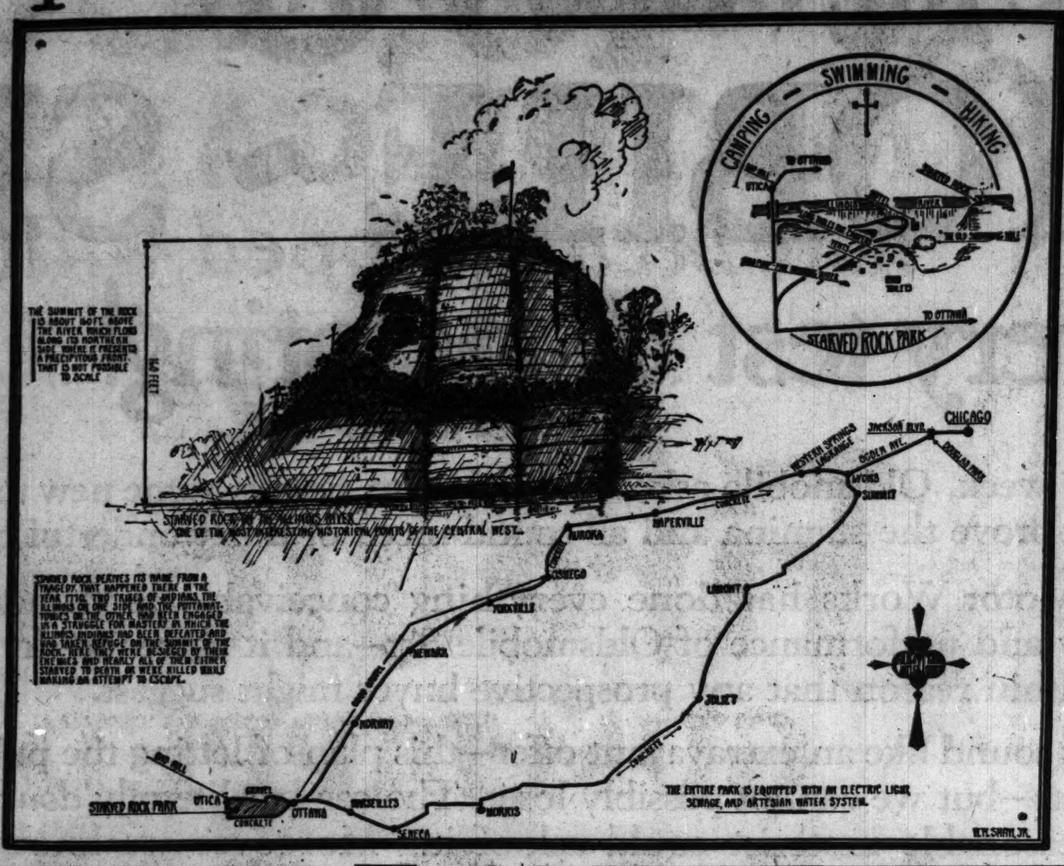
TRIBUNE TOURS

I.—GOOD ROADS TO THE ROCK.



Illinois Begins to Assemble Huge Good Roads Army

Fifty Miles of Pavement Each Week, Hope of State.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

EIGHT HUNDRED AND FIFTY men with 200 teams started work upon 1,000 miles of hard surface roads which Illinois plans to build during the summer, according to the first weekly report made by the division of highways.

A total of 4.10 miles of road has been built by the state this season. Last week was the real beginning of activities which are expected to increase by leaps and bounds during the next few weeks, until a force of nearly 10,000 men will be laying concrete pavement at the rate of approximately fifty miles a week during the favorable summer months.

Ten mixers started work last week. More than 100 are expected to be busy within a short time, when contractors in all parts of the state, the north as well as the south, start the drive toward the 1,000 mile goal set by the state for the season of 1924.

Of the 4.10 miles of road built this year, 2.55 miles is concrete pavement and 1.55 is gravel; 2.05 miles of concrete was laid last week, when the first favorable weather made its appearance in the southern and central parts of the state.

It will be noted from the report that none of the pavement so far this season was constructed in districts 1, 2, 3, and 4, which comprise the northern part of the state. The weather in those sections prevented an early beginning of hard road work, but activities will start immediately wherever roads are already under contract.

Contractors are on the ground with machinery and material in all districts and forces of men and equipment which broke the world's record for the building of highways last year, are being mobilized to set a new mark this season, according to highway officials.

The early beginning of work has depended upon weather conditions in different sections of the state.

Camps in Forests.

California has more than 100 camp grounds set aside in the national forests of the state by the forest service for the comfort and convenience of travelers. Eighty-eight per cent of the tourists who visited these camps last year came in automobiles.

The Changing World.

Popularity of the so-called balloon tires is increasing daily. As the cord tire superseded the fabric tire, so the balloon seems destined to take the place of the regular tires.

While changes from fabric to cord tires was slow, it is different with balloon tires. Its appearance is different and is readily recognized, and can now be obtained for the smallest and largest cars.

Tiremakers announce they are being flooded with orders for this new style tire.

OF course, you have always intended to take that little run down to Starved Rock. Most people in the central west have it on their summer touring list and thousands of them have enjoyed the tour. But this year added attractions are scattered over the 200 miles down and back from Chicago in highway improvements and better camping and entertainment facilities.

If you plan to go early, better use pavement, complete all the way now via Summit, Joliet, Morris, and Ottawa. The gravel road to Oswego and pavement home via Aurora should be popular later in the season.

For Nervous Keys.

Every man who ever handled an automobile has warmly commented on the manner in which his switch key perversely insisted on presenting its wrong face to the lock. Even to a sober man the average switch keyhole is elusive, at the best. Here is a suggestion that may help: With the nail file from your knife (if you have nothing better) cut a score mark on the top of the handle end of the key. Thereafter instinctively you will feel with your thumb for the scored place and will be saved much minor irritation.

Sinister Totals.

Deaths from automobile accidents numbered 11,666 last year in the census regulation area of the United States, which contains 85 per cent of the total population. This was an increase of 1,489 over the previous year. The total number of killed represents a death rate of 12.6 per 100,000 population. California, one of the four states boasting more than 1,000,000 automobiles, leads with a rate of 26.0 per 100,000 population. Los Angeles has the highest death rate of thirty-seven cities, it being 29.5 per 100,000.

Fleet Owners and Repeat Owners

The average purchaser of hauling equipment is faced with a knotty problem when it comes to choosing the best investment among motor trucks. He cannot spare the time nor the money to study them all, or try them all.

But there is a very simple, practical way out. He can accept the judgment of great business enterprises who do study and compare all trucks down to the last detail. The size of their transportation investment makes it imperative that they buy wisely and with a cautious eye to the future. He can make their experience his own.

Such corporations are buying International Motor Trucks in increasing numbers. Not only do they choose International trucks at the start, but when they buy more trucks they repeat on Internationals. That is the most convincing evidence for the average buyer.

Transportation companies, leading packers, oil corporations, department stores, wholesalers, metropolitan newspapers, building and road contractors—in fact all conceivable lines of industry requiring modern hauling equipment—are being served by International Motor Trucks in fleets ranging up to over 1,800 trucks in the service of one user. Moreover, 6,000 Internationals are owned and operated by the distributors of International Harvester products in this country.

These users have found that International Motor Trucks and International Service together produce hauling at lowest cost. If that is your objective, their experience may be your guide. We shall be glad to refer you to single truck and fleet owners in your own line of business.

Heavy-duty Internationals are built in 3000, 4000, 6000 and 10,000-pound maximum capacities.

International Speed Trucks are built to carry loads up to 2000 pounds.

Suitable bodies for every business.

Busses are furnished in a variety of chassis and styles of bodies to meet every passenger transportation need.

PEOPLE ARE BUYING TOO MANY AUTOMOBILES

Unless you are completely satisfied with the motor car you purchase you naturally take the first opportunity to resell or trade it in to get another car. What happens then?

The purchase price of every automobile includes such items as luxury tax, freight, handling and selling expense. You absorb all this expense every time you make a change. This makes the cost of automobile service extravagant for people who buy too many automobiles.

But when this expense is spread over many years the annual cost of maintaining an automobile is greatly lessened. Besides the economy there is greater satisfaction and pleasure in driving a motor car which completely satisfies the requirements and pride of the owner in performance, unfailing dependability, comfort and appearance.

On this basis Case motor cars are extremely economical. The first price of Case cars is higher than that of many other makes, but the difference is more than made up in genuine satisfaction and service. In these things Case represents most unusual value.

Every Case automobile reflects quality and distinctive attractiveness as long as it is in use, whether six years or ten. It is one of the few fine automobiles which tradition has made permanently distinctive.

But more important than any assurance of style is the absolute certainty that your Case car will be serving you as faithfully and unfailingly years from now as it does the first year you drive it. Men who drive Case cars will tell you that they have not found it necessary to buy too many automobiles.

Pick out your car in this list and make a note of the size of Balloon Tire you should have. Do not compromise or experiment with less than the Full-Sized Balloon which assures you maximum comfort, safety and economy.

Over 40,000 car-owners have already had their cars equipped with Firestone Full-Size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

These remarkable low-pressure tires are sweeping the country in popularity. Everything we have said about their riding comfort, safety, car protection, fuel and mileage economy is borne out in actual service by enthusiastic users everywhere.

Firestone pioneered the Balloon Tire. Firestone concentrated two years' effort at a tremendous investment on this new form of construction—the most important improvement to motoring progress in recent years.

Firestone was building full-size Balloons on a quantity basis months ago. The present large production of the great Firestone factory enables us to offer you full-size Balloon equipment immediately and at lowest cost.

There's no delay in application to your car—and no effort on our part to substitute. We have the complete Firestone Balloon Change-over Units in stock—not only full-size Balloons, but Firestone-built wheels and rims in the small diameters required for successful Balloon results. We can equip your car in a few hours' time, without changing the hubs, brake bands or any part of the wheel except the rims and spokes. We know of no other tire dealers so well equipped to serve motorists in this territory.

Adopt full-size Balloons for your car now. Extend the utility of your car. Put a new enjoyment in long or short trips. Drive more safely under all road conditions—the year 'round. Get equal or better mileage than from regular cords. Make poor roads good and good roads better. Reduce vibration to a minimum, prolonging the life of your car and practically eliminating squeaks and rattles.

No one who has ever ridden on Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords will ever be satisfied with any other tires. Many prominent car makers, as you no doubt have noticed, have adopted them after very exhaustive tests.

Remember that we can provide you with these genuine, full-size Balloons promptly in the standardized size that fits your car.

You will be surprised what a difference in comfort, safety, car conservation and improved appearance our full-size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords make. We, as well as the makers, stand back of these tires just as we do the standard size Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords—insuring your complete satisfaction. Come in and let us show you this remarkable achievement in tire manufacture.

Bureau Submits Co-op Market Plan for Dairy Farmer

Separate Sales Companies to Specialize in One Finished Product.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

AFTER two years of intensive research work to get at the bottom of the dairyman's selling problems, the American Farm Bureau federation announces preliminary plans for marketing dairy products coöperatively.

THEODORE MACKLIN.

The new plan accepts all that is good in past plans and puts them all together in a practical business way, according to Theodore Macklin, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin and supervisor of the farm bureau's dairy marketing fellowships.

The federation has not decided just what steps will be taken to put the plan into use. Charts, which resemble targets and graphically show the scheme are being circulated, and the plan will no doubt be shot at from many different angles by coöperative marketing experts.

Too Much Theory.

Two years ago the farm bureau began to work slowly and carefully on a practical, workable coöperative program for farmers. The officials started with dairy products. They found the cart before the horse—too much theory and not enough practical facts upon which to build constructively. So a research program was initiated by a special advisory committee, consisting of Dr. H. C. Taylor, chief of the United States bureau of agricultural economics; Dr. E. G. Nourse, formerly agricultural economic specialist of Iowa State college, and Dr. Benjamin H. Hibbard, professor of agricultural economics, University of Wisconsin.

Scholarships were given to students in Illinois, Iowa, California, Wisconsin, and Texas by state farm bureaus. Under Prof. Macklin's supervision the various students were given problems in dairying to work out. This work was supplemented with special, closeup studies of coöperative marketing made in various parts of the United States and Canada by Prof. Macklin. All the students' reports have been sent to the supervisor, who has correlated all of these studies, which materially aid in constructing the new plan.

Separate Sales System.

In explaining the new plan, Prof. Macklin says it provides for a separate, independent sales organization composed of local producers' organizations which have primarily one finished product to sell. "The title of cheese passes to cheese sales organization, of butter to the butter sales organization, and not to one agency" as in other proposed plans.

Under this plan, he says, if a local organization produces two finished products, like butter and cheese, it contracts for butter sales with the butter sales company and for American cheese sales with the American cheese sales organization.

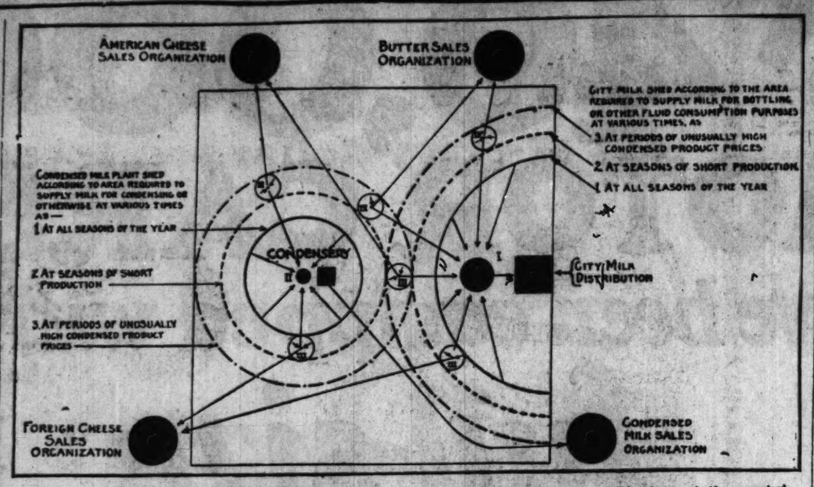
"This plan builds upon the principle of a single interest or the commodity idea," says Mr. Macklin. "On this it follows out the successful experience of coöperative sales organizations for butter and cheese in Denmark, Finland, Switzerland, Canada, Siberia, California, Oregon and Wisconsin."

Feature Each Article.

"In this new plan there are separate sales companies to specialize in merchandising each finished article. It builds on farmer psychology and business psychology involved in industry. It does not combine various kinds of strong, clear cut interests and technical tasks in one sales company, but sticks to the proved practice of having large scale coöperative sales companies specialize on one article and build upon one line of main interest of the same kind.

"The new plan, with most successful coöperative experience to back it, builds on the sales idea that milk is not milk, but is whatever finished article the raw milk is manufactured into. On this plan federation is simplified and made practical, because its foundations are the same uniform interest under each finished product. It enables the butter farmer to organize with producers who think as he thinks and cheese farmers to combine with cheese minded producers."

Another important thing emphasized by Mr. Macklin is that the plan outlines a procedure by which farmers may be assured the greatest opportunity to have milk going into channels able to pay the highest level of prices. He believes the plan will safeguard farmers against ignorant flooding of any market, causing needless price depression. At the same time it protects the consumer in all markets against abuses of being obliged to pay unreasonable prices for products for any important length of time.



NEW CO-OPERATIVE DAIRY PRODUCTS MARKETING PLAN.—This chart shows the proposed organization for marketing dairy products co-operatively. It is the outgrowth of two years' research made by students and market specialists for the American Farm Bureau federation. Divisions of the marketing scheme are explained as follows: 1. City fluid milk marketing organization. 2. Condensery milk marketing organization. 3. Cheese factory organization. 4. Creamery organization.

OLDEST HORSE IN WORLD

CLOVER GETS PENSION AT 53.—A celebration of Clover's fifty-third birthday will be held in New York this summer. The New York Jockey club recently voted him a pension. For thirty-six years this aged trotter has been the family horse of the Rev. Dr. N. Myer of Catawassa, Pa. Clover was born June 15, 1871, has a full mane and all of his teeth. He is fifteen and one-half hands high. His extreme old age, as old age goes in horsedom, is attributed to regularity of work, rest in a comfortable box stall, and eating warm feed regularly.

Radio Speaker Has Good News for the Farmer

MAJ. EDWARD N. WENTWORTH, an authority on the production and marketing of live stock, sees hopeful signs ahead for the farmer. It must have been encouraging to farmer radio fans to hear him, speaking from the W-G-N station the other night, say that live stock production today is on a sufficiently reduced basis to secure larger units of industrial production in exchange.

Pulling the prices of the things they buy down nearer to the prices they get for farm products is, after all, the end toward which producers have been working.

Maj. Wentworth, director of Armour's live stock bureau, estimates that 75 per cent of the cash income on farms within a 500 mile radius of Chicago comes from live stock or its products. Corn is sold off the farm in such small amounts that it constitutes only 8 per cent. Under present conditions, one-fourth of the farm income in the seven corn belt states comes from hogs and one-sixth from cattle, the total reaching the impressive sum of $1,170,000.

From Farmer's Viewpoint.

"In spite of popular opinion, not all classes of live stock suffer from price depressions down to or below 1913 levels," said Mr. Wentworth. "Sheep and lambs are definitely higher, as are the best grades of beef cattle. On the other hand, veal calves correspond to 1913, while hogs and other grades of beef cattle are somewhat below. Compared to this, the general price level for all commodities in commerce is about 50 per cent above 1913. With the exception of sheep and lambs, therefore, the prices of live stock are comparatively lower in relation to general commodities than they were eleven years ago."

His study of the situation from the farmers' viewpoint has revealed that severe distress has developed in agricultural districts, since it has taken far greater quantities of farm products to procure the customary units of industrial production.

From Consumer's Viewpoint.

From the consumer's standpoint, however, he considers the situation ideal. "Regardless of his complaint of higher prices, he has been able to eat better and larger quantities of food and to clothe himself better than ever before. His money has gone farther," says Maj. Wentworth. "While this fortunate situation has created considerable envy among the struggling live-stock producers, it has not been without its advantages to them. In the face of the lost European market, the absence of this increased consumption power would have created a still more intense depression in livestock prices, with even more intense suffering among the live stock interests.

"Live stock and meats are worth money only when some one is desirous of buying them, and the tremendous production to which we were geared in 1919 could not have been cut off more drastically without an agrarian revolt, perhaps rivaling in type that of Coxie's army. The ability of the American consumer to purchase and utilize such large quantities of agricultural products individually has been the salvation of our agriculture, regardless of whether or not agricultural leaders consider their industry saved."

Thinks Tariff Handicap.

Maj. Wentworth considers the protective tariff that keeps out foreign goods a handicap to the live stock men of this country; that credit and loan measures have meant nothing and he sees no relief from opening wide the immigration bars.

"The fallacy of any of these ideas is apparent, since none of them would create more goods for an exchange with agriculture, and the margin between the price levels in agriculture and industry would not be affected," adds this authority.

He is convinced the position of agriculture will be improved only when the ratio of production of agricultural commodities is lessened, which may be brought about by decreasing the production of live stock and crops, or by an increase in the production of other commodities.

STREET REPAIRS THIS YEAR TO MARK RECORD

Increased Auto Traffic the Incentive.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The city government actually plans to add, within its sphere, the sale of 65,000 automobiles in Chicago this year, which Chairman Charles H. Wacker of the Chicago Plan commission says there is an excellent opportunity to sell.

CHAS. H. WACKER.

That may sound strange, because too frequently the city seems to hinder and retard business development, rather than attempt to aid it. But this time Commissioner of Public Works Sprague, Superintendent of Streets Byrne, and his assistant, Joseph Butler, are planning to help. They propose to provide suitable thoroughfares on which the 65,000 extra autos can be operated in comfort.

In Chicago there are approximately 3,350 miles of "improved" streets, which means streets which have been paved. Of these an expert paving man of the board of local improvements estimates there are now only 600 miles in good repair. His definition of "good repair" is a pavement over which one can ride in an automobile in comfort while going twenty-five miles an hour.

Two aldermen, who ride considerably, said yesterday that 600 miles "is entirely too high," and that a correct figure—excluding boulevards—would be half that mileage.

Departments Program.

The plan of the department of public works may be told in two sentences. They believe, although they have not publicly announced it and probably will not, they can put Chicago's streets in much better repair than they have been at any time since the municipality gained the rank of a metropolitan city. That is the department's program. If it is accomplished, as Superintendent of Streets Byrne and his assistant, Butler, privately predict with confidence, the sale of 65,000 added motor vehicles will be promoted by the city. These 65,000 are in addition to cars sold to replace worn out machines.

The street repair program calls for the asphalt repair of nearly twice as much yardage as last year and four times as much as was done in any previous year. It contemplates seven and one-third times as much repairing as was done in 1920, and the asphalt repairs compose nearly half of the pavement repairs of the city.

This prospective record on asphalt repairs is to be accomplished, according to city officials, with only a 12 per cent increase in the amount appropriated. The appropriations should have been even more because the extra 65,000 additional cars should add 12 1/2 per cent more revenue to the street repair fund. But recently the automobile owners have permitted the diversions from this fund to increase substantially.

Use of Heaters.

It took city officials more than an hour to convince this reporter that it was possible nearly to double the amount of asphalt street repairs with only a 12 per cent increase in expenditures. But that is their claim.

Instead of the obsolete, slow and expensive hand method of chopping out holes in the asphalt pavement to later fill up, the street bureau has acquired a number of heaters, which melt the pavement. These, it is claimed, do the work in less time and with much less labor expense. The commissioner insisted that it was almost a criminal waste to continue with the old system when private contractors had demonstrated the merits of the new system.

In addition the city has purchased a number of retreading machines which, it is claimed, will save more cash, and do faster work and just as efficient work as the old hand method. On top of these devices the commissioner has purchased most of his materials at a lower price than was paid last year.

Putting it altogether, the street bureau predicts it will repair 1,000,000 square yards of asphalt this year, as compared with 524,691 last year, 241,486 in 1922, 258,496 in 1921, and 136,198 in 1920.

The most interesting part of the story to the motorists are the replies to these questions: What streets is the city going to repair, and when will the work be done?

How Work Will Be Done.

The answer of the street bureau is that the work has been started with five gangs divided into two groups each. It is now planned tentatively to start from the center of the city in five different wards and work towards the outskirts. The following table shows the gangs by letters and the wards in which each will work, as well as the order in which it is planned to make the repairs:

Gangs—	Wards—
A—	1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.
B—	11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.
C—	20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30.
D—	31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40.
E—	42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50.

Any Motorist May Guess.

Each of the 263,000 motor owners of Chicago may make his own guess when his ward will be reached from the following information: It is planned to follow the order presented and continue work until Dec. 1 and later if weather permits. The time spent in each ward will vary with the amount of repairing to be done. When the repairing stopped on Dec. 26 last it was reckoned by the ward superintendents there was still 388,632 square yards of repairing which was then urgently needed. It is estimated that this area is now twice as much and still more holes will be worn through before the summer is two-thirds gone.

EVELYN ASKS A NEW LUNACY TRIAL FOR THAW

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.—A motion for a new trial in the case of Harry K. Thaw, who is seeking to gain his freedom from Kirkbride's asylum, was filed in the court of common pleas here today by Evelyn Nesbit's attorney, William A. Gray.

The motion was filed on the decision of Miss Nesbit to further oppose Thaw's release. The action will prevent Judge Monaghan from signing the sanity verdict for Thaw's release as brought in in the case just closed.

Thaw must remain a patient at the asylum until the motion has been argued. This action will be taken within a week, it was said.

CODE BREAKS UP CHURCH HOLDING SERVICE BY RADIO

Topeka, Kas., April 26.—[Special.]—Does interference with radio waves carrying a sermon constitute a violation of the Kansas law prohibiting interference with religious worship?

That is the question submitted to Attorney General Charles B. Griffith by the congregation of a little church at Norway, in Republic county. This church does not have a pastor at the present time. But the trustees of the church determined to continue the regular services every Sunday, so they installed a radio receiving set and have been getting the services from Omaha.

When the Omaha congregation sings, so do the folks in the little church at Norway. When the pastor at Omaha announces the offering, the plate is passed at Norway. And the Norway folks hear the sermon of the Omaha pastor over the radio and the loud speaker.

But it seems that there is a small broadcasting station not far from Norway and that the operator of this station keeps interfering with the reception of the Omaha church service.

The attorney general advised the Norway congregation today that if the interference was done purposely or maliciously it could be stopped and the perpetrator prosecuted. He held that it would be purely a case of interference with religious worship and subject to the same penalties as if it were actual interference with the services if conducted within the church at Norway.

It is said that this is the first church in the country to establish regular radio church services.

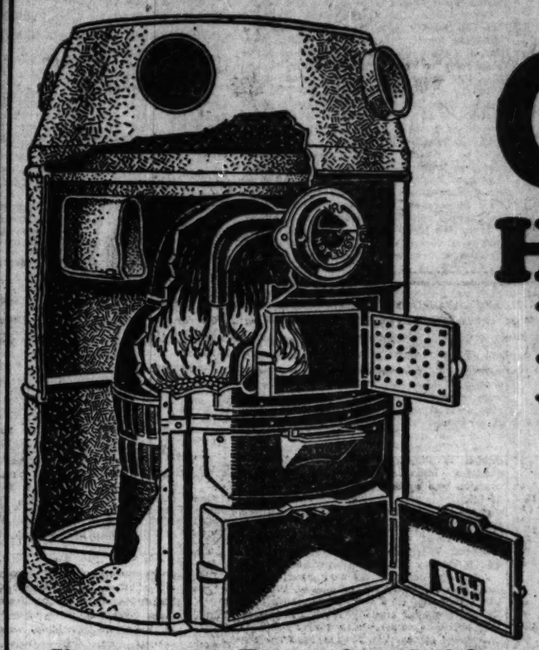
out of every dollar you spend for fuel!



COLES Original Hot Blast Furnace
Will Do It for You

This actual saving has been proved in thousands of homes. There are thousands of these furnaces in use, every one saving its owner 1/3 to 1/2 in fuel year in and year out. Read how.

Burns 20 Pounds of Air to Every Pound of Fuel

Superheated air is mixed with the smoke, soot and gases and driven back upon the fire, where all are completely consumed.

The ordinary under-draft furnace allows these valuable fuel gases, with the smoke and soot, to go to waste up the chimney, and thus wastes about 50 cents out of every fuel dollar. By burning all gases, smoke and soot, Cole's Hot Blast saves this waste.

That's the secret—complete combustion. Cole's Hot Blast burns air—which costs nothing—with your costly fuel, and thereby makes a hotter, cleaner fire which gets full heat value out of every pound of fuel.

This wouderful furnace not only gives you this great saving. It gives you a better heated home—an even, steady heat—cleaner and more healthful. The warm air passes over an extra large humidifier, which automatically sterilizes it, at the same time giving it just the proper degree of humidity, so that your rooms are always filled with moist, pure, warm air, continually in circulation. Dry air causes colds and illness. Pure moist air is healthful.

This wonderfully efficient furnace is the result of years of experience by expert heating engineers. The extra large radiator extracts every particle of heat from the flaming fuel gases. The opening from the combustion chamber into the radiator is 50% larger than on most furnaces and gives double the air circulation. This means greater economy and efficiency.

All of the dealers listed below have expert furnace men, who will install your furnace for greatest economy and perfect service. Cole's Hot Blast Furnace is also made in single register design, for pipeless heating.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Wall street sentiment once more swerved to a more hopeful attitude yesterday. The extraordinarily heavy outstanding short interest in the stock market still was pointed to as automatically providing an anchor to windward. Covering by professional operators who had been riding the market from its earlier top price level has taken place, but if estimates of important commission houses may be considered of value, this movement has by no means yet accomplished its full task.

Buying orders were well distributed throughout the list, but the steels, sugars and motors gave the best exhibitions of group strength. Among the many issues to close a point or more higher were Bethlehem Steel 8 per cent preferred, Iron Products, Mack Trucks, Nash Motors, Stromberg Carburetor and Cuban-American Sugar.

Changes in the railroad group were mixed and narrow, heaviness again cropping out in Norfolk and Western. Publication of favorable March earnings statements by the St. Paul and New Haven railroads passed unnoticed by these stocks.

Expectations that conferences between J. P. Morgan and representatives of the allied governments in Paris would lead to favorable financial developments for Europe stimulated active buying of French and Belgian bonds, some of which sold at the highest prices of the year. Serbian 8s also continued their remarkable rally, establishing another new 1924 top price at 80¾.

The week's rally in security prices bankers said, was comparatively an insignificant development when viewed alongside the establishment of a $5,000,000 acceptance credit for Germany. First, it meant the gradual restoration of Germany's trade pre-war track with the United States; second, the overcoming of a handicap imposed on the American dollar through the setting up of the pound sterling as the chief discount bill for the new Germany; and, third, the event dovetailed with other events bearing on the whole reparations settlement.

The U. S. Steel corporation board meeting scheduled for next Tuesday was not overlooked as a factor of the utmost importance. It was recalled that the unexpected action in passing on an extra dividend on the common stock six months ago was a turning point for the market. Retention of an extra, it was suggested, would be another straw indicating the trend of thought of some of the country's industrial leaders.

Although the matter has not cropped out on the surface, consideration has been given to steps which would require the consent of commission house customers before their securities could be loaned. That the adoption of such a regulation would be a step in the right direction was the thought uppermost in the minds of those favoring its acceptance.

Negotiations are in progress between the Standard Oil company of New Jersey and the California Petroleum corporation to bring about closer operating relations in the California fields. Consideration has been given to the formation of a new company to handle Standard's expanding shipments of California crude oil. The company has a contract to take 36,000,000 barrels from California Petroleum corporation over a three year period.

The machinery and business of the Gadsby plant of the Worthington Pump and Machinery corporation in Wisconsin, which produces power and mining machinery, has been acquired by the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company at a reported price of less than $1,000,000. The transaction does not involve real estate. The plant will be closed, it was said, and the unsold departments transferred to larger Worthington plants.

Net operating income of seventy-two telephone companies in the United States for the month of February totaled $10,966,120, compared with $11,773,286 for the corresponding month last year. From Jan. 1 the companies report a net operating income of $22,683,006, compared with $23,430,634 for the corresponding period last year.

The New York stock exchange has received a notice from the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company that all certificates in connection with the new stock issue are ready for delivery and holders of receipts should call for stock as soon as possible.

The Premier Diamond Mining company of South Africa declared an interim dividend of 150 per cent, compared with 300 per cent last year. The Mexican Eagle Oil company has declared a dividend of 7s for each ten shares of first preference stock, payable in London April 30.

Grain Receipts Increased; Primaries Up 45 Per Cent

Grain at primary markets increased more than 4,000,000 bu. last week, being the largest in more than a month, and aggregated 12,952,000 bu. But they were 463,000 bu. less than last year's, and 1,153,000 bu. more than the five year average. Corn and oats receipts were the largest for the period in five years, and wheat were the smallest.

Chicago received 2,295,000 bu of grains for the week, or 60,000 bu more than the previous week, and 510,000 bu under last years. A feature was the increased arrivals of oats from the northwest which exceeded the previous weeks and last years.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Local unlisted security prices showed a gradual decline during the major portion of last week, but a subsequent partial recovery was made in a number of issues.

Brunswick-Balke-Collender was under pressure, selling off approximately 5 points to 102 bid, 103 asked. Bucyrus common broke 3 points to 54 bid, 56 asked. Western Grocer common at 68½ bid, 90½ asked was 2 points lower. Butler Brothers after opening at 32¾ relinquished a full point, but then rallied to a close of 32½ bid, 32¼ asked. DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1924: Fairchild News Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Edward T. Pickard, chief of the textile division of the department of commerce, sails for Europe next week to make a survey of foreign markets as they affect the American textile industry. While abroad Mr. Pickard will maintain headquarters at the office of the commercial attaché at the American embassy in London.

BERLIN.—A wave of financial difficulties is submerging banks in the Rhineland and Saxony, according to reports being received here, and new failures are occurring daily. The situation has resulted in a money shortage which is seriously crippling the fur market at Leipzig.

BOSTON, Mass.—A strike of more than 14,000 shoe workers in Haverhill was averted temporarily at least, by Supreme Court Justice Carroll, who persuaded the manufacturers to give workers more time to submit evidence on labor costs in competing centers. The controversy arose when the manufacturers announced their intention of putting a 25 per cent wage reduction into effect.

BRUSSELS.—The appreciation of the franc has considerably disturbed the Belgian textile market, although the fact that most of the Flemish mills are booked until well into the fall will undoubtedly preclude any material price adjustments in the immediate future.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Unfinished cotton goods today in moderate demand, buyers refusing to follow advances readily. Yarns steady; spinners firmer in demand for better prices. Linens, with exception of dress linen division, were very quiet. Burlaps continued barely steady. Wool goods showed some slight improvement in the demand for fancy or novelty fine dress goods. Men's wear was in light demand. Light weight knit goods for underwear were in better call, but outer wear was not as active as a year ago. Silks were being bought well from the jobbers.

RAILROAD NOTES

Railroad officials of roads operating east of Chicago and St. Louis report a larger volume of tonnage in some commodities, but that the total volume is smaller than a year ago. General merchandise shipments appear to have fallen off moderately.

Southern roads are doing a good business also, compared to normal, and, except for running a little less than a year ago, would be considered excellent. There is a good volume of business in general merchandise.

Railroad equipment orders since the first of the year aggregated 613 locomotives, exclusive of 100 placed with the American Locomotive company by the Chesapeake and Ohio, and 72,730 freight cars and 706 passenger cars. In the first four months of 1923 orders totaled 1,551 locomotives, 65,694 freight cars, and 1,156 passenger cars.

The Wabash has just put into service the first installment, consisting of 250 cars, constructed primarily for the handling of pipe, but equally available for other classes of traffic requiring extra length equipment. Present indications are that the Philadelphia and Reading will shortly place orders for 2,000 seventy ton hopper cars, for which it put out inquiries several weeks ago. The Southern Pacific has ordered thirty automatic dump cars from the Case Crane and Engineering company.

California railroad commission has authorized the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railway to acquire all the outstanding stock, except five directors' shares, of the California Southern railway. This line is now operated by the Atchison under a ten year lease authorized by the commission three years ago from the Santa Fé Land Improvement company.

Surplus freight cars in good repair April 14 were 395,981, an increase of 27,257 since April 7.

March Imports Smaller than Those of Last Year

Washington, D. C., Apr. 26.—United States imports during March were valued at $320,616,000, against $397,923,000 last year, same period, the department of commerce announced today. March exports worth $339,674,000, against $340,377,000. Crude materials for use in manufacturing worth $103,157,000, led the imports, although they declined from $144,657,000 for the corresponding month last year. Imports of silk and manufactures were valued at $13,484,259, against $42,577,521.

World Sugar Production Increases 1,029,161 Tons

NEW YORK, April 26.—An increase in the world's sugar production of 1,029,161 long tons is estimated in a survey just completed by the United States Sugar association. Principal increases, outside of the United States sources of supply, are expected in European beet sugar and India sugar. These increases are not expected to affect the United States market because both crops are likely to be consumed in Europe.

SUGAR MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 26.—SUGAR—Raw was quiet; no fresh business. Prices were unchanged at 6.28c for Cubans, duty paid. Raw closed 3@8 points net lower. ROSIN AND TURPENTINE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 26.—No naval stores market today; holiday.

A Saw, A Hammer and Compo-Board

WHEN you need material for that new room or that cupboard or closet you are going to build, ask your lumber dealer to show you Compo-Board. You will find that for these purposes it is far superior to lumber since it takes paint, paper, kalsomine, burlap or any other kind of decoration and does not warp, crack or shrink under the effects of heat and moisture.

Compo-Board Is Different

Compo-Board has a real wood core, the feature that distinguishes it from and makes it superior to ordinary fibre boards. Examine the sample shown and you will see the reason for its superiority.

The next time you build anything whether it is a new house or only a shelf—use Compo-Board and you will be greatly pleased with the results.

Write us for free sample, prices and full information.

Compo-Board is composed of three parts: The specially prepared covering, Nos. 1 and 5, the wood core, No. 3, the cement, Nos. 2 and 4. Compo-Board will not warp, buckle, shrink or crack. It is moisture-proof. For wall lining, partitions and hundreds of other uses it has no equal. Compo-Board is handled by lumber dealers everywhere.

Week-end hog offerings at about 20,-000, including 3,000 fresh arrivals, which were among the smallest on record for Saturday, and 17,000 carried over from Friday, proved equal to trade requirements, holding the day's top and average prices steady at $7.45 and $7.31, respectively.

Demand favored better grades, causing a strong advance in spots, while in-between and commoner kinds were neglected and closed weak, comprising most of the 7,000 held over for Monday. Shippers took 4,000.

Although sharp declines in hog prices were checked at the close, prevailing rates are fully 15@20c below previous Saturday, with spots off more on under-weights. Top closed 20c below a week ago, and average price 15c lower, the average at $7.30 being within 5c of the lowest day since March 17. This month's receipts of hogs promise to total around 700,000 or third largest on record for April.

Hog receipts at Chicago last week totaled 165,500, the largest week this month, being 21,100 larger than arrivals previous week, and 23,300 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight at 235 lbs., equaled the heaviest week since last October, being 2 lbs. heavier than previous week and 2 lbs. heavier than the ten year average. Hog prices last week averaged $7.35, lowest week this month and $4.65 under the ten year average.

There was a general narrowing of the price range for beef cattle last week, better kinds closing 50c@$1.00 lower than Monday, while the cheaper grades showed little change. Feeding steers closed strong to 25c higher for the week with butcher stock 15@50c lower, canners and cutters, 10@25c lower and calves 50c@$1.00 off from previous Saturday. Top steers for the week, $12.50, with general average price of good beef steers $9.50, against $10.20 previous week. Receipts for week, 51,000 against 51,676 a year ago. Jewish holidays and warmer weather worked against trade in better grades of beef steers.

Aged Sheep Increase

Swelled beyond normal by liberal Texas and Arizona offerings supply of aged sheep swamped the outlet for mutton, causing sensational declines in both live sheep value and dressed products throughout the past week. Although the downward trend was checked at the close loosely in aged sheep prices on hoof for the week amounted to $2.00@$3.00, with weighty wool ewes off most. After a strong to higher start last week, lambs slumped in sympathy with aged stock but reacted again after midweek and closed on a level with previous week's close.

Average price of aged sheep at $9.40 last week stands lowest since week ending March 8, being 85c below previous week, $1.70 above a year ago and 60c under the ten year average. Lambs averaged $14.10, against $16.09 previous week, $13.49 a year ago and a ten year average of $13.65.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 51,000 hogs and 17,000 sheep against 18,956 cattle, 56,626 hogs, and 11,514 sheep a week ago, and 20,926 cattle, 45,960 hogs, and 12,523 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 53,000 cattle, 155,000 hogs, and 56,000 sheep against 56,815 cattle, 171,963 hogs, and 55,333 sheep a year ago.

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

Report sales of 200,000 to 300,000 bu Manitoba wheat were reported at the seaboard, but there was evidence of a much larger business being put through than claimed. Switzerland bought a cargo on Friday. The 24,000 bu corn sold at the gulf on Friday brought 9½c over Chicago May.

Local handlers sold 17,000 bu wheat, 40,-000 bu corn, 40,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with 100,000 bu wheat to go to store, making 280,000 bu sold the last week. Friday's sales to go to store were 200,000 bu wheat and 15,000 bu corn.

Owing to the vast difference in the quality of the offerings of wheat at Chicago, the range of prices on hard winter is frequently very wide. As high as 10c over May is quoted for fancy No. 2 hard, while a poor kind cannot be sold at over 1c over the future. Offerings of red winter are practically nothing, and No. 2 red is nominally 1@3c over. Receipts, 13 cars. Outside cash markets were unsettled, with St. Louis unchanged to 1c higher; Kansas City, unchanged, and Omaha unchanged to ½c lower.

Offerings of cash corn here were larger and sample values ½@1c lower, while the basis was ½@¾c lower. No. 3 mixed brought ½c under and yellow 1c over to ½c under May, with No. 2 yellow 2¼c over. No. 4 grades were 1¼@1½c under the future. Receipts, 130 cars. Outside markets, 2c higher to 1½c lower, the latter at Omaha and the former at St. Louis.

Demand for cash oats was less active, with the basis easier at 2@3¼c over May for No. 2 white and 1@2c over for No. 3 white. Receipts, 95 cars.

GERMAN CREDIT REPORTS BOOST WHEAT PRICES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

There was considerable change in the character of the news affecting the wheat market. Sentiment became much less bearish.

The reports of the arrangements for a German credit in this country, combined with the strength in Liverpool and in foreign exchange, with freezing temperatures over part of the western wheat belt, led to a better class of buying. There was an advance, the finish being ⅛@¾c higher. Coarse grains were firmer early, but weakened later on selling by longs. Corn lost ¼@⅝c and oats ⅛@⅜c, while rye was up ½c.

Grains Lower for Week.

Scattered liquidation by May longs was in evidence a good part of the last week, and while there was good buying at times on the prospect of legislation at Washington that would artificially advance values, the average was lower. At the last wheat was off 1@1½c as compared with a week ago, while corn was down 1¾@1¾c, oats ¼@½c, and rye ½@⅝c. Lard closed 30@32½c, ribs 25@35c, and bellies 25c lower than the previous week.

Exporters Buy Winnipeg Wheat.

The legislative situation at Washington is being closely watched by all classes of traders, and is a market influence of no mean importance. Forecast for freezing temperatures in Kansas and Nebraska overnight with below freezing in western Oklahoma and in the Texas panhandle where the crop is in a position to be damaged caused some apprehension amongst believers in lower prices. Highly beneficial rains fell over the greater part of the northwest.

Exporters were big buyers of May wheat at Winnipeg, one house taking 1,000,000 bu May at $1, and there were intimations from the seaboard that export business in Manitobas was larger than claimed with reports of 300,000 bu sold during the day. Winnipeg messages to the effect that American mills had bought 14,000,000 bu Canadian wheat and would pay the duty of 42c had little effect. There was scattered liquidation under way in May at the last which had a depressing effect here. Sales of 100,000 bu were made to go to store. May closed at $1.03½@1.03¾, July $1.05¾, and September at $1.06¾.

Corn Weakens at Last.

Corn was firmer early with wheat but a local professional sold on scale orders, and with a light trade it took but little increase in the pressure toward the last to make a sharp recession. A decline of ¼@½c in the spot basis had a depressing effect, as did the continued slow eastern demand. May closed at 76⅞c, July at 75¼c, and September at 77⅝c.

Oats were affected mainly by the action of corn and eased off, after a minor upturn early, and closed at the bottom. Trade was largely of a local character. Rains were beneficial over the greater part of the belt. Receipts 95 cars with the spot basis ¼@½c lower.

Rye was wanted by shorts here while elevator interests bought at Minneapolis, but no export business was disclosed at the seaboard.

Trading in provisions was largely in the way of changing from the nearby to the deferred deliveries. Strength in hogs was ignored, and lard closed 2¼@5c lower with ribs off 7½@12½c, while bellies were unchanged. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date is 1,237,-000, against 1,402,000 last year. Prices follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

A heavy freeze was reported in western Kansas Friday night, and the forecast was for frost or freezing temperatures in Kansas and Nebraska over night. Serious damage, especially to fruit, is likely if the drop in temperatures materialize. Rains in Kansas greatly benefited the new wheat crop.

"Condition of wheat from Evansville to here promises about 25 per cent of a crop," wired "B. O. Cromwell to Lamson Bros. & Co. from Terre Haute, Ind. There has been no improvement since April 1. Early oats coming up to a good stand. Considerable corn in the country and sufficient seed corn. This is about the dividing line north and south between poor and good wheat."

Apprehension of dry weather in parts of the northwest has been allayed by a heavy rain and sleet storm over a good part of that territory.

George M. Le Count in a message to Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Bradley, S. D., said: "Still very dry. Grain coming up very uneven. Some late sown grain not germinating."

North Dakota wheat crop is 12 days to two weeks ahead of normal according to Dr. J. L. Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

Marketability.

Marketability is an important element of investment. Some investors, however, lay too much stress on its importance and some take the opposite course and ignore it entirely.

It frequently happens that a bond which has not a very ready or wide market will pay a larger rate of interest (to compensate for its lack of salability) than can be obtained on another bond of equal safety which has an active and broad market.

Some investors look for marketability which they really do not need in the case that they intend holding the bond until maturity and are in such circumstances that they will not need their principal back before maturity. They may pay more, or sacrifice something in the interest rate to secure the salability of which they do not intend to make use.

On the other hand, if one is likely to need his money back almost any time, or will want to borrow money on his bond, he should be sure that the bond he purchases has a ready marketability.

In the case of stocks it is different and marketability is almost an essential element. A stock has no maturity date and there is no guarantee that dividends always will be paid. The only way, therefore, that the investor can get his principal back from a stock is to sell it. If the stock is not paying dividends and he is unable to sell it, it becomes, to all intents and purposes, worthless to him as an investment. Ready marketability is, therefore, of much greater importance in the case of stocks than of bonds.

These things should be considered before investing in a security. If the investor feels that he needs ready marketability he should make sure that he is getting it. If he does not need it there is no use in paying for it.

The Oldest—Yet Still Growing Fast

WHEN you think of it, is it not a wonderful thing that this old conservative House which traces its origin back to the very beginning of Chicago should still be experiencing a rapid growth? Must not this mean that it is giving the public a service of exceptional value—does it not indicate that you may be missing something of real worth that you should know more about?

A Notable Increase in Five Years

These figures tell the story of an ever increasing demand for our First Mortgage Bonds as people learn their safety, liberal yield and many other advantages:

1919 Sales Exceeded 1918 by 289%
1920 Sales Exceeded 1919 by 75%
1921 Sales Exceeded 1920 by 56%
1922 Sales Exceeded 1921 by 130%
1923 Sales Exceeded 1922 by 19%

Comparing our 1923 sales with those of 1918 the increase shows a growth of appreciation of our First Mortgage Bonds which is illuminating—an almost incredible gain in the volume of bonds purchased. Our clients now buy nearly twenty-nine times as many bonds as they did five years ago. Think of this.

The New York Times.

New York, April 26.—[Special.]—The renewed advance in European exchange rates was the noteworthy incident of today's financial markets. It carried the franc back to 6¼ cents, while sterling rose 1½ cents.

This upward movement, in which Italian and Belgian exchange participated, was in response to the day's news. Formal announcement of the creation of a $5,000,000 American credit as an initial step in equipping the new German gold bank and applying the provisions of the Dawes report was not made until after the close of Friday's business and the official acceptance of the Dawes plan by the French, Italian, Belgian and British governments was published today.

Cheerful Sentiment Inspired.

Each of these incidents had a special effect on general sentiment because of the promptness with which the necessary measures had been taken. This businesslike beginning of the work of agreement and reconstruction has been the outstanding fact in the entire epic.

It has largely disarmed both skepticism and criticism by showing the subconscious attitude of both political and financial authorities, to the effect that this plan of settlement must be and will be carried out, because otherwise an impossible situation would exist. As for the market, it may be said that the rapidity with which the preliminary work of settlement has already been carried on has made it difficult to give reflection to the new phases of the situation.

Stock Market Trend Upward.

The stock market was firm from opening to close, but only moderately active. The purchases under which prices rose were again mostly attributable to recent professional sellers for the decline. The industrials again scored the sharpest gains, the railroads as a group again recording only fractional gains.

Numerous advances of a point or more were recorded in some of the active specialties issues, especially in Cast Iron Pipe, which has been advancing sharply of late as a result of pool operations. Steel common sold up to 101 and closed at 100¾, gaining ¾ net for the day. Other issues which recorded good gains included American Can, Baldwin and American Locomotives, Studebaker, Cuba Cane Sugar preferred, Dupont, and General Electric. Petroleum stocks as a group were again higher, especially among the Standard Oil issues.

Marks Fourth Day of Recovery.

Today was the fourth consecutive day on which stock prices advanced. The "averages" show that in these four days the market recovered all the ground lost in the eleven previous business days. To find a day on which the averages closed at a level higher than today one must go back to April 7. In other words, the stock market recovered between April 8 and April 26 all of the ground lost between April 7 and April 22.

It is left for the next week to show whether the stock exchange can be stirred into genuine action by the course of events in Europe. The experience of the last four years has shown that this did not easily happen; yet people, in and out of Wall street, are beginning to grasp the fact that we now have before us the possibility of a European situation which has not existed since the war ended.

Bond Market Also Firm.

In the bond market the firmness which has existed all the week was again displayed today. Comparison of the weekend prices with those of a week ago show in some respects a striking and significant picture. The advance in European government bonds has been impressive; the rise in United States government bonds even more so. Taken together, the two movements indicate both the existence of a mass of available investment capital and its somewhat more favorable attitude toward foreign investments.

Moderate expansion in loans and deposits is shown in today's weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks, with discounts larger by $12,977,000, demand deposits by $2,673,000, and time deposits by $12,205,000. Surplus reserve decreased $13,565,000, now standing at $18,607,300.

transportation, schools, stores, churches, recreation centers.

BARGAINS IN USED CARS

Do you believe that you are competent to judge a bargain in a Used Car? Frankly, we don't think so. We get fooled very often and we have been in the business twenty years. Very often a car in test shows up very satisfactory, the tires are fair and while the paint may not be all that could be desired we can correct that of course. The report from the tester recommends to grind valves, clean carbon, adjust brakes, etc., but when the job is opened we find it needs some new valves, new rings, some pistons and pins, new brake lining on the foot brakes, etc.

Let's suppose that on the strength of the first examination and the test that $500 had been allowed, for the figuring on spending as per original estimate $150, including paint, making it's cost $650. Now let's suppose that the latter condition existed and it was necessary to spend another $100 or $150, who is going to pay for that? Mind you, the car was originally taken in to be sold for $500 as is, or $650 fixed up. One way would be to try and get another $100 or $150 out of it, and advertise it as a bargain.

No one is in business to lose money. They could instruct the shop to let that part of the work go, as they are already in on this particular car as far as they dare go, as it will bring $600 to $650 at the outside, regardless of what is done to it. Just camouflage it up, touch up and varnish only, don't paint it, we're hooked, pass it on to the other fellow and let him worry about it.

That's two ways of handling the matter. We do not accept Used Cars in exchange as part payment on new ones. We could not afford to take a loss of even $100. Our discounts would not permit it. Our new cars are priced below competitive cars made possible by shorter discounts, and the fact that we are not forced to take Used Car losses. Used Cars are left with us by the owners of same to be sold at their market value. All costs of reconditioning is deducted from the sales result. We not only do not suffer any losses in the transaction, but actually get paid for the repairs necessary. Cars sold by us are not bargains, but worth the money.

Because a large percentage of our Used Car purchasers eventually come back and purchase new ones. We exercise the same care when selling a Used Car to see that it is satisfactory, as we do when selling a new one.

GUARANTEE

Any purchaser of a Used Car sold by us can reserve the right to return the car to us within a reasonable length of time and have any mechanical defect corrected without further cost to him, or if not as represented in any particular can get his money back without argument.

WILL BUILD 300 BUNGALOWS IN SOUTH CHICAGO

Site Purchased at 104th and Torrence.

An extensive building program, to include at least 300 bungalows, is announced by L. Frank & Co., who have offices in the new Burnham building, La Salle and Randolph. They have purchased thirty acres west of Torrence and north of 104th, from the Calumet Trust, with an option on additional land. Albert S. Bierly was broker.

Fifty of the 450 lots into which the land is being subdivided, will be for business, along 103d. A car line is promised for 103d this summer and the street is to be widened to 100 feet.

Frank & Co. have started work on ten bungalows, just north of Trumbull park, on lots, between 102d and 103d, which will be the first unit of the 300 proposed. Arrangements for loans have been made with a large eastern insurance company.

J. Romdey of Frank & Co., states that sixteen buildings already have been sold, although none is yet near completion. The houses will have five and six rooms and stand on thirty-two foot lots.

Trumbull park has a community building, playgrounds, swimming pool, etc. The lots are on the three sides of the park.

It's a fifty-eight flat building, with two, three, four, and five rooms, on a 110x196 site at the northeast corner of Linden and 5th. It's cost $125,000, will be called Linden Court, and will be completed Oct. 1.

News of the Architects

The Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects and the Illinois Society of Architects will hereafter meet in the University club instead of in the Art institute. One of the largest of the private dining rooms has been assigned to the architects, both for their monthly dinners and for their collection of paintings of famous Chicago architects. It was the removal of these paintings from the walls of the Art institute clubrooms that decided the architects to seek other quarters.

The first annual exhibit under the auspices of the new Chicago Architectural Exhibition league will be held at the Art institute from May 1 to June 1. The league is a corporation organized by representatives of the Chicago Architectural club, Chicago chapter, A. I. A., and the Illinois Society of Architects. Clare C. Hosmer is director of the 1924 exhibition.

William J. Bendus & Co. have moved from the Steinway building to larger quarters in the McCormick building, suite 2049. The phone is unchanged.

Architect Arthur G. Morey has moved to suite 616, 115 South Dearborn street, the Adams Express building. His phone is Dearborn 1352.

Frank A. Randall, structural engineer, has moved from 19 South La Salle to suite 1835 in the Burnham building.

The Austin company, industrial engineers and builders, have moved from 39 South La Salle to suite 1300 in the new Burnham building. Their new phone is State 5510.

Tribune Want Ads Prompt Quick Action!

The outstanding characteristic of Tribune Want Ads is their immediate resultfulness. They do not involve the delays that invariably attach to other forms of buying, selling, hiring or trading. When you need immediate action (as well as an abundance of replies) remember Tribune Want Ads.

Because of their prompt action, the successful business man uses Tribune Want Ads to buy his investment real estate properties, his apartment buildings, his vacant sites for future building.

Because they secure immediate results, the young couple just married uses a Tribune Want Ad to buy a house, to rent a furnished apartment or to secure a desirable location in an apartment hotel.

A housewife, facing the disastrous reality of a decreased family budget, uses Tribune Want Ads to rent a room, or to rent the entire house or apartment; perhaps to dispose of expensive furnishings.

The owner of a small retail business who sees a broader opportunity in some other line or location, sells his hardware, grocery or delicatessen store quickly with Tribune Want Ads.

Nothing is more vital in the course of one's business and financial future than reading the Want Ad Section of The Tribune every day and running a Want Ad there for quick action when the time arrives.

BUDD PREDICTS 200,000 FOR NILES CENTER

"L" Head Sees Big Growth in Next Decade.

BY AL CHASE.

Britton I. Budd, president of the Chicago Rapid Transit, in a speech in Evanston during the week, predicted that within ten years Niles Center will have a population of 200,000. You'll probably hear this statement of Mr. Budd's quoted by enthusiastic subdividers until you are all tired of it as you undoubtedly already are of hearing of how you'd be a millionaire if you'd bought the corner of Wilson and Broadway when you were a child and held on to it until now.

BRITTON I. BUDD. [Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

Mr. Budd, however, made one statement of facts (not a prediction) which the subdivision gentlemen will not wildly rush to tell the world. He said trains will not be running on the Niles extension until the spring of 1925. He already has warned the public that it may be ten or more years before the interurban line is extended north of Dempster street. This should be good news for some, however, for it'll mean the terminal may develop if it's given time and doesn't become merely a way station between the main line and Waukegan.

Engage City Planners.

These comments of Mr. Budd's are preliminary to the news that the subdividers who form the Northwestern "L" Development association apparently agreeing with Mr. Budd's prediction of fast growth, yesterday engaged the city planning firm of Edward H. Bennett, Parsons, Frost & Thomas, to zone Niles Center and to draw up a comprehensive city plan for the district bounded by Simpson on the north, the North Shore channel on the east, Touhy road on the south and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul on the west.

The association merely will finance the project in somewhat the same way that the Commercial club developed the Chicago plan, leaving the entire carrying out of the suggestions to the Niles Center village officials, without trying to dictate to them in any way. In other words, the realty men will pay the bills and the Niles Center town fathers will get the glory.

Plenty of Parks.

The city plan will call for street widening, for parks and playgrounds needed for a city of 200,000, for school sites, for business centers, fire zones, etc. It will be made to fit in as part of the Chicago plan when the district eventually is absorbed by Chicago.

In this connection Henry G. Zander, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, in a speech during the week in Niles Center, urged the community to spend all the money it needed for public improvements through bond issues, for when annexation comes Chicago will assume these debts. He pointed out that the town might as well now take advantage of this almost certain annexation and get needed improvements.

Niles Center has just closed a contract with Chicago for water. Mains are now being laid.

Building permits issued yesterday were twenty-one, for a total value of $394,000. Twelve of them were over $5,000. Those for $10,000 and over follow:

Lake View Landmark to Make Way for $200,000 Bank Bldg.

Emil J. Dirks, who has operated safety deposit vaults and a real estate and mortgage business at the northeast corner of Diversey parkway, Racine and Lincoln avenues for twenty-five years, has organized the Diversey Trust and Savings bank, with a capital of $200,000, and the above building, designed by Architect Clarence Hatzfeld, is to be erected there.

The site, fronting 72 feet on Diversey and 125 feet on Racine, was purchased from Henry Dirks for $72,000. The present improvement is the oldest and the first business building erected at these corners by Mr. Dirks shortly after the Chicago fire. It will be wrecked on May 1 to make way for the bank building. The new structure will cost $200,000 and will be completed on or before Dec. 1. It will be fireproof, and the entire first floor will be used by the bank. There'll be offices on the second floor.

Brokers' Notes

John F. Diffenderffer & Co., who have been in the real estate business on the west side in the vicinity of Harrison and Kedzie for the last twenty-four years, will move on May 1 from 703 South Kedzie to new and larger quarters at 3157 West Harrison, same phones. At the same time the firm will open a mortgage loan department. Mr. Diffenderffer believes in living as well as working on the west side; his home is at 306 South Hamlin avenue.

Alexander G. Stavrou will move on Thursday from suite 505 Lumber Exchange building to larger quarters in suite 701. Same phone.

George T. Steen has moved from 5252 Broadway to new real estate offices at the southwest corner of Clark and Rogers, 7374 North Clark street. His new phone is Rogers Park 8215.

George Landeck has moved from Niles Center to 6459 Lakewood avenue, where he lives and has a temporary real estate office. Mr. Landeck was commissioner of highways in Niles Center for twenty years.

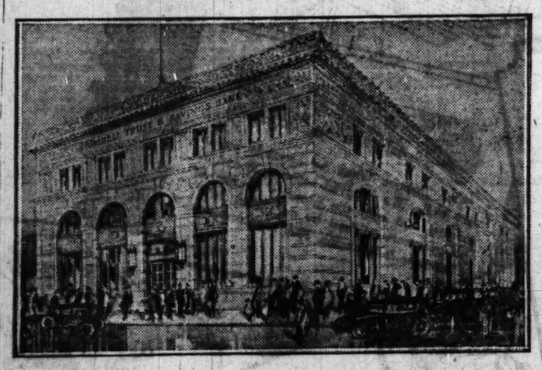
George W. and Frank V. Busch, who have been doing business in Auburn Park for the last decade as Busch Brothers, will open a Kenwood branch at 1316 East 47th, under the firm name of Busch, Klein & Pither, on May 1. Their phones will be Atlantic 4606-07-08.

Elmer C. Krauter has moved from 6523 South Halsted, where he's been for eight years, to 6417 Halsted. His new phones are Wentworth 4120-21.

F. E. Lackowski & Co. announces that Joseph L. Drella, formerly with Mark Levy & Brother, is now in their sales division.

Edward Singer & Co. are moving from suite 1117 to larger quarters in suite 1911, Harris Trust building. Phones unchanged.

$300,000 Northwest Side Bank



Work is now under way on the $300,000 Kimball Trust and Savings bank building at the northwest corner of Central Park and Fullerton avenues, from plans by W. Gibbons Uffendell. Completion date is set for Nov. 1. It's to be of brick, with terra cotta trim. The bank will use the basement, main floor, and mezzanine. The second floor will be rented for offices. The above drawing was by Charles Morgan.

Subdivision News

Charles M. Nichols represented George F. Nixon in the sale of twenty acres in Niles Center at Main and Oakton, Schreiber & Eichelberg, to Anton Mystrom, for a reported $110,000.

Fred E. Downey, coal, will subdivide the twenty acres on Cornell, East End, Ridgeland and McFarland, between 97th place and a point 280 feet south of 88th, through the T. F. McFarland company.

AND NOW WE HAVE MR. STRAUS DON MR. BLUE'S MANTLE

S. W. Straus of S. W. Straus & Co. now dons the Mr. Lugubrious Blue mantle recently assumed by Mr. Moore of the American Bond and Mortgage. Like Mr. Moore, he maintains an attitude which, however much it may please the plasterer and landlord, certainly won't cause any tenant to give three hearty cheers.

For Mr. Straus can't see any lower rents in sight. Neither can he discern any lower costs on the building horizon. Of course, it should be kept in mind that mortgage bond houses are never wildly enthusiastic over the prospect of cheaper rentals.

"While general conditions in the building industry are well stabilized and the prospects are favorable for an active summer," said Mr. Straus, "I believe now is the time when all prospective building projects should be most carefully scrutinized."

Irwin Grossman was attorney. W. H. Coughenour was broker.

LINCOLN STREET FACTORY SOLD.

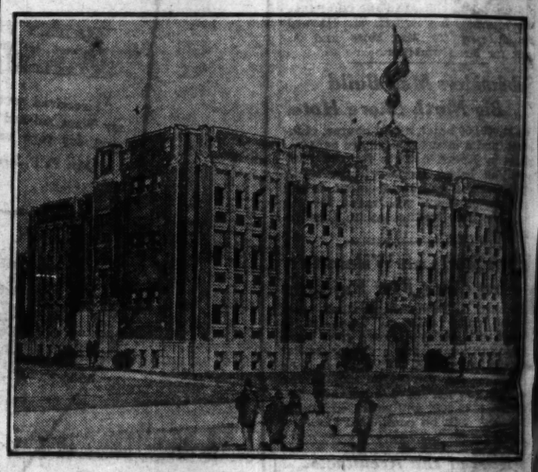
Plans of Alexander L. Levy and William J. Klein call for a 3,500 seat, one balcony theater. This is just north of Mr. Becklenberg's four story hotel, designed by W. Scott Armstrong, a picture of which was shown in this department last Sunday.

St. Cyril's High School



Ground has just been broken for the $650,000 St. Cyril's High school to be erected at 6410-22 Dante avenue by the Carmelite Fathers, who also conduct St. Cyril college, just opposite. Davis has designed a three story building to contain swimming pool, gymnasium, laboratories, lecture rooms, etc. Cremin & O'Connor have underwritten a $450,000 6 per cent bond issue on the school and college property opposite. The school will be ready for fall use.

The House of the Fearings by Dana Gatlin

Blue Ribbon Fiction

Two powerfully built men were locked in Herculean combat, while a girl furnished the only light—holding aloft an old fashioned oil lamp!

A Strange Tale of Fugitive Madness, a Man Who Was Afraid of Love, and a Girl

WHEN on that April night Mark Battle took a turn which led off the highway into an obscure road he didn't know that fate, pushing his hand on the steering wheel, was guiding him to a house of strange rumors, and to stranger inhabitants, whose future would be linked with his own. He followed the unfamiliar trail out of a spirit of sheer adventure. It was an adventuresome kind of night, tingly, wild with wind, but clear. A high moon shone like a disc of cold white metal, chill and aloof to the sportive clouds; the wind drove the clouds in scurrying panic, then rushed down to tilt, mischievously, with the twisting tops of trees.

Mark exulted in the tang of the night, in the feel of his car taking the jerks of the unknown road; now they were breasting a hill, they jolted over a fallen log, swept out into a bit of clearing—faced the open blast gloriously. Then a sense of caution returned to him; this was the devil's own road—but investigation disclosed there could be no turning—not now. And for a moment he stood in the little open space, pondering.

In the moonlight Mark Battle showed as a young man but gave the impression of looking older than he really was. He was slenderly built, lithe, and wiry. His features and expression were somewhat puzzling. His mouth was as sensitively cut as an artist's but was held tight, in a sort of quizzical gravity, as if from habit. His eyes were keen, but had a way of looking beyond what they sharply regarded; yet the eyes were quizzical, too—and cynical? He seemed to wear that quizzical, attentive non-attentive look like a pleasant mask.

Mark climbed back into the car; there was nothing to do but go ahead—God knew where. His spirit of adventure was slightly dashed. The moon leered down and the wind blustered overhead as the man and car plunged again into the shadows.

The road seemed more densely embowered than ever, and rougher and steeper—the devil's own hill, the devil's own road!

Then, so suddenly it startled him, he found himself clear of the woods—emerging all at once on to a small plateau where moonlight flooded a stretch of lawn, and lividly illumined a long, low, irregular house.

Marked halted his car, stared, and gave an involuntary indrawn whistle. The house, with its many even ranged and unlighted windows, stared back at him sullenly. A small portico framed an entrance door, half glass and lighted from within—but even that doorway and that glow held no invitation.

Something in the aspect of the house, in the atmosphere, caused Mark's senses to sharpen instinctively. He had heard imaginative folk claim that no place is its own—that every dwelling is intangibly haunted by what happens there and what has happened there in the past—and this isolated old homestead, though it sat here so silent, seemed to cry out with inaudible tumults; the darkened windows held invisible secrets, the trees seemed to whisper of vanished violence and passions and pain.

Yes, things went on here—or had gone on here.

Then Mark called himself a fool. He was a scientific man—a physician, a practitioner, much too practical to admit any power of personality in a mysterious old house.

But he stared inquisitively toward those lights that tendered no welcome—that door, and one adjacent window. The light seemed oddly to waver, to dance about—then he heard an ominous, heart stilling cry! For a second he stood at straining attention, automatically rooted by the viciousness of that snarling, animal-like sound.

Then he saw a blaze of light hurtle bodily across the illumined square of window, and a big, dark, indeterminate mass come plunging after.

The cry repeated.

Mark went forward on a run, ran up on the porch. And then, through the glass top of the door, he saw a sight so primitive and theatrical he must pinch himself to recall he was but a half hour's journey from a frequented motor highway, in a highly civilized section of modern America.

IN a vast, shadowy, and ancient looking room two powerfully built men were locked in a Herculean combat, while, darting warily from the path of the lurching bodies, a girl furnished the only light—holding aloft an old fashioned oil lamp!

The men were fighting desperately, vindictively. There were no blows—only the pull and crush of straining arms, the sudden shifting of body weight, the sinuous twisting and untwisting of legs. They reeled and spun like a huge convulsive top and went down; they staggered to their feet, still interlocked. Both were breathing in short, hard gasps—Mark could hear the breathing. Once one of them repeated the snarling, vicious cry Mark had heard from the yard. This man, though slightly smaller than his antagonist, seemed even more powerful; the other was huge—well over six feet, stockily built, and muscular as a bear; and he looked ferocious as a bear, his black hair matted, his eyes gleaming, his teeth bared and clenched. From one shoulder the sleeve of his shirt was torn clean off.

For a breathless moment Mark reacted to the sheer ferocity of the struggle—he felt the thrill which comes when one looks on savage powers unleashed.

Then a chair went over with a crash, the men reeled drunkenly; and as she slipped perilously out of their way Mark's attention was recalled to the girl with the lamp.

Her dress was vividly blue and her hair was in shining coils that glinted copper—she made a darting splash of color amazingly in accord with the flaming lamp she carried! But Mark caught his breath, appalled—was she oblivious that it was an engine of death she held?

He fumbled for the latch of the door, but was arrested by a sense of caution: a too sudden advent might precipitate a catastrophe. But as he stood hesitant, all of a sudden his problem was settled for him. The combatants, interlocked near the fireplace, went down together. There was a short oath, the sickening thud of flesh and bone against stone and iron. The bigger man was undermost—his head struck the iron fender, he lay crumpled and huddled.

The battle was over.

When Mark got into the room the man still lay there without motion; from his neck the blood was oozing. The girl was kneeling beside him; her lamp sat nearby on the floor. The other man subsided onto the chimney seat—he looked dazed, and was gasping and muttering.

"Perhaps I can do something," said Mark, trying to treat his entrance and the situation as something ordinary. I'm a doctor."

The girl looked up sharply, apprehensively.

"What are you doing here? What do you want?"

"I'm spending a few days' vacation down at the inn in the village. Your woods road lured me—but that part doesn't matter. He seems pretty badly hurt and I'm a doctor—may I help?"

The girl gazed at him questioningly. There was a quality in her looks, in her beauty, that made Mark stare. She was young—eighteen, perhaps; a face not quite so round as a child's nor so shaped as a woman's; burnished hair which had been wound round her head in a thick plait now loosened, and eyes that were brightly blue but slow and mesmeric under their long lashes—eyes such as draw things to them, but still innocent. She knelt there beside the lamp. The lampshine and her vivid blue frock made her so radiant and rich and vital that Mark, for all that he had lost his interest in women, was startled.

The girl was plainly anxious and frightened; she glanced toward the other man, but he still sat sprawled in his corner muttering.

Mark tried to be genially casual, reassuring.

"I'm a pretty good doctor—you can trust me. Or perhaps you prefer calling your local doctor—only I wouldn't waste time."

Then the girl cried: "O, no! Peter"—with a nod toward the unconscious man—"wouldn't want Dr. Jones—don't call him."

Even with this Peter lying helpless, Mark saw the thought of displeasing him brought her a certain panic.

THE man on the chimney seat caught the phrase. "Dr. Jones," he repeated, his words for the first time intelligible, "like to see him get into Peter Fearing's house!" He gave a short, abrupt laugh. "Peter'd crack a bone for him—same as the last time they met!"

"Be still, Sammy!" commanded the girl. Then she turned to the visitor and explained with a swift semblance of composure, in a self-possessed young voice: "My brother's had a quarrel with the local practitioner—you'd best take care of him, doctor."

What a little woman of the world—but what a child, too! Then Mark knelt and ran a practiced hand over the inert man. The girl watched anxiously, yet maintaining that quaint air of composure.

The other man—Sammy—resumed talking:

"But there are some folks he'd let in the house—he'd let Lombard in! Peter's worse than Lombard—he's a skunk! And you'd stand for it, Cecie—you'd——"

"Will you be still, Sammy?" she beseeched. "Don't you see—maybe you've killed Peter?"

The doctor said: "He'll come out all right. Nasty knock, but he's only stunned." He gently unclasped her fingers and rose and drew her up to her feet. "Now," he went on practically, "the first thing's to get him into bed. But he's a heavy man."

"There's a bedroom downstairs."

"Good," the doctor nodded. Then he faced the man in the corner. "See here, I can't manage this job alone—will you give me a hand?"

Sammy had ceased muttering and was sitting with his elbows propped on his knees and his head resting on his palms.

"No, I won't," he said sullenly. "Peter Fearing's my brother, but he's a skunk. I've stood for a lot. But when he starts trading off his sister—my sister——"

The girl ran forward and intervened between the two men; and again she showed that quaint aplomb as she vouchsafed explanation.

"Don't pay any attention to him, doctor," she said. "Sammy's funny at times. I don't mean funny—but he had shellshock in the war, and sometimes, when he gets excited——"

The doctor nodded comprehendingly; he did comprehend, partly. He darted a quick, interested glance at Sammy. Despite his earlier ferocity and his apathetic relapse, there was intelligence in the slope of his forehead and the bulges over the brows. He was roughly, indifferently dressed, but his enunciation was that of an educated man. The girl called Cecie, too, seemed cultivated in her speech. There were books, many books and periodicals, littered about the huge, shadowy room—many evidences of culture, of traditions of culture.

Mark's impressions and speculations were working more quickly than it takes to record them: these people were evidently brothers and sister—brother had been fighting brother, the sister matter of factly furnishing them light! A queer and mysterious outfit, stowed away in this lonely, outlandish retreat!

The girl, Cecie, had advanced upon Sammy and, grasping him by the shoulders, was shaking him angrily.

"If Peter doesn't get well it means you've killed him—don't you understand that?"

"All right," said Sammy.

She shook him more violently. Just then she looked a little termagant, her eyes flashing, her upper lip shortened and her white teeth set fast on her lower lip—a glimpse of a hot, willful spirit.

Then she changed her tactics. She leaned down to him and clasped her arms round his neck, pressed her face against his shoulder.

"Come and help the doctor, dear," she pleaded. "Please, dear—because I want you to." She reached for his hand and started to draw him to his feet. And Sammy's obstinacy seemed to melt.

"O, all right then," he said, and rose.

Even the doctor was amazed—this girl of the woods certainly had power of a kind!

Then she turned to him, the stranger, with her swift reassumption of manners.

"Sammy will help you, doctor," she said after the fashion of a courteous hostess; "the bedroom's this way," and she picked the lamp from the floor to guide and light the way.

It was a busy night up there in the house on the hill in the woods. A strange night—but the strangest thing of all, as the minutes merged into hours, was that the sense of strangeness passed. The big, shadowy rooms lost their disturbing influence; the girl Cecie had lighted candles in some old silver candlesticks, tarnished—the wavering points of flame irradiated the gloom, soft and live and unhostile. And the girl herself seemed soft and bright in her bright beauty—and human.

She was a deft and willing helper. She brought the cold water the doctor asked for, and helped apply it to the patient, to his wrists and back of the neck and forehead.

Mark couldn't help commenting on the beauty of the ancient silver dish holding the water.

"Peter likes these old things we have," she explained naively, in her self-possessed young voice; "maybe it will do him more good, out of this dish."

"Have you much old silver?" Mark questioned.

"O, yes—we've lived in this house nearly two hundred years, you see."

Mark noted the "we"—and nearly two hundred years!

The brother, Sam, came in once or twice. He seemed to have recovered himself—a quiet gentle normalcy, and intelligence; he didn't talk much and proffered no explanation, but spoke of incidental topics in that clear, mellow, and cultivated voice. The girl Cecie stayed at the doctor's elbow, helping. Once she brought a crucifix from somewhere and hung it at the head of the bed.

Perhaps she caught something a bit satirical in his eyes, for she said: "I feel it may help—do you think it's foolish?"

If Mark had thought the act even more foolish than he did, he could only have answered: "No, not if you feel it helps."

"I'm awfully glad! It does help." Those blue, mesmeric eyes looked at him warmly. And by the time the patient was sleeping easily and could be safely left in Cecie's hands, Mark felt like old acquaintances with her. He forgot how little he knew of her, how much of this night's drama remained fantastic and unexplained. She was just a girl with tired but vivid eyes; and if those eyes kept following him about they did so frankly, unconscious of their own magnetism.

When he started to leave, she caught at his sleeve and murmured: "I don't want you to go!"

But as soon as he had smiled, indulgent as at a child, and said: "But I must—he'll be all right in your hands now, you see," she at once regained her manners and answered: "Of course." Then: "Will you call again tomorrow?"

"If you want me to."

"I do want you to. I'm awfully glad it's you who's taking care of Peter."

What an unspoken young creature she was! The girl's frank overtures in a way disconcerted Mark, the misogynist, yet left him feeling queerly tender and warm. And that warm, rather bewildered feeling lasted him throughout his drive home.

But next morning, in the sunlight, the whole episode seemed like something he had dreamed. And after breakfast he made an opportunity to sound the landlord of the inn where he was stopping.

"Uncle Jim," the landlord, always loved to talk, and had already entertained his guest with many local traditions. Traditions seemed to flourish along with fruit trees in this old south Jersey district. But Uncle Jim hadn't chanced to mention the house on the hill in the woods; and when his guest made a casual inquiry about the place the landlord peered at him inquisitively.

"That's the old Fearing homestead—you met up with any of the Fearings?"

"I took the woods road on a ride, and lost my way, and stopped at their house," Mark explained.

"Well, better not have too much truck with 'em—they're not for strangers to deal with, Peter especially."

"What's the matter with them?" asked Mark. "They're certainly well rooted—that old house of theirs; and they struck me as being unusually educated."

"O, yes—the boys both went to college, and I guess they're kind of bookworms; and Cecilia went to a convent—she's real religious, I guess. But they're queer just the same—there's something queer and outlandish in the Fearing blood—always was and always will be!"

"What is it that's queer?" Mark pursued.

Uncle Jim shook his head. "I don't know." Then he said: "Well, you see, it's this way——"

And then he was off. He expounded his tale with a peculiar admixture of apology and pride—though the community might be somewhat ashamed of the Fearings, their oddity made them a local asset of sorts.

"You see, it's this way," narrated Uncle Jim. "It's something in their blood. The first Peter Fearing was a Tory—they say he housed Tory refugees during the revolution. That old house still has its secret hiding places, they say. The first Peter started that business of being off-side, and in all the time since the Fearings've always been sort of shady. Not that they haven't had plenty—trust a Fearing to find money—and held their heads up, too; but whenever there's been any shady transactions in these parts, it seems there's always been a Fearing to sit front in the game."

"I see," said Mark. "The family has inherited a sort of sinister brand—they're accepted, but not socially, is that it?"

UNCLE JIM weighed this, and then affirmed: "Yes, I guess you've about hit the nail on the head, doctor. Everybody—the first families, too—calls 'em by their first names, but they don't invite 'em to their parties. And the Fearings don't expect to go to the parties. Not that they ain't proud at that—prouder'n Lucifer.

"Now, take Peter," he proceeded, "you wouldn't think it, maybe, but Peter's as proud of the Fearings, and that old place up there, as if they and it was top respectable. Prouder 'n lots as is top respectable. Blamed if I don't believe he fancies being half outlawlike!"

"What's he done to be an outlaw? What are some of the things the Fearings have done?"

Uncle Jim shrugged expressively. "There are tales—plenty of 'em."

"Well, what has this present generation done?" Mark persisted.

"We-ell—I guess they're not so downright bad," Uncle Jim had to concede. "Sam and Cecie, leastways—they're only half-kin to Peter, anyhow; they had a different mother, a sort of wild, untamed, sweet faced Irish lass who broke her heart and died. But Peter's a bad egg."

Mark still persisted for details. "How is he a bad egg?"

"We-ell, I don't know as anybody's ever got any goods on him. But he's a surly brute; for all he can be smooth as glass when he wants. And he takes up with people in queer ways—the Fearings 've always made queer friends in queer ways—that's how the money comes! And they say Peter's been having some truck with Lombard lately—you can bet it's something off-side!"

"I see," said Mark, though he didn't as yet see particularly.

The name of Lombard was familiar to him. C. T. Lombard was a nationally known millionaire, a horse fancier who maintained his stock stables in this neighborhood. Mark wasn't perhaps shocked up to Uncle Jim's expectations on hearing that Peter Fearing "had truck with" the rich horseman, but the old man's next remark brought him to quick attention.

"And they say," Uncle Jim continued, "that Lombard's sort of sweet on Cecie—no good from that!"

And Mark heard himself ejaculating: "What—that child? Impossible!" But he remembered how Sam Fearing, in his excitement, had used Lombard's name—he felt an odd vague sense of distaste.

Uncle Jim was answering: "Why impossible? She's a girl men like to look at. And rides like a streak. Peter 'd have trouble with that girl, maybe, if he didn't have such an iron hand on her—he's brought her up to take his word as gospel law."

But at this juncture a third voice interrupted:

"Who are you gossiping about now, James?" and Uncle Jim's sister and housekeeper, who was Aunt Chattie to the neighborhood, entered.

"O, I was just telling about the Fearings and Cecie—the doctor here's run into the old homestead up there."

"O—Cecie Fearing," said Aunt Chattie, who was a pleasant faced, motherly creature. "I like Cecie. She's so pretty, and so much sweeter even than she's pretty—she's just like a wild bird."

Mark for some reason felt a surge of warm gratitude toward Aunt Chattie; he smiled at her as, having fulfilled his errand, he left the office.

HE got his car and started out for the house on the hill in the woods. The road seemed nearly as wild by day as by night, despite the sun somewhere overhead and the bright tender green of new leafage. And, more than ever, as he climbed the bosky hills and penetrated the wooded fastness, last night's business took on the qualities of something dreamed rather than experienced.

But there stood the old house—with its singular and sinister air of a history.

The girl Cecie, who came to the door, brought the sheen and color of pulsing life; she didn't look at all tired, she wore the same vivid blue dress, and her eyes were wells of shimmering blue fire. She gave him her hand with intense composure.

"Peter's a lot better this morning—quite right in his head and remembers everything, but a little difficult to manage."

The patient in truth looked difficult as he lay in bed, with his unshaven face and glittering impatient eyes.

"Who gave you leave to come here?" he flung out at Mark. "Who are you, anyway?"

The girl Cecie put in: "I've told you all that, Peter; Doctor Battle's been kind, and probably saved your life—I asked him to call again."

Mark said: "I can give credentials, if you like, Mr. Fearing. I'm competent; but if you prefer I can turn the case over to the local doctor."

The patient's aggressiveness seemed to lessen; he shrugged his thick shoulders. "O, all right—I suppose you'd better go ahead since you've started," he said tolerantly. His voice, though not as mellow as his brother Sam's, was clear and concise. Then, with a suavity that came surprisingly out of that unkempt looking hulk, he continued: "What's your dope on this, doctor—when do I get up? Cecie here has kept me bundled in bed all morning like an old woman!"

"Try sitting up," said the doctor, smiling. The patient gave a heave and then a groan, while Cecie sprang to help him. "No," commanded the doctor, "let him lift himself alone."

The patient sank back, gasping. "What's the meaning of all this?" he demanded, scowling.

"It means," said the doctor, "that you've got to stay quietly in bed for four or five days at least."

"Four or five days, bah! I won't do anything of the kind!" He scowled blackly: "Who are you, anyway, to give me orders?"

Mark answered evenly: "Well, I'm a competent doctor, and you yourself have put your case in my hands. You've suffered a concussion, a pretty serious one—you're in luck to be alive. And I order complete quiet and relaxation—that's my chief prescription. Of course, you can take it or leave it."

For a long minute the two men eyed each other, while the girl held her breath. Then the sick man relapsed on his pillow, and spoke in that astonishing smooth tone: "All right, doctor—you have the drop on me. What you say goes."

After the visit was over and after he had given Cecie her directions as nurse, she followed the doctor out to the porch.

"It was nice of you to come—I was afraid maybe you mightn't."

"Why so? It was my professional duty to come."

Then suddenly he felt a little ridiculous, dragging in that last and so austerely.

The girl said quickly: "O, please don't look like that!"

"Like what?" he countered. Was she a minx after all?

But her look was merely puzzled, uncertain—like a child asking for something which had been unexpectedly denied. "O, I don't know," she said. Then she glanced at the sunlit sky; and stretched out a hand, closing the fingers, as if catching the feel of the spring freighted air.

"Today's so heavenly," she murmured. "Driving down through the woods—through the spring—I wish I were going, too!" And she gave a little sigh.

There leaped in Mark an unreasoning flame of pity; he said to himself, "She's lonely, poor child—that's what's the matter with her." And, aloud, he heard himself saying: "Why don't you drive down with me—a little distance?"

She went suddenly so red as to startle him.

"I oughtn't to have said that—I wasn't hinting! Of course, I'd like to awfully—only I know you're just being polite."

"Not at all," he assured.

She looked up at that. "Shall I really come?"

"Please do," he smiled.

IN the car with him, moved by whatever sense of companionship, she answered his questions freely enough. She told him of her life at the convent, only a year finished; and of riding and motoring—she seemed to love going fast. Riding and driving seemed her chief pastimes in this secluded spot which was her home; she made no mention of girl chums or beaux, or of parties and the diverting frolics of the young. And Mark, remembering the Fearings' social status in the community, got an acute impression of the loneliness of this vivid young creature in her incongruous abode.

He asked what she did in the evenings.

"Sometimes I go down to the movies with Sammy—mostly I stay at home."

"And then?"

"O, I just sew or read or talk French."

"What—to yourself?"

"Yes. Or to Sammy—or to Mr. Lombard sometimes, when he comes in."

So Mr. Lombard came in!

He said casually: "Lombard, he's the owner of the racing stables, isn't he?—is he a friend of yours?"

"He's a great friend of Peter's." But as she answered she looked away and he thought he detected a flush on her cheek.

All he said was, after a slight pause: "It doesn't sound an exciting life—don't you ever get lonely?"

"O, yes," she answered. "I'm not fond of the homestead in the way Peter is—but I don't expect to stay here always."

At that he glanced at her quizzically. "When do you expect to leave?"

"O, I don't know"—she hesitated and flushed—"but every girl dreams of a fairy prince, I guess."

Then she flashed him a look, bright and timorous.

"That's not wrong or silly, is it?" she asked. "It means a lot to girls, you know."

The man felt a curious jumble of emotions; for a considerable period, now, he had been telling himself he was disillusioned about women, and their ways; but something about the naivete and the pathos of those words—"every girl dreams of a fairy prince, I guess"—evoked a rush of warmth, of compassion. The feeling made him ashamed that, watching her, he was so conscious of those eyes and lips and hair—made him say, without smile or irony:

"I hope you may find him—the prince of your dreams."

The girl shot him a grateful little smile; then, as if encouraged by his sympathy, she spoke softly, reminiscently:

"Once, at the convent, Sister Mary Angelica was advising with me about my future. She knew my mother was dead and that my home life was—a little out of the ordinary. And she asked me if I shouldn't like to take the perpetual vows, to be 'the bride of God.' But I told her no—that I wanted to be the bride of a man."

Even Mark gasped a little at that candor—he could imagine how the good sister must have been nonplussed!

The girl was proceeding, in her dreamy but throbbing young voice: "I want to love a man who is good and fearless and strong—a man I can love hard, and who loves me hard. I think that's about the most important thing in the world—love. And I think that's the way love must be—hard! Hard and soft at the same time—I can feel it here," and she pressed her hand to her heart.

For a minute Mark didn't speak; then: "Did you tell that to the sister?"

Cecie nodded. "Yes, I told her. Why, yes—it's the way I feel."

AND again Mark imagined how the good sister must have felt! But felt himself thrilling, despite himself, to this girl's ruthless honesty—and to something in her so sweet! All the sweeter, perhaps, for the ardent faults of her nature. What would life bring her, this motherless outshoot of the Fearings?

Then, reassuming her little air of worldly poise, she asked him to stop the car and let her out.

"I'm afraid I've come too far—but it's been lovely, the ride. And so nice talking to you—only I'm afraid I've talked too much," and a hint of sudden doubt, of question, shadowed those blue eyes.

And he felt he must assure her: "No, you haven't talked too much at all, Miss Cecie."

She smiled her pleasure at his use of her name. She said:

"That's my nickname. It's really Cecilia, of course. I was named for a saint."

"Well, I guess I was, too," he said, smiling back; "my Christian name is Mark."

"Mark—Mark Battle. Yes—I like your name. It suits—I like you to have it—it's awfully nice!"

What was there in a name that she should like him to have it? A quaint, outspoken child! But, then, names meant and connoted a lot—to children. Suddenly she stepped up close to the running board by which she was standing and held out her hand.

"I like you—let's be friends," she said. "Real friends, I mean."

And he had the odd sense of having had his heart, instead of his hand, touched by her seeking hand.

Several times that day Mark caught himself up in his thoughts and told himself he was a fool; his thoughts were too occupied with those people up in that old house—with the girl particularly. Difficult to name his reaction toward her; a little flattered, considerably warmed—yet irritated as always when he met a member of that guileful sex who stirred him out of his cooler judgment.

That evening, at the sun setting hour, he drove again toward the old house on the hill; and, just as he emerged from the woods out on to the plateau on which Fearing homestead stood, he came suddenly on a picture which was surely worth his coming to see!

Above, in that opening of sky which now seemed specially prepared for its respendent descent, the sun was sinking toward the west, a full blown flower. And below, a moving gleam of color against a background of wooded gloom, Cecilia, in her blue dress, on horseback, came galloping toward him. She made a path of light—right out of that burning upper sky! The light seemed to pour on her especially, seemed to move with her as moves a spotlight—even from a distance could be seen the sheen of her uncovered hair.

Mark stopped his car and watched her approach.

She said as she drew rein:

"I was just riding down to meet you—to see if you were coming!"

And once again, half against his will, Mark felt that absurd warm tingling inside him.

And for the second time that day he must reply: "I said I'd come, didn't I?"

"Yes, but I hoped you'd be coming soon—now. You see—" and she hesitated for the fraction of a second, her eyes wavering slightly and a little flush rising in her cheek—"a visitor has called on Peter and wants to see him—Mr. Lombard."

Mark felt the warmth within him suddenly chilled a trifle. "I doubt whether your brother should see visitors today," he said.

He spoke with unreasoning curtness; the girl must have caught it, for she said quickly: "O, I told Mr. Lombard he must wait till you came—though he's a special friend."

They found Lombard sitting in the big living hall. His looks befitted his position and reputation; he was a man nearing middle age, a stocky, red faced man, with daring but rather good humored eyes. He was good looking enough, not at all of any melodramatic villain type; obviously of the world, amiable, and entirely at ease.

"Cecilia tells me you've been taking care of Peter," he said upon introduction. "It's good of you."

"Thanks," said Mark dryly.

"Well, make a good job of it, and you'll not find it a bad bit of business. These people are good friends of mine." His bold and good humored glance, traveling to Cecilia, seemed openly possessive.

"I generally try to do a good job," replied Mark, moving toward the sickroom.

Ridiculous, his wave of irritation and that sudden, instinctive

THE HOUSE OF THE FEARINGS - - - - - By Dana Gatlin

antipathy to this suave, rich worldling—he knew nothing definite against Lombard and, anyway, it wasn't his business to look out for the Fearing girl! But when she made as if to accompany him, rather curtly he disclaimed need of her services; she shot him a questioning, half troubled look, but turned mutely back.

The doctor found his patient in a peevish mood, had a bad quarter of an hour, and, when he returned to the living hall and found it empty he let himself become further annoyed—a fine nurse she was!

But he wanted to leave some instructions, felt constrained to call her. Then Sam Fearing appeared through a door at the rear.

"Cecie's not here—she went out somewhere with Lombard."

"Would you mind calling her? I ought to see her before I go."

Sam shook his head, with a sullen look. "No—I'm busy. But I guess she's not gone far—she went toward the woods, that trail yonder."

Mark started off reluctantly. The moon was rising now—a dim, elusive twilight—and he was picking his way over the uneven ground at the fringe of the woods when suddenly he heard voices just ahead—Lombard's pitched low and soft but insistent; and then Cecilia's answering voice, loud and imperious:

"I won't—I won't!"

MARK started to retreat, halted, and then, as he stood uncertain, he saw her emerge from the trees, running—her eyes showed ominously bright in the moonlight, her lips were parted, she was breathing hard.

And before he quite realized what he was saying he said:

"What is it, Cecie—what's the matter?"

She ran up to him and caught his hand; her touch was fiery hot.

"He kissed me! I don't want him to kiss me. I won't kiss him!"

And then all of a sudden she leaned down and fleetingly touched her hot cheek to his hand!

Mark was confounded, not only by her outburst—that amazing demonstration—and by the dilemma of the other man lurking there in the woods, but by his own swift agitation as well. The last point he tried to settle first; he repeated to himself she was a veritable child—that hot, kissed cheek against his hand!—it was as if she were seeking to make her hurt well.

But what was he going to say to Lombard? Or to Cecie, after such an intimate confidence?

Then almost at once she solved the latter difficulty by speaking herself; she swiftly regained her composure in her amazing way and spoke in her calm young voice: "I shouldn't have come bursting out on you like that, but I was upset." Then: "Peter wants me to marry Mr. Lombard, and I've been thinking maybe I would—he promised to take me to Europe, and a lot of things. But I won't now, of course."

Mark hardly dared utter his "Why not?" He hardly dared say anything; it seemed suddenly too dangerous. But the girl answered with her terribly simplicity:

"Why, because I don't love him. As soon as he kissed me—touched me—I knew I didn't love him. And to marry without love—that's a frightful sin, isn't it? Peter simply mustn't ask it of me."

Mark felt her look up at him with a bright and fluttering glance, then look away. And he stood, staring out at the moonlight, with the queerest jumble of emotions—consternation, and abashment, and a helplessness with words, and a sort of mad exultant thrill, all mixing together.

But all he said was: "You're excited now, my child—perhaps you'd rather not discuss this matter; come, hadn't we better go back to the porch? I want to give you some instructions about your brother."

He fancied his words chilled her a trifle—well, better so. They turned toward the house. Making himself hold his eyes from her, he began matter of factly giving her her nursing instructions.

And, next day when he called, he kept up his matter of fact attitude, and kept it up through the succeeding days. And the girl made her reports day by day, and faithfully carried out his directions. Sometimes—more and more rarely—she would look at him in a puzzled, troubled way, and sometimes she would seem trying to regain that first footing—little spasmodic and diffident overtures. But other times she would be remote and stiff, and with little hints of impatience—anger sparks promising an easy flareup of temper.

It angered Mark that he, too, felt a sense of strain. Once he accidentally touched her hand, and felt the electric contact in his other hand! He could feel her enter the room!

He was disgusted with himself; disgusted with Lombard, with Peter Fearing—with everybody and everything.

For nearly a week things went on thus, no event outwardly untoward. Peter convalesced gradually, but his temper, never sweet, went sourer under his enforced restraint. Lombard didn't show up again for nearly a week, then one evening the racing man came riding up as the doctor drove out of the yard. He made a picture of sleek complacency on his superb animal—Mark found it an effort to greet him civilly. And he told himself he was absurd: Lombard—or Cecilia Fearing, either—touched him in no way that was vital.

And then, suddenly, events began happening that were swift and beyond foresight or calculation.

She ran up to him and caught his hand; her touch was fiery hot. "He kissed me! I don't want him to kiss me. I won't kiss him!"

They began when Cecilia, who was standing in the portico, all of a sudden ran out, ignoring Lombard's presence, and called to Mark.

"It's such a pretty evening——" she began when she reached the car; "I wonder—maybe you'd let me ride with you a little way."

She spoke breathlessly but her eyes were timid—as if she feared a rebuff. And Mark, oddly, almost wanted to rebuff her; he was resentful of her timidity and her temerity at once, resentful of the other man watching back there from a distance, resentful of his own disturbed and conflicting feelings.

He bade her climb in, but rather brusquely; and his manner, in the car, didn't encourage easy conversation. He concentrated on driving. She sat still, not saying much—what an extraordinary power in her stillness! Did she suspect that he felt that power?

Instinctively he moved away from her a little; and though they had gone but a short distance, he said: "Whenever you want to get out, please tell me."

HE felt her look up at him quickly and then look quickly away. They had come to a place where a rift disclosed the sun sinking amidst crimson pools in the west.

"I—I guess I'll get out here," she said.

He slowed to a halt. She made a move, then relapsed dubiously in her seat again. Mark glanced at her—the red sun stained her cheek and throat, struck fiery glints from her hair. He looked away.

"As you wish," he replied; then waited, rather grimly.

Then she said, faltering a little: "There's something—I didn't just want to get some air. I've been wondering—things were so different, somehow, at first. That first night you came—and then all of a sudden—O, I don't know."

She broke off, sent him a fleeting, beseeching glance.

But all he said was: "I'm sorry if I've been a disappointment. I've tried to do my best with your brother."

She cried quickly: "O, it isn't that!" Then: "It's—I guess I was hoping we'd be better friends."

At that a confused medley of sayings ran through Mark's brain, things he might—or should—say. He should tell her she was acting in a foolish way, making these repeated advances to a stranger; he should be frank, even brutal; he mustn't tell her how his heart was thumping, how he was afraid to trust himself near her—that he was at his wit's end!

But before he said anything her voice, a little piteous, went on: "Don't you want to be friends? Didn't you want me to ride down with you—are you sorry I'm here?"

And she put out her hand, and laid it on his own.

This, surely! was the moment to have said those wise things he had been purposing to say. But instead he jumped, and said sharply: "See here!—what are you up to?"

"Up to?" she repeated. She withdrew her hand; her eyes had gone dazed, shamed, frightened. Then in that odd way of hers she swiftly put on her grownup formality, amounting now to stiffness; and in her calm young voice said, ever so distinctly: "I'll go home now. Good night"; and climbed out of the car.

And from all his thoughts the only words he could muster were: "Yes—good night."

He drove on, scarcely noting the treacherous roadbed. By just half closing his eyes he could see her sitting there beside him, could feel again that hot stinging thrill when her hand touched his hand, could see her eyes—could feel them drawing him, drawing him!

She was an enchantress, she had a witch's power of kindling fever in a man! And he wondered at himself that he had not, when she leaned close and touched him, simply put his arms around her—pressed his face against her hair—his lips against those lips.

And he kept recalling that hurt, chilled look in her eyes, and then the sudden hiding of all wistfulness and warmth under that absurd veneer of formality.

He found himself studying the road more carefully—looking for a place he might turn around. But he didn't pass her on the road, and Fearing homestead showed itself dark when he came up to the house; only one light glimmered across the yard from a side window.

Mark knocked at the door, and knocked again more loudly, but no one responded.

There was a sound of voices back in the house, and then he heard Cecilia's voice cry out: "No, I won't—I tell you I won't!"

Mark tried the screen door, but it was latched inside. He knocked again, vainly, and then, too keyed up to consider his act, ran round to the side of the house and peered in that lighted window.

IT was Peter's room. The window was open, and through the screen he could see the convalescent propped up in bed, his face showing surly in the glow of an oil lamp placed near the bed. Lombard sat in a chair near by; he looked red and angry. Cecilia stood in the center of the room—she was flushed and defiant. Even Sam was present, standing close behind his sister, his body shifting uneasily, and his features working.

Lombard was speaking, his urbanity lost, addressing Peter.

"You hear her!—I'm getting no further—and you've promised me!"

"He can't promise you—I'm the only one who can promise," the girl cried, but the man in bed said sternly, "Be silent!"

Lombard went on, angrily accusing: "It's that damned doctor! And you stand for it—I'm beginning to think you're trying to throw me!"

Peter said, adopting a conciliatory tone, "You know better than that, C. T."

"I don't know better. This time you've got to prove you're straight—I'm waiting for the proof. Better not try any double-crossing me again!"

Peter said quickly, warningly, but still placating: "Stow it, C. T.—please choose your words more carefully."

Then Sam moved forward and put in: "O, you can talk before me. I know what you two've been up to. I know you've been carrying tips to Lombard from the Reading stables—that Lombard's turned a pretty penny through you, and has paid you a pretty penny in return."

Peter said violently: "Shut up, you fool!" But Sam advanced another step and said:

"I don't have to shut up—I know too much. I know what Lombard suspects: that you've been playing both ends from the middle, that you've been carrying tips from his stable back to Reading—that he's got the whip hand over you!"

Peter spat out ferociously: "Shut your damn mouth!" He jerked upright in bed, flung aside the sheet. "D'you want me to get out of here and——"

Then Cecilia ran forward. "Lie down again, Peter! You mustn't get out of bed—lie down!"

Peter took no notice of her.

But then Lombard, too, interposed; he came and pushed Peter back against the pillows, and said, not unfriendly: "That's all right, Peter. Sam may have got hold of the dope, but you know he'll keep his mouth shut—outside the family; we'll just keep this a family matter," meaningly.

Sam put in again: "You've got the one thing you can buy Lombard off with—he thinks your sister is for sale!"

"Stow it, I tell you," Peter snarled, but Sam continued: "He doesn't even want to marry her—isn't that kind. Marriage isn't his game."

"He'll marry her all right."

And, saying that, there was something more sober in Peter's tone, an ominous ring; and Lombard said quickly: "Of course, I'm going to marry her. I'll admit I never thought myself a marrying man, but this girl—she's gone to my head! I want to marry her—got to marry her."

"O, stop talking about me as if I wasn't here!" cried the girl.

Sam spoke again, eyeing first the suitor and then his brother, fixedly: "And you'd help put this marriage through? Give your sister to a man who's notorious for having women all over the country—he has two or three right down in the village!"

"Are you going to shut your mouth," Peter shouted, "or will I have to shut it for you?"

"I will not—and I don't think you'll shut it for me." Sam's voice was still quiet, unnaturally repressed, but his features were twitching.

Then he turned his eyes to the other man, the rich suitor. "If she loved you I'd say nothing—try to say nothing. And if you really loved her, in the way a decent man loves a woman he wants to make his wife. But you covet her—this innocent young girl who doesn't love you——"

Then Lombard, as if stung, and driven by jealousy, cut in: "'Innocent young girl'—I wonder! I saw her driving off into the woods with that doctor tonight! She's been running after him all this week, making up to him—a stranger, a New York fellow!" And he laughed an unpleasant laugh.

Sam advanced threateningly. But the jealous man, that complacent urbanity of his entirely lost, muttered with a sort of muffled violence: "She's in love with the fellow—let us hear her deny it!"

And then the girl Cecilia, who had been standing with her hands pressed tightly together, stepped suddenly forward. She flung her head back; and she spoke out in her clear young voice, ringing and distinct for all its note of tremulousness. "I don't deny it. I

CLEVER little people, these Russians! Last year when old Ferd Ossendowski's "Beasts, Men and Gods" appeared, excitement ran high about the public libraries, and ten thousand booksellers, overworked from selling the book, were awarded vacations at full pay by generous employers. As it happened, however, Dr. Ossendowski was not the sole author of that best seller: there was a collaborator, Lewis Stanton Palen, and he has discovered a new bolshevik battler, a mysterious Russian aristocrat, whose name may not yet be divulged, but who is known by a gentle sobriquet, the "White Devil of the Black Sea."

The White Devil.

That is the title of the book Mr. Palen has written about the White Devil's experiences, told in the first person; and it is so thrilling that it makes Doc Ossendowski's adventures sound as peaceful as the minutes of a Midland Authors' meeting. A swashbuckling narrative of harrowing encounters and escapes during the awful days from 1917 to 1919 in Russia, it rattles along at a breathless speed that leaves the reader popeyed. And the worst of it is, it's all true. For undaunted courage the White Devil shames all the heroes of Dumas, Sabatini, and Harold McGrath into Rollo Book characters. So few books proclaimed as thrillers actually thrill; but here is one guaranteed to raise any toupe.

The new publishing firm of Minton, Balch & Company has brought out "The White Devil of the Black Sea," and a capital piece of work it is.

That flamboyant French writer, Pierre Loti, led a brightly colored life at least in his younger days, and his "Notes on My Youth" (Doubleday-Page) are well worth reading. From the time of his apprenticeship at the naval school in Brittany, Loti wrote remarkable letters of what he saw and of what went on around him, and these letters and fragments of journals contain sharp, memorable pictures. In those early years as a midshipman and as a young officer, cruising with the French navy, he saw much of the world, in the Mediterranean, along the coasts of Africa, and the South Seas, and his impressions are set forth with some superb writing. There are adventures, too, among these "Notes," and Loti, who at least in his youth must have been a sad sentimentalist, has much to say of the ladies he knew: there were dozens of them. Oddly enough, for a sailor, he seemed to have them in every port. And the French navy, as everybody knows, is in port most of the time.

This week we have been lunching at every possible opportunity with that eminent Johnsonian, A. Edward Newton of Philadelphia, London, and other points. Mr. Newton, you remember, wrote the charming "Amenities of Book Collecting," "The Magnificent Farce," a play; "Dr. Johnson," and dozens of capital essays in "The Atlantic Monthly": also, he possesses one of the choicest libraries of first editions in America. A round, rosy, and rich little man, well tailored, and with a taste for fine cigars, Mr. Newton appears to enjoy life enormously. Most of his talk, which is cozy and comfortable, revolves about rare books and rarer anecdotes, and we have never enjoyed listening more than when listening to him at Walter Hill's book shop and at Mr. Rosenthal's luncheon at the Union League club and at Karl Harriman's luncheon at the Cliff Dwellers. Being ourself mildly touched with a gentle Johnson mania, we were naturally eager to hear all that Mr. Newton, who is something of a personage in the Johnson club of London, had to relate; nor were we surprised to hear him say that he believed Boswell to be the greater genius, though lacking, of course, Dr. Johnson's strength of character.

A. Edward Newton.

He mentioned another item of interest to bookmen: Chauncey Brewster, author of that splendid "Young Boswell," has long been at work on Boswell's letters, and the Oxford University Press will soon bring out the first complete, unexpurgated edition of them. But the most pleasant news Mr. Newton had for us was that he has just come from a visit with Max Beerbohm at Rapallo; and Max being our most precious enthusiasm in the realm of books, we plied the eminent Johnsonian with questions.

It seems that twenty-five years ago when Max was in this country with his brother, Beerbohm-Tree, he and A. Edward became friends, then were separated, each traveling his separate road to fame, nor met again until this spring in Italy. Mr. and Mrs. Newton breakfasted, lunched, and dined for several days at Max's villa at Rapallo, and at length the American book collector complimented Max upon the excellence of his cuisine.

"What an artist your chef is!" he exclaimed.

For here was the hand work of no mere cook, but a chef.

"He hasn't a chef," spoke up the wife of Max, "he has a slave!"

And thus it was divulged that Mrs. Beerbohm herself does all the cooking at the villa. A pretty story for the wives of some of our literary men, who are exhausted if asked to fill a fountain pen.

Modern Arabian Nights
by Rosita Forbes
4—A Night With the Invisible Prophet

THE earth looked as if it had been a battle ground of the ancient gods. It was full of great pits and strewn with boulders which must surely have been the weapons of a primeval struggle. The cliff dropped a sheer thousand feet to a plain sprinkled with lilies and desert broom, but up here on the edge of the world, where the desolation was lit by a stormy sunset, it was bleak and so cold that I shivered under my sheepskin coat.

"Where is the village?" I asked Abdullah, the tall tribesman who rode with me, and I strained my eyes across the waste in front of me.

"It is under your feet, lady!" he replied, dismounting and looping the tasseled reins over his arm.

I stared more closely at the heaped sand beside pits, which might have been the hundred shafts of a once busy colliery. There was no one in sight, yet all around us there was movement and sound. My horse muzzled the ground and snorted. At the same moment a boy appeared beside us, as if he had risen out of the earth.

"Every one of those pits is the courtyard of a house," explained Abdullah, "and below you 10,000 people are living their lives in darkness." A faint savory smell drifted past our nostrils. "By Allah, they are probably now cooking our dinner!" he added with a laugh.

The sunset was like feathers of orange across the sky. Against this appeared two blots which resolved themselves into women. It was uncanny the way these people appeared from nowhere. "Marheba—welcome! Your coming is good." The greeting was called to us in sibilant tones which reminded me of birds in spring; but the women did not move. We went toward them, and at the sound of our footsteps they stretched out groping hands and took a few stumbling paces, with fingers fluttering as if to feel their way.

"Are they blind?" I whispered to my companion, and then, as I came quite close, the words froze on my lips. I stared at two faces which looked as if they had long been dead. The light flared on skin that was smooth and leaden, tightly drawn over beautiful small bones. The wind whined round the cavern looming at our feet, and blew back draperies of indigo and purple which matched the bruised circles under eyes so enormous that they seemed like black mirrors. Fascinated, I stared at those circles which dyed the cheekbones and crept up beyond the narrow brows.

"Wallah, you are welcome!" repeated a soft, high voice. "Come below that we may see you—the light hurts us." Groping fingers caught me, and I was surprised to find them warm. "I am Aziza—I will guide you."

It was a young voice, I decided, and saw that the women were smiling. Their leaden lips were parted over teeth that, in their whiteness, were the first human, normal thing about a beauty exquisite and yet so strange as to be repulsive.

"This way," crooned Aziza, and stepped into a shaft which opened at our feet.

After the first few paces I was stumbling in pitch darkness, but a hand held me firmly, leading me down and down till I felt I should reach the heart of the earth. The path was smooth and the walls and roof polished to the touch.

"It has to be wide enough for our camels," explained the girl, and then the earth fell away beside me and I heard beasts grunting. I suppose I shrank nearer to my guide, for she reassured me, "We are passing the stables—can't you see the animals? The tall one belongs to my father—he feeds it on dates and olives."

I thought I could distinguish a thicker blackness where all was dark, and two points of light which must be the camel's eyes. Then a door barred our passage, and Aziza opened it with the sureness of a clear sight. I fell down a step after her. The tunnel narrowed and twisted sharply till, suddenly, it debouched into the grayness of a square pit, where hens scuttled away from us and a gazelle stood with one hoof upraised.

BLINKING, I looked up. Some hundred feet above us, the sunset was still golden and the wind drove the sand in swirls along the edge of the smooth walls which inclosed us. It was still below, though sound came to us, muffled and far away. I noticed that the pit was square and each of its faces was pierced by rows of doors but no windows. From some of them issued smoke and a glimmer of fire.

Both women stared at me with their immensely magnified pupils, and here in the dimness they were wholly beautiful—supple, intangible daughters of shadow, with their black silken hair loaded with golden ornaments, and the crushed violet which stained nostril and lips to a finer sensitiveness than our common reds could show.

An older woman came noiselessly from the door. "Marhaba," she said, "our desire went to meet you. He has been expecting you."

With a little shock I remembered the reason of my journey. Far away in the desert I had heard of the Troglodyte village whose women never saw the light and whose men earned a hard living by cultivating olives and grain on the plateau, and by hunting gazelle, fox and wolf, to barter their skins with the Bedouin below. Rumor spoke of a famous Sayed, whose lineage was older than that of the ruling Emir, who lived among the Troglodytes but whose face no man had seen. I had never heard his title—if any knew it, they kept the secret—but I was told of his study of that terrible science which can master the unbelieving spirits, "the Ulm el Issm," before whose name the Bedouins tremble.

I heard that this hermit of the south could foretell the future as surely as he could read the minds of peasant and prince alike, however far away they might be, and of course I determined that I would not leave the country until I had talked with him. With the richest presents that could be bought on the coast—bales of silk, a rifle or two, and some ornaments of beaten gold—I set out, accompanied by Abdullah and a monosyllabic Bedouin who drove my packhorses.

In the sunlit plains, where nomad herdsmen followed their camels and goats, the adventure had promised amusement, perhaps even a new thrill. Here, on the threshold of darkness, among women whose speech even was un-human, I shivered a little and wondered if the Invisible Prophet knew in what spirit I had approached him.

"TA FADDEL! Be seated," said the shadow of a voice, and I found myself crouching on a carpet of fox skins, staring across a charcoal fire at the Mother of All Time.

If the Troglodyte girls looked like the dead, this crone was death itself, for her bones seemed to tear the livid skin which stuck to them. Her nails and the palms of her hands were blue, and her eyes were like dull coals, in hollows so deep I felt there was nothing between those eyes and the naked brain they mirrored.

"Eat first, lady, and then you shall accomplish the object of your journey."

All around me were vague forms, and I heard the tinkling of silver jewelry and smelled amber and fresh herbs, but, beyond the circle of firelight, I could distinguish nothing. I ate gazelle meat with my fingers and drank bitter coffee while the women talked in ghostly voices.

"What are your houses like?" I asked, rolling rice and olive oil into a ball in my palm.

"They are pleasant, for we have as many rooms as we like. See, the walls are of clay and we decorate them with delicate moldings. Sometimes we paint them with the yolk of eggs, and we hang them with the furs our men bring us."

I learned that there were inner rooms beyond the row leading into the court, and it was in these that the women slept. The upper stories could only be reached by ladders from the central yard, but for several miles the earth was tunneled like a rabbit warren, so that sometimes, when a family decided to enlarge its house, it dug through into the dwelling of a neighbor, whose front door might be a hundred yards away.

Rosita Forbes.

The acrid smoke of the fire got into my eyes, and it seemed to me I had sat for hours in the low ceilinged room, eating strange messes full of red pepper, and talking with unreal people, half stifled with the incense drifting from small braziers.

At last a man's voice sounded from the threshold. "Greetings, lady. He waits for you!" Perhaps it was imagination, but I thought the women grew suddenly tense, and I was conscious of a sigh suppressed as I went out into the pit.

I never saw the face of my guide, but he led me, without faltering, through tunnels whose blackness seemed a tangible thing, across wide rooms where the air was close and fetid, till at last we reached a flight of steps.

"Walk with care," he said. "There is a door."

A gust of wind blew in my face, and I felt I was in a large room. The hand which led me was withdrawn. In panic I caught at invisible draperies, but they slipped through my fingers. I heard the door shut behind me.

For a second I knew sheer terror. I felt I was buried alive, and instinctively I put out my hands as if to beat away something that was threatening.

A voice spoke to me from the farther end of the room—"Allah keep you. There is no fear." The pulses which hammered in my throat grew less painful. There was something reassuring in that voice, remote and grave. It was a little muffled and I guessed that the speaker wore a veil. "You have eaten my bread, O lady"—and I heard the name by which I had long been known in the east, but which neither Abdullah nor any one on the plateau had heard—"you know our customs and you know that you are safe. Be seated."

I sank down on a pile of furs, and fear left me. How well I knew that measured Arabic, courteous because of the dignity and the force which were the birthright of the speaker. Recognizing at once that it was some great religious who was talking, I was horribly ashamed of the futile curiosity which had brought me into his presence.

"YES," said the voice, as if answering my thoughts, "you have made more useful journeys than this one."

"Sidi," I replied, giving him a prince's title, "may not the seed sown in idleness bear good fruit?"

There was a pause. "What did you come to ask me, for you have deserved well of my race?"

I wondered, since the Invisible Prophet evidently knew of my work, how much else he knew. Without waiting for me to speak, he said, "You have done much for the Arab peoples, yet you were but an instrument in the hands of Allah." He paused. "There is a curious blessing with you. Many times this must have been told you, for the Bedouin know these things. Always you are side by side with danger, yet always there is as if one stood between it and you. It is the will of Allah, but it is a strange thing." The voice sounded puzzled before it relapsed into the grave finality of the fatalist. "Your feet will tread strange roads and they will never be still. At the end you will long for peace, as a woman in travail, but it will not come to you in your own country."

Silence fell, and I had an idea it was like the sea, lapping up and up around me. I felt I was waiting for judgment, and there was no doubt in my mind then—nor has there ever been since—that the Sayed knew what the future held for me.

"Each man carries his fate on a ribbon round his neck," he said. "Yours will be swift and it will come to you in the south by a man's uplifted hand."

I heard my breath coming quickly, for the phrase conjured pictures of violence in the hot strange lands where life and death are so closely linked that a man scarcely realizes when he passes from one to the other.

"What else did you come to me to ask?" said the voice so pregnant with wisdom and power.

I dared not mention the wild phantasies I had heard concerning his commerce with spirits, but I faltered some question about this life of darkness and seclusion.

"Your world has need of all its great men," I suggested.

"Do you deny the influence of thought?" he asked. "If prayer can move mountains, thought can move men."

I could find no words and after a moment the Sayed continued. "What a man is is so much more important than what a man does. That is your mistake in Europe; you would make men and things before you have made yourselves."

Some time later I realized I was talking world politics with a man who knew every move of the game. It seemed to me I was looking at the modern nations through the eyes of all my forefathers, and I interrupted a discourse on the inevitability of what we call progress with a question that was almost a cry, "Who are you, Sidi, who are you?"

I imagined that the Sayed rose to his feet, for the answer came from far above me. "I am a servant of Allah—may He give you, after many journeys, peace."

I DON'T know how long I crouched there in a room which I knew was empty. At last shuffling feet approached me and a hand felt for mine. "Come with me." Once more I stumbled down steps and through long passages, but when my guide left me with instructions to follow the gray glimmer that pierced the darkness I was nowhere near the pit where I had talked with the Troglodyte women.

A few steps brought me round a corner into a cavity not unlike a badger's earth. I had to crawl through this on my hands and knees; then I was staring across the plateau, where the light was still orange. I wondered how the sunset could have lasted so long, and I looked around, puzzled. The earth was scarred with pit and sandhill. The great cliff dropped behind me to a rose red plain. A few yards away Abdullah leaned on his rifle, beside the horses and the steel of bit and barrel gleamed in the light. It was the dawn! The tall figure shrouded in its burnoose turned, as a stone rolled from my feet.

"Praise to Allah, you are safe! Mount quickly now—the packhorses are already on the way."

It was not till we had left the last pit behind that Abdullah asked cautiously, "What was He like, O lady? Did you see his face? They say it is horned like a beast, with eyes of live fire and the tongue of a serpent."

I thought of the grave, quiet voice, instinct with suffering and with something greater that I did not understand, and I laughed. "No, I did not see his face," I said.

The shadow of a branch flickered across the way. It looked like a brandished weapon and I remembered the phrase spoken in darkness—"It will come to you in the south, by a man's uplifted hand."

I shivered, and was glad when, three days later, we saw the first clouds of a northern sky!

THE HOUSE OF

do love him—I'm not ashamed to say it. He may be a stranger—but I'd trust him to the end of the earth. I'd love him to the end of the earth—and into heaven. His people would be my people—his God my God—if he'd have me—but he doesn't want me."

Her voice quavered on that last, and she stood, her lips trembling, but in her eyes a light that was brighter than the flaring flame of the lamp.

For a second there was a startled electric hush.

Then Peter, struggling up in bed, spat out: "You are a shameless girl!"

"I'm not ashamed," she repeated. "I love him. What I feel I feel in here," and she pressed a hand against her heart. "That doesn't lie—and you mustn't lie about it. And you mustn't be ashamed of it. I don't know how it's come, or why—and it will bring me nothing but sorrow—but I'm not ashamed."

And she stood there facing her judges, her hand on her heart, her lips quivering, and that light in her eyes which outshone the lampshine.

And then the man watching and listening outside, who had forgotten he was playing the role of eavesdropper, suddenly forgot everything in the world but one instinct which was stronger than all else in the world: he must get in there to her, must stand beside her and claim her—the girl who loved him and whom he loved!

He never remembered how he tore the window screen from its fastenings; in two bounds he was facing her—had her two hands in his.

"O, you wonder—you wonder!" he breathed. "You love me—and I love you!"

For a second—an eternity—they stood there clinging to each other's hands, gazing into each other's eyes—gazing deep, deep—caught in the miracle they made for each other and bounded by it, oblivious of any presence in the universe save the presence of each other.

Then all of a sudden Sam's voice came barking out, quick and warning: "Peter—watch out there—what're you doing—have you gone crazy? Watch out, Cecie—doctor!"

Instinctively Mark caught hold of Cecilia and dodged some

SENSIBILITIES By Mabel McElliott

Mrs. Baldwin Sets Her Heart on a Count for Daughter Ernestine

"Senor, enough. I shall have you aitrest."

"Of course, my skin——" began Mrs. Ernest Baldwin, examining in the mirror the slight redness on her left cheek.

Little Mrs. Windsor drew an inward sigh. She had heard that tone before, in connection with Mrs. Baldwin's skin and Mrs. Baldwin's hair, and with some other possessions of Mrs. Baldwin's. It seemed that if the wind blew too harshly on Mrs. Baldwin's skin, which was of a delicacy scarcely to be comprehended, terrific injury was sure to result. Or, if Mrs. Baldwin's hair took unkindly to any new sort of shampoo, or the iron of a too ardent marceller, she was wont to sigh in a kind of proud shame that hair of such excessive fineness was a cross borne only by one of exquisite sensibilities.

She was, reflected little Mrs. Windsor, affixing a defiant patch to her small chin by the aid of the other (the cracked) glass in the club dressing room, a trifle like that legendary princess who felt the pea through nineteen mattresses. The assumption of fine feeling transcending that of lesser folk grew more and more irritating. Mrs. Windsor wondered if Ernest Baldwin himself did not, every so often, groan in secret as he listened to the recitation of his consort's differences from common people. He was a ruddy, a quite ordinary man, in the wholesale dry goods business. It was conceivable that his position, or the work he was engaged in, rasped his fastidious Isabella as the scratch of wood against cement rasps some thin skinned folk.

"—can't stand anything," she was going on (Mrs. Baldwin, that is), partly to the dressing room maid and partly to the inattentive Mrs. Windsor. She was dusting some powder over the red patch now, commenting on the delicate quality of the powder, the bitter necessity for care of her sensitive epidermis. Mrs. Windsor, out of one corner of a gray eye, was observing that the other, with her one hundred and seventy pounds of solid weight, in black chiffon velvet, was scarcely the figure to illustrate a tale concerning the irksomeness of one small legume laid over with some nineteen mattresses. The thought quirked her mouth, and she had to stoop down to twitch a slipper buckle to hide this.

THEY swept, Mrs. Baldwin doing most of the actual sweeping, out into the hall, where there was the hum of murmurous activity attending afternoon bridge. Mrs. Baldwin's pearl brooch rose and fell on a magnificent bosom as she crossed the room. Her progress was attended by greeting and interruption, and she was benign, though proud. Mrs. Windsor felt her chin patch a flippant thing, as she trod meekly in the superb wake of those black velvet hips. She was, for the afternoon, Mrs. Baldwin's protege. The club was not her club, and she allowed twinges of self-reproach to assail her as she reflected on the kindness of her hostess in asking her to this, the smartest afternoon of the winter.

True, she had been asked because Ernestine, the Baldwin daughter, refused to give up her golf that afternoon for the gentler entertainments afforded by bridge. Mrs. Baldwin was a power in Clydeville, and usually a power with Ernestine; but Mrs. Windsor knew that she was playing that afternoon with Snooks Braidhead, runner up in last year's Metropolitan. This privilege alone was not to be sniffed at, but Mrs. Windsor further knew (she had a way of knowing just such things) that Ernestine was interested in Snooks. Mrs. Baldwin appeared to be ignorant of this. She had vaguely announced that Ernestine was taking instruction from some professional, and had let it go at that. Mrs. Windsor, romantic soul, knew better. She had seen the pale Ernestine and the ruddy Snooks idling down the road west of Clydeville in the golfer's roadster. She thought she had recognized the light of love on the pale face of Ernestine. Mrs. Baldwin was blind, but then she was always looking at her own fine skin in the mirror.

Mrs. Windsor shuddered a little for sympathy when she considered the storm of horror which would break on Ernestine if the flirtation budded, as flirtations do, into an engagement. Who, Mrs. Baldwin would terrifically inquire, was this person? And what was Ernestine thinking of, indeed? The Count Miguel De Santo, whom Ernest Baldwin had been putting up at Midland Rock for over four weeks now, was undoubtedly her mother's choice for Ernestine. The whole thing sounded grotesquely like a musical comedy plot, because who had Spanish noblemen about nowadays, anyhow? But there he was, Mrs. Baldwin's prize, with his long, thin hands (mark of race) and his long, ivory colored face, oddly lit by eyes of chocolate smoothness.

"I'm t-t-terribly sorry," muttered the wool gathering Mrs. Windsor, having trumped her partner's trick. She felt the eyes of three frigid players upon her and abandoned Ernestine.

Driving home through the dusk, however, in the Baldwin sedan, she thought of her again. There was in the air a fine, impalpable mist that was part blue haze and part the smoke of a hundred autumnal fires. It was the sort of twilight in which young love lingers, loathe to say good-by and go in to such prosy things as food and drink. A roadster honked behind them; Mrs. Baldwin turned an intimidating profile to the left as the impudent green car swung past.

"That—that looked like Ernestine," decided her mother, peering after vanishing wire wheels.

"Did it?" Mrs. Windsor wanted to know. "Did it, really?"

"I—I couldn't," the pale Ernestine was saying to the ruddy Snooks, whose masterful brown hands were evenly distributed, one on the wheel of the green roadster, one about the blue tweed shoulder of Ernestine.

"Why not?" the ruddy Snooks inquired, for the fourteenth time that afternoon. "Why not?"

"You don't know my mother," the pale Ernestine returned. "You wouldn't ask if you did. Mother's so—well, she's so awfully intense."

"What's that got to do with us?" the masterful Snooks wanted to know, rightly enough. "Me—I'm intense enough, too, if it comes to that."

"Mother would be—so awfully shocked," said Ernestine, poignantly. "She would be so frightfully surprised. She doesn't know about you, at all. I've been afraid to broach the subject."

"I'll broach it," offered the ruddy Snooks, looking more than ever like an ad for English ulsters, as he squared shoulders and tightened a good brown hand on the blue tweed shoulder. "I'll come round tonight and do the broaching, if you like. "Madam, the hand of your daughter in marriage."

Ernestine shuddered, and looked over the shoulder not imprisoned by the brown hand. "That was mother we passed, a while back, in the closed car," she offered. "Hurry. You'd better be gone by the time she gets along, or I'll have all sorts of explanations to make. Tonight, Snooks, I can't really. I'm not up to it. I will, as soon as I can screw up courage, but not tonight."

The ruddy Snooks shook his head over this strange manifestation of this—to him—perfect woman. But he stepped on the green roadster, and by the time Mrs. Ernest Baldwin had dropped her passenger and ground up her own driveway, Ernestine was within.

She climbed out of the blue tweeds; observed herself, in a drooping lavender negligee, in the glass; wondered again if she would ever be able to face her mother with this terrific announcement.

Mrs. Baldwin, unbuckling the pearl brooch, came into her daughter's room. "It was too bad you missed this splendid afternoon," she told the pale Ernestine. "I do wish you wouldn't make engagements

"What terrible rot, going to father first."

after this for third Wednesdays. You know I want that free for the club, always."

The pale Ernestine murmured a dutiful something, and bent down to remove stern brown oxfords.

"Do hurry, darling," admonished her mother, unlatching the black velvet with splendid gasps. "It's almost seven, and father's bringing Miguel to dinner."

The pale Ernestine slid down the chaise longue, and observed her parent with anxious green eyes.

"Moth-er," she complained bitterly. "I did hope I might have a bite up here on a tray, I'm so tired. That man is always coming for dinner, seems to me."

Mrs. Baldwin, horrified, stopped unlatching the bodice to regard her child. "That man," she mimicked, with emotion. "That man!" She was engulfed with astonishment. "That man," she hastened on, with superb irony, "only happens to be a member of one of the oldest houses in Europe. Deigns to honor us with his friendship—you, I might say, with more than that—and you call him—'that man.'"

She had adopted her best platform manner, now; was launched in a sea of eloquence. "What, Ernestine Baldwin, has happened to you?" she demanded, crescendo. "Are you aware that man has honored you by considering you for his bride? That he has spoken to your father about it?"

The pale Ernestine shook with something closely resembling hysteria. "Father has much too much good sense to pay any attention to him," she cried. "Anyhow, what terrible rot, going to father first. Doesn't he know it's not done?"

"O, indeed!" murmured the attacked parent, abandoning patent snappers in order to turn the full battery of her attentions upon her child. "Perhaps you'll be telling me next that some whippersnapper has been proposing to you, instead of paying you the honor of first talking the matter sensibly over with your parents."

The pale Ernestine turned wild eyes on her mother. "That," she announced, flatly, "is exactly what I do mean." She flung the ruddy Snooks, name, reputation, and all, into the breach and trembled for consequences.

But the fine grained Mrs. Baldwin, who might have been expected to crumple under the blow, only drew a great breath, such as battle horses are said to draw on plunging into the field of combat. "Snooks," she snorted, outraged at the sound. "A daughter of mine—mine—to marry a person named Snooks! Ernestine, put on your new white chiffon, and be sure to use some of that new pumpkin colored rouge. After Miguel goes, we'll talk this nonsense over, quietly." She adjusted her forces and, although shaken, paused to glance in Ernestine's pier glass. "I cannot," she contributed majestically, "use that rouge myself. My skin——"

The Count Miguel De Santo was driving out from town, meaning New York, to Clydeville, Long Island. The count had had a most distressing afternoon. He had been lounging in the erstwhile bar of the Harvard club when a smooth haired boy in clothes that were vaguely collegiate had lounged up to him. But it presently came to the count that the smooth haired boy was anything but collegiate. He asked all sorts of questions—impertinent ones—about his estate in Spain—how about that, anyway? Had he ever lived in Hollywood? (Sairteenlee not!) Hadn't he married a Chicago cabaret girl? (Senor, I am insult.) Wasn't it true there was no such title as the one he pretended to own? (Senor, enough. I shall have you airrest.)

The young man had laughed in an ugly fashion, and had gone away, saying never mind, he had the story anyway. These newspapers were the devil. They would have it all by the next day, their screaming columns and headlines. He would make his quick getaway tomorrow on the Conte Rosso. Lucky he'd heard that passage on the chance the luck would not hold.

The Count Miguel De Santo gave his impeccable topper an ineffable tap, and told the taxi man to charge, as usual, to Mr. Ernest Baldwin. Pity his luck was not holding out until that rich young lady, the Miss Ernestine, had made the marriage with him. Then Mister Baldwin he would undoubtedly have hushed up that fresh young man from the newspapers. O, well!

The ruddy Snooks was hanging on the other end of the Baldwin phone. Minnie, the nice downstairs maid, had just told him that Mrs. Baldwin would be there in a minute, please, and the ruddy Snooks was nerving himself for battle.

Presently the majestic voice: "Hello."

Snooks said this was Mr. Braidhead, and it was very—O, most important. Might he drop in for just a few minutes this evening?

Mrs. Baldwin, after a portentious pause, announced she did not think there was anything to be said. Ernestine and she had just been laughing over his preposterous proposal; he might as well know, right now, that Ernestine was affianced (yes, she said affianced) to the Count Miguel De Santo. Click.

The ruddy Snooks let fly some words which may not be printed here.

Mrs. Baldwin stopped at Ernestine's room that night again, on her way to bed.

"The finest type of man," she was burbling, still under the De Santo spell. "You must believe me, dear, when I say that these exquisite sensibilities (the growth of fine breeding, of racial delicacy) are terribly important. Other men—after Miguel—would grate on you so."

The pale Ernestine, conscientiously cold creaming her face, was too disspirited to reply. Besides, she was wondering how she could manage to get a note of warning off to Snooks.

"Sailing today for winter tournament at Nice, love," said the wire the pale Ernestine had the next morning. It was signed Snooks. On the breakfast table beside it lay a folded morning paper, on the second page of which was a yellow story exposing the Count Miguel De Santo. The pale Ernestine read the first one, and wept. She read the second, and laughed wildly.

Then she went into the boudoir of the exquisitely constituted Mrs. Baldwin, armed with both.

"I THINK, if your mother only knew him," advanced little Mrs. Windsor on a certain spring afternoon in Clydeville. The pale Ernestine, in a new beige frock and a stunning black hat, was sitting on her lilac colored divan. "Of course, she's prejudiced, I know. But he's quite a lion now, having won all those championship honors in France. Still, that means little or nothing to her."

"I know." The pale Ernestine gave the effect of wringing her hands, although she sat quite still.

"Let me have him for lunch tomorrow at the club," suggested little Mrs. Windsor, the light of the executive in her eye. "Let me tell him—what to eat."

"What to eat?" The pale Ernestine unclasped her hands and opened green eyes wide.

"Never mind." Little Mrs. Windsor grinned above the defiant patch on her demure chin. "I know—I may say, my dear—a few of your mother's weaknesses. We'll have a big party, so that she can't possibly object. Ten, or maybe twelve. Leave," said little Mrs. Windsor, "it to me."

"Mother's so intense," sighed Ernestine poignantly. "But I've got to marry my darling Snooks, no matter."

"You shall," said Mrs. Windsor, importantly. "You shall."

The ruddy Snooks, looking like a bronzed god in golf clothes, played lion at Midland Rock club on the Tuesday. He was not bearing any of his prize cups, but he might as well have, because the effect was there. When Ernestine came in, they threw long glances at each other, and Mrs. Baldwin magnificently seemed not to see. She was distressed because a too zealous marceller had wreaked havoc with her fine hair.

But she bowed majestically to Mr. Braidhead when he was presented. And at luncheon, although she was superbly unaware of him, the adjacent ruddy Snooks took pains to please.

It was only when the waitress carried away the third untasted course that she deigned to notice him. The ruddy Snooks said in a plaintive, carrying voice: "Just a little alligator pear salad and some dry toast, please. It's all," he explained to the splendid Mrs. Baldwin, "I care for at luncheon."

She descended from imaginary heights, as if viewing him for the first time.

"Your tastes, then, are delicate?" she wanted to know. The ruddy Snooks sighed, and said they were. He expanded the subject. An odd accident, he opined, had thrown him into this athletic business. When the astute Mrs. Windsor had time to kick Ernestine under the table, they were scaling family trees.

"D'ye know," the shameless Snooks was saying as the ice cream came on, unattended. "D'ye know, Mrs. Baldwin, you make me think of that fairy tale princess who felt a stone—or something—through a dozen mattresses. So fine, I mean."

The pale Ernestine, across the table, threw him a glance which was like a kiss.

THE FEARINGS - By Dana Gatlin

Cecilia called him frantically—and Sam ran after him, calling.

Peter reappeared for a moment at a window, hurled forth an armload of old silver dishes and covers.

Sam, halted just outside the range of spitting flame, shouted: "Come out—quick!"

But Peter shouted back: "Upstairs—the things up there! Come—if you're a Fearing" He was gasping, his face was blackened, his clothing was charred and in flames.

Then he disappeared again.

Cecilia beat her hands in the air, and would have torn herself from Mark's grasp had he not held her tightly. She began to sob and lament: "Peter, Peter—O, he'll be burned up! And he's good and kind—down underneath—kinder than people think. And he loves the old place so—it's a part of him—and now it's going to kill him because he loves it so!"

And the man holding her, restraining her, as he watched that awful spectacle and guessed at the unseen horrors within, yet found time for a second's wonder: was the chief guiding instinct of Peter Fearing's life perhaps his chief saving grace—though it guided him now to his doom? His pride in the Fearings for what they were despite what they were—his pride in his possessions because they were Fearing possessions.

Lombard was struggling with Sam, who would have run in after his brother. Mark caught a glimpse of Sam's face—the features were drawn and strained, but there was something there the doctor had never seen before, and he fleetingly marveled: "Sam's come back!—the shock's brought him back!"

Lombard was crying: "Don't be a fool!—you can't save him! No need of you both committing suicide!"

Even as Lombard shouted a new note entered the tumult—rumbling and ominous, but giving off sharp, querulous, splitting sounds as it gathered. And then with a mighty and demoniac roar—from which the human watchers sped panic driven to safety—the structure all at once collapsed. That terrific and awesome sound might have been the destroyer's trumpet of triumph, or the old dwelling's last defiance. For a breath the flames seemed smothered, vanquished, then broke forth again, gashing the night with living scarlet.

They blazoned and hissed their victory. The old house, and all it had held of ill, was laid low—the house of the Fearings was gone.

missile—just in time. Sam had sprung toward the bed while crying out—but too late.

For Peter, enraged to madness by climacteric entry of the doctor and by that love scene, had reached for something to throw at the intruder—and blindly grabbed the lighted glass lamp.

It missed its target—and Cecilia, too, by a narrow margin, and went smashing on the window sill. The burning oil, catching in flames on the muslin curtains, was fanned by the wind. Like demoniac fingers the fire spread, flickering eagerly over the ancient, seasoned framework. Little rivers of flame flowed out to widen the conflagration—in less time than the telling the whole room seemed ablaze.

Mark, still clutching Cecilia, leaped toward the bed to help Sam drag the convalescent to safety.

But Peter was out of bed by himself; he was jerking the bedding off and tossing it aside.

"Get water!" he yelled commandingly. "This is the first Peter Gearing's bedstead—got to save it!"

He began muttering to himself, pulling desperately at the bedstead. The hard man seemed suddenly broken; a frenzy of remorse and helplessness seemed to oversweep him.

Mark cried: "Come—we must get out of this quick!"

And Lombard shouted: "Yes—the house will go like paper—and this wind——"

And Sam cried: "Let 'er burn!—good riddance—it's no good! Come on, Peter!"

He caught one of his brother's arms while Lombard snatched the other, and the two half carried him, running out through the living hall; Mark, still clutching Cecilia, ran close after them.

They got out of doors barely in time, it seemed. The conflagration, feeding avidly on those rotted timbers, was spreading with an incredibly swift, clamorous tumult. Flames flared already in the living hall—in an upstairs window. The wind fanned them—they crackled and mounted and roared with sinister determination.

The little group, huddled on the lawn, stared at the terrible rushing force; then Peter cried: "I won't let everything go! The old guns—and our silver——"

And he fled back toward the house, straight into the jaws of the inferno.

The Affair at Othman's by Will Payne

INSTALLMENT XI.
The New Witness.

FOR the night's chilly vigil Kendall had discovered that two men stopped Jenks in the street, talking with him a couple of minutes; that the valet then went to Mrs. Josephine Smith's, where he stayed four hours and borrowed a typewriter. He could hear Welbasky laugh over that haul.

But the captain, in fact, did not laugh. Sunday morning all the world lay abed an hour later, and Kendall followed the custom. He looked over the morning newspapers and found, as he had expected, that Nelson Barlow occupied the limelight; also, as he had expected, that scandals concerning Othman were at a premium, more mud to the torrent. It was half past nine when he presented himself at police headquarters and a half hour later when he was admitted to the small, plain office which was the real nerve center of the police department in a baffling murder case like this one. Welbasky greeted him with a glum nod, and let him have it bluntly:

"Bad news for you. We've found the gun." He frowned. "It was under their noses all the while."

Only an hour and a half after the murder, when an automatic pistol was discovered behind some books in the library where Nelson Barlow had sat, Welbasky thought he had the murder solved. Then, annoyingly, it turned out that this automatic pistol was not the weapon with which Othman had been killed. In such a case as this the weapon was almost as necessary as the corpse. All Saturday the police had looked for it in vain. But this bright, crisp Sunday morning they began looking more systmatically outside the house and found it almost at once.

A tunnellike driveway, lined with tiles, pierced the lower story of the house at the west side. A steel column, inside the brick face, supported the overhanging southwest corner of the second story. The tiles, folding around this column, made a triangular niche. The pistol was found at the bottom of this niche fairly under their noses, as Welbasky had said, yet practically invisible unless one stooped and looked carefully, because that little corner, of irregular shape and behind the column, was dark even when the electrics were turned on in the driveway. With three strokes of a pencil Welbasky made a ground plan of the corner so that Kendall, who had never particularly noticed that architectural detail of the house, would understand it.

The weapon was a light, pearl handled, nickel plated, six chambered revolver of .32 caliber. One chamber had been discharged, containing an empty cartridge. Its caliber was the same as that of the bullet which killed Othman. Beyond all reasonable doubt this was the murder gun.

For one thing, it was a ladylike sort of weapon. For another thing it was almost out of the question that Nelson Barlow had put it there. He was in the house and on the stairs a few minutes after the murder. To imagine a man who had just committed a murder, in a house full of servants, running out of doors and fairly into a public street in order to hide the weapon and then running back again was to abuse imagination. On the other hand——

Welbasky extended his little diagram so as to include the front line of the house, half the driveway, and the recessed main door. Suppose a person left the main door of the house on foot and in haste, bound for Fifth avenue. It would be rather natural for such a person to cut diagonally down the driveway and reach the public sidewalk at that corner where the pistol was found. Suppose the fleeing person, being in haste and terror, had a weapon to conceal. What would be more natural for her to drop, or tuck, it down into that dark corner? It wasn't necessary to suppose that she had ever particularly noted that corner. She is running away, her agitated mind occupied with the necessity of getting rid of the pistol. Here is a dark spot. She drops the pistol and hurries on. In short, the place and position in which the gun was found plainly suggested that it was put there by somebody who was fleeing from the house—and not by somebody who had run out of doors for that purpose and was going back into the house.

WELBASKY expounded it grumpily, with a clouded face, for he had a bad conscience. When he stepped into Marsden's sitting room and saw a slender young woman standing to receive him he had experienced a surprising reaction. It wasn't only beauty and grace but a freshness as of the flower at its first, finest bloom, unrumpled as yet, unsmudged. He'd been at this trade from his youth, laying people by the heels, breaking them, tripping them to jump on them; mostly people quite sufficiently besmudged and bemired in one way or another long before he laid hands on them. The devil, weren't there plenty of the besmudged and bemired ones for him to trip and jump on without rolling this gracious one in the mud? An extraordinary and surprising reaction, for he had quite suddenly wanted her to go free and clean.

He had long known well enough that with his beanpole figure, funny nose, and purple complexion he was an uncurrent coin with female youth and beauty, a counterfeit bill which they naturally inclined to ignore. Perhaps it was not so much the nose as the temperament, for he was a grumpy, unsociable person, getting on by sheer industry and ability rather than by slapping men on the back. Divest him of his invisible uniform, and this present dark eyed beauty would probably speak to him quite kindly and tell the cook to give him a bone. He was not romancing in the way of expecting anything from her. He wanted her to go free with a sudden softening to a fresh, lovely, trapped creature. And no such softening had any proper place in his profession, which ought to be impersonal.

Thanks to Kendall's intervention, he was backed up now by a powerful word from up above. All the same, he wasn't doing his job; he wasn't four square with his calling. Flora Marsden ought to be locked up this minute. He had a dissatisfaction with himself which amounted to a bad conscience. He was making Barlow the goat, and he didn't believe in dividing 'em into sheep and goats; to a policeman they should all look alike.

He glowered at the reporter: "See here, Kendall, I'm square with you and you're to be exactly square with me. Do you know anything about that ad in the Forum last night? Did you put it in, or have anybody put it in, or do you know where it came from?"

"On my word, no," Kendall replied. "I know nothing whatever about it."

The detective eyed him a minute and commented simply: "Well, I believe you. I thought maybe with that bug in your head about jewels you'd tried to start something on your own hook. But if you say you didn't, that goes with me. Now, forget that, and come back to this gun. She shot him, son, or stood by. She won't do herself any good by denying it. Understand now, I'm taking you right inside giving you the squarest deal I know how. Keep that in mind. But she's doing herself no good. I know how she feels about it, and her people. They can't endure the idea of her name in the newspapers; held by the police, charged with murder, a trial. But that's piffle. She'd a lot better have her name in the newspapers than get stuck in Ossining for ten years. Listen, now: Othman was a hog with women. No trouble to show that. He fooled her into accepting him. Then she went up there to break the engagement. He grabbed her. She shot him. Why, boy, any shoestring peddler that can't speak five words of English could take her case and clear her hands down! All she's got to do is show herself to the jury and tell her story; show up Othman a bit. An attack; she shot in self-defense; any jury would hand her a bouquet. But if she denies it and makes us nail it to her she loses that sympathy. See? She loses sympathy—throws away her trumps.

"You've got the password here and I'm taking you into the lodge. I'm no Romeo myself, but that girl struck the soft spot in the top of my head. I hate to see her throw away her chance. If she keeps on denying it and makes us nail it to her she will throw away her chance—the jury's sympathy. I'm keeping this gun under my hat for the present, and you're to keep it under your hat till I say when. The next step is to identify it as hers or her father's. I'm working on a lead to that now. But I wish she'd come here and confess—save us the trouble and save herself, too."

After the young man left Welbasky reflected: "If he's in love with her he'll probably post down there and warn her that I've got the gun—which, after all, may scare her into confessing. Well, I got the word from high up to take him in on the ground floor. It's their responsibility, not mine." And in a moment he perceived a great truth—to wit: "Girls with eyes and lips like hers shouldn't shoot people; it mixes things up too much."

KENDALL was under a tacit bond not to disclose the discovery of the pistol. "You're to keep it under your hat," Welbasky had said. That was in the foreground of the reporter's thoughts as he left headquarters.

But this business of the pistol agitated him, such a ladylike sort of gun, pearl handled, nickel plated, and found at the spot where a person fleeing from the house would naturally have dropped it. When Flora Marsden, the image of truth, said, "Truly, Phil," every shadow of doubt fled from his mind. But when Welbasky marshaled the facts they looked formidable. She had quarreled with Othman, struck him, and fled; somebody had shot Othman at that instant; everybody about the place, except herself and Nelson Barlow, was accounted for; now they'd found this ladylike pistol at the corner of the drive. The facts looked formidable.

Suppose, after all, she was trying to shield Nelson Barlow, or had denied it in a panic and was fatuously sticking to the denial? Suppose Welbasky discovered that this pearl handled revolver had been in her father's house? That would be conclusive proof against her. Kendall suddenly saw it in newspaper headlines: "Miss Marsden denied all knowledge of the shooting, but the police had found the weapon where she hid it and could prove it came out of her father's house." Thus they could show not only that she shot Othman or was an accessory to the shooting, but that she repeatedly lied about it. That would lose her the sympathy which, as Welbasky said, was her trump. If it was her pistol she must confess and save the sympathy.

As the situation thus shaped itself in his thoughts her image came before him, as when, in those early cousinly days, she had straightened his tie. But if a certain pearl handled revolver was hers she stood in a great and imminent danger; the living death of prison loomed in front of her, unless she was warned in time. Then why was he mooning along the streets miles away from her? He found a drug store with a public telephone in it and called up Marsden's house.

Mounting the steps to that house on this crisp, sun flooded Sunday morning, when untormented folk were going to church, gave him an oddly poignant emotion. Once upon a time they had been familiar to him. After that came a long, self-imposed exile. Then he saw her once to blurt the insult about Othman. A little later she and Nelson Barlow sent for him at the French hotel to ask some exigent questions, and he had seen her Friday evening after Othman was killed. But these later meetings had been forced. This coming encounter was forced, too, a matter of necessity on her part rather than of choice.

In telephoning he had asked to see her alone for a few minutes, and she herself answered his ring. Afterward he didn't know what sort of dress she had on; it was only her pale face, dark eyes, and crown of glossy hair. She had looked so the Friday night after Welbasky left her. But now her eyes seemed to question him with a puzzled submission as though she were asking, "What are they going to do to me? What are you going to do to me?"

They had the small downstairs hall to themselves, and it was as good a place as any other for a brief, confidential talk. Seeing her thus near made his senses ache, and her pale face only heightened the power of her grace. But they might be coming to put her in prison. He tossed all equivocations to the winds and went at it head down, asking without a preface:

"Did you ever have a pearl handled, nickel plated revolver? Was there ever such a revolver in the house?"

"Why, no; not that I ever saw," she replied, wondering; and again this was the image of truth.

"Well, they've found such a gun," he said, "at Othman's house; one chamber discharged. It's the right caliber. It's the gun he was shot with. I wanted to ask you."

Her lips trembled in a doleful little smile, for obviously if he wanted to ask her it must be because he wasn't sure that she didn't shoot Othman, although she had solemnly denied it to him. He understood the doleful smile, and signified as much with a nod:

"I know. You think I shouldn't be asking you. But I wouldn't take the chance. Maybe I shouldn't be telling you about the revolver. You see, I'm on the inside, thanks to the newspaper and a big politician. Welbasky lets me work along with him. Only himself and two or three others know about finding the revolver. Probably I'm supposed not to tell. But this comes terribly close to you. You were there, struck him, and so on. Finding the revolver brings it all the closer. You mustn't be fooling yourself—to shield Nelson Barlow or for any other reason. It comes terribly close. I wouldn't take the chance, whether I'm supposed to tell you or not."

Formerly, she thought, he had been punctilious enough in matters of that kind—a pledge, his honor; but when she might be in great danger that went by the board. Indeed, if he could have spoken his mind he would have said: "My beautiful dear, if my honor will save you, take it as a mat to walk on; anything I have that can serve you is freely yours." Something like that was in his look, but he only muttered, "Nothing matters so long as they don't get you; I couldn't stand that."

Then, at once, he brought himself up with a jerk and continued in an ordinary tone: "You know how these things go sometimes; at least, I do. The police get a theory, then they're bound to prove it if they can. When the evidence is all circumstantial it makes a lot of difference where the emphasis is placed to begin with. If they start with a theory they'll pile everything on it. I'm on the inside and can keep watch. I want to make sure there are no false moves. If you ever had such a pistol I wanted to know it." And in saying this he might have been her lawyer, or a private detective whom she had engaged to manage her case; it was said professionally.

If he had kept on for only half a minute after muttering, "Nothing matters so long as they don't get you," she might have told him something important. She understood that he had broken his bond to warn her; what it cost smoldered in his eyes; and if he had held the note of his muttering for half a minute she might have said, "There's something I haven't told you. Only Nelly Barlow and I know it. I'll tell you now." But he immediately drew back, striking a quite different and fairly professional note.

So what she really said was: "I owe you an awful lot for what you're doing, Phil. It's on you I'm depending. But I never saw such a pistol."

"Well, I'll keep watch and let you know what happens," he said. The interview ended awkwardly.

OUT on the sidewalk he told himself, "I should have believed her in the first place; got panic stricken thinking of that pistol. Well, what now?"

That stubborn iteration, "Jenks, jewels" was always running in the back of his head. Naturally it now and then ran on to Mrs. Josephine Smith. At any rate, there was nothing else in particular to do, so he turned to Forty-fifth street. The block beyond Lexington avenue wore a bright, wintry Sunday air, with few vehicles and few foot passengers at this hour. One imagined that portion of the population which did not attend church, after a late Sunday breakfast, lounging and drowsing over voluminous Sunday newspapers. The dingy oaken door with a small glass panel in the top of it was shut; something vaguely Sabbatical about it this morning. Kendall walked past it. But certainly there was little sense in merely loitering on the sidewalk; he'd better be keeping warm in an easy chair down on Ninth street.

Well, why not? With nothing to do but kill time he might as well take a shot at it. So he turned back and stepped into the tiny vestibule with its row of letter boxes on the wall. He even tried the inner door, but that was locked. Then he rang Mrs. Smith's bell; in any event it could be nothing more than a bit of harmless impudence. The electrical contrivance that operated the lock began clicking. He opened the stairs, quite prepared to His knock at Mrs. Smi promptly, but instead of t telligent face he beheld t Marie Marsh. THE STORY THUS FAR.

FREDERICK OTHMAN, a man of some mystery, lives in New York in a house of forbidding aspect, surrounded by art treasures and other evidences of wealth. To him, one night, comes

NELSON BARLOW, a young society wastrel who has forged and embezzled under circumstances that put him in Othman's power. From Barlow Othman worms a story concerning

STAMFORD MARSDEN, a business man of reputed probity. The tale has to do with a girl, abandoned years before in a Maine village, and a child, supposedly Marsden's. Othman is in love with

FLORA MARSDEN, Stamford Marsden's daughter, and offers to help Barlow out of his difficulties if he will use his social position to bring about the match. There is a skillfully conducted courtship, in the course of which Othman extends much needed financial aid to Marsden. Meanwhile Othman has acquired control of a paper on which

PHILLIP KENDALL, a distant cousin of the Marsdens, is working as a reporter. Kendall, hopelessly in love with Flora, is not at all pleased when Othman directs him to investigate the story about her father's past. He finds Marsden's supposed child in Maine, however, and presently this girl turns up in New York in the care of a certain Mrs. Smith, who seems to have inclinations toward blackmail. Kendall suspects that Othman is manipulating the threatened scandal to increase his influence over the Marsdens. He is sure of it when he recognizes

JENKS, Othman's valet, as a man he once saw leaving Mrs. Smith's apartment. He accuses Othman of perpetrating a fake, there is a fight, and Kendall is ejected from the house by Jenks, murderously flourishing a revolver. Flora has promised to marry Othman, but changes her mind when Kendall, in desperation, reveals to her certain things he has learned about the man. On the night when she goes to Othman's house to break her engagement Othman is found murdered in the room in which his greatest art treasure, Titian's "Daphne," is hung. Flora admits having quarreled and struggled with Othman, but tells CAPTAIN WELBASKY, of the police, that she left before anything more serious occurred. Barlow was in the house, and his automatic is found hidden in the library, but the weapon proves not to have been discharged. Jenks, the valet, offers an alibi, substantiated by witnesses, to the effect that he had been sent out on an errand. Kendall is puzzled by encountering a mysterious stocky man loitering outside the house at dawn. Determined to protect Flora from arrest and notoriety, he enlists the aid of a political boss and undertakes to work night and day on the case if she be left unmolested. He thinks there has been a jewel robbery, and that Jenks has had a part in it. An anonymous ad in his paper mentions jewels with a veiled possible reference to Othman, and one night, trailing Jenks, he finds the valet doing various things that seem to him suspicious. More convincing clews, however, turn up in another direction when the papers proving Barlow's forgery are found at Othman's, indicating a motive for murder and leading to Barlow's arrest.

THE AFFAIR AT OTHMAN'S . . . . . By Will Payne

"Going to Europe with Jenks, I hear."

clicking. He opened the inner door and went upstairs, quite prepared to be told to go down again. His knock at Mrs. Smith's door was answered promptly, but instead of that lady's thin, severe, intelligent face he beheld the soft, smiling image of Marie Marsh. She gave him a look of surprise, then laughed childishly:

"O, it's you! I thought it was Mr. Judson." She was shaking hands, letting him into the living room without the least reluctance.

Pleasantly, like a casual caller making conversation, he asked, "You were expecting Mr. Judson?"

She shook her smiling head and explained: "I didn't think of anybody else. Nobody else comes here. We went to church last Sunday, but Mrs. Smith had to meet some friends this morning."

Pumping her was a bit brutal, because she met him like an amiable child who is glad to have somebody to talk to or play with—melancholy, also, for she was a pretty creature. But the moment she mentioned Mr. Judson an idea had struck him.

"Mr. Judson is Mrs. Smith's lawyer," he remarked with the sociable air of making conversation.

"Yes." Her blue eyes grew rounder. "He's an awfully smart man. He's traveled all over the world. We're going away to Europe as soon as my business is settled."

"That'll be fine! Mr. Judson going with you?"

"Yes; he's going with us." With a childlike seriousness she added, "I'll be rich then."

"Well, that'll be fine, too!" Kendall assured her. A sort of dirty business, this pumping her; but he couldn't stop to consider that.

He found, however, that Marie was vague as to where and when they were going, only it was to be soon, as soon as her business with her father was settled. They had bought some dresses already. She was equally vague about all details of the business with her father. Mrs. Smith was coming back about one o'clock; she had told Marie not to leave the house. No, she never went out of doors alone, on account of that business with her father; some one might try to carry her away, because there was a lot of money. Evidently it hadn't occurred to prudent Mrs. Smith that a young man might call at the flat that Sunday morning.

With this docile subject he could lead the conversation where he pleased, so he presently tried another tack: "You see, I'm busy now. I'm a reporter on a newspaper, you know. I'm working on an important case, the murder of Frederic Othman."

She brightened with interest, as though he had mentioned her favorite motion picture actor. "O, yes! I've been reading about it in the newspaper." She pointed to a pile of Sunday papers on the sofa. "I read about it yesterday morning, too." Obviously reading the news was not among her settled habits. "You know, Mr. Judson was his lawyer, one of his lawyers. He was so rich he had five or six different lawyers. Mr. Judson was one."

Kendall prickled with interest and took pains to make his voice seem casual as he asked, "What does Mr. Judson say about it?"

"Why," she answered, round eyed, "he says a woman shot him."

"Says a woman shot him," Kendall repeated flatly. "That all he said?"

"He said Mr. Othman was rich, but not respectable. And a woman shot him."

Apparently that was all Mr. Judson had said, or all that Marie was able to remember. Kendall kept the talk going, not unlike that patient search of Jenks' room; but beyond the first disclosures that Marie and Mrs. Smith and Mr. Judson were going to Europe as soon as her business was settled it yielded nothing. There was no particular point in either avoiding Mrs. Smith or meeting her, but probably it would be pleasanter to avoid her; so at a quarter to one he took leave.

SOME deviltry afoot here, going to Europe soon with Judson and Mrs. Smith. What might that mean? For one thing it meant that Jenks planned an early and presumably permanent departure from New York. The lank valet came up in Kendall's mind, along with this pretty, docile, dull minded girl. Some deviltry there. Apparently Jenks had not been Othman's valet eleven years for nothing. Like master, like man.

He was pondering that dourly as he went down stairs. His hand was advanced toward the latch of the inner vestibule door when he heard a pass key in the lock, and stepped back. The door opened, and this time he looked into the thin face of Mrs. Josephine Smith, a face stamped with boldness as well as intelligence, something ruthless in its keenness. For once she was off guard; clearly the idea of his calling there that morning had never occurred to her. Not that she flinched, but there was a feline start, a sudden alarm, a flying to arms. The pious air with which she had first met him was gone.

He took an ungallant advantage of it, grinning in her face as he said, "I've just had a pleasant visit with Marie." He detested this woman too much to be above mocking her.

She was steadying herself, a greenish tinge in her eyes as they burned at him.

"Going to Europe with Jenks, I hear," he mocked.

"That's only child's talk," she replied.

He turned quite serious, speaking to her as though he were telling her something in confidence: "I'm going to stop it. He can't take that girl away."

"He doesn't want to," she said. "That's only the child's talk. You told Othman this was all a fake, but it's not. She's Marsden's daughter, but she couldn't prove it in court. Othman made a provision for her. Jenks is looking after it. As soon as I get the money I'm going to take her to Florida by boat, something to please her, and then let her decide whether she wants to go back to Maine or stay with me. She's Marsden's daughter, but he's got no money anyhow. Othman wanted to use her and made a provision for her. Why can't you let her alone? You mean her no good."

"I don't believe your story," he said, letting courtesy go hang. "It's true all the same," she assured him. "If anybody harms her it will be you."

He was more than half convinced that this was impudent mendacity; but she carried it off with such assurance, looking him straight in the eye, speaking with perfect conviction! There was some unexplained connection, after all, between Stamford Marsden and this girl. He experienced exasperating doubts; and in his irritation tried an unpremeditated stroke:

"Why did Jenks shoot Othman?"

She appeared to take it gravely, her eyes unwavering, not a muscle of her face twitching. "Jenks shot Othman," she replied, "because Othman ate pie for breakfast." Then she laughed at him and turned to the stairs.

Blast the woman! Half a dozen steps up she looked over her shoulder to laugh at him again.

Upstairs she spoke soberly to Marie: "I met Mr. Kendall at the door. He's been up here talking to you. You mustn't let him in if he comes again, or talk to him at all, Marie. He's a reporter, you know. He may put everything you say into the newspapers. Then your enemies will know where you are and make trouble about the money."

"O," said Marie, enlightened.

Nothing further was said between them then, but Mrs. Smith's capable mind was busy. This nosing, meddling reporter might make no end of trouble. Indeed, a cherished plan seemed in jeopardy from him.

The reporter went out on the street blasting the woman. But he had got a little something from her. She knew he had told Othman that the pretence of Marie being a daughter of Stamford Marsden was all a fake. Undoubtedly she had that from Jenks. Had Othman repeated it to Jenks or had Jenks been listening at the door? Was listening at the door one of Jenks' habits?

Was Jenks planning to go away soon with Mrs. Smith and pretty, helpless Marie Marsh?

MONDAY morning, and the town still awaited an official explation of Othman's murder. One man, Nelson Barlow, was held as a material witness. But justice demanded a murderer, not a witness. Three times the morning newspapers had appeared with a question mark. This morning two newspapers rather pointedly tacked that question mark to the door of the police department. Was another murderer going to slip through clumsy official fingers?

Captain Welbasky read it glumly. His hopes of identifying the pistol which was found in Othman's driveway, its discovery being as yet a closely held police secret, had not been fulfilled. But he could hardly get through another day without making some decisive move.

A policeman in uniform entered the small offic to say that a lady wished to speak to him about the Othman matter. He nodded, and a moment later the officer showed in a middle aged woman, below woman's medium height and with the plumpness of a well fed, matronly pigeon. A quick glance showed that she was well dressed, that her copper colored hair was probably dyed or false, and that her complexion certainly was; but there was nothing in that to her prejudice, when dyed hair and tactfully rouged cheeks were as plentiful in church as in any other well dressed crowd. Obviously she had once been a pretty, round faced, dimpled, blue eyed girl, and there was nothing in her appearance to suggest that she was not, at present, a respectable matron—quite likely engaged in business or a profession. A certain self-possession in this encounter with a strange man under strange circumstances suggested that she was accustomed to dealing with people as they came.

"It's about this murder of Mr. Othman," she began, [illegible] seated at the end of the captain's desk. In a candid, give and sort of confidence, she added, "I hated to come here. I'm in business, you know. I have the hair dressing and manicuring place in the Kingsel apartments on Park avenue; beauty parlor, they usually call it. I sell hair goods and cosmetics and so on, and teach young ladies hair dressing. You see, captain, it's a good business in that line. I've been at the present location four years. Really, I've built it up—built up a first-rate trade, and I have myself to take care of. I can refer you to the landlord and the bank and a great many people. You know how it is, captain, with a business, especially with a woman's business. Getting your name in the newspapers in a case like this and having police and reporters running to see you and all that, well, it certainly doesn't do any good. It drives people away."

She was fairly launched now, and went on with a voluble earnestness: "You can see how it is, captain. My customers are mostly women, married women, a good many of them young married women. Well, their husbands see the bills, or know where they go to get their hair dressed, and say, 'O, that's the woman that was mixed up in the Othman murder.' There are plenty of other beauty parlors. Nobody has to come to me, and anything that looks, well, shady, might send them away." With a little laugh she added, in sudden confidence, "My goodness, captain. women can have plenty of things to explain to their husbands without having to bother about their hair dressers."

The touch of nature made Welbasky laugh and he assured her, "I'll not give you away unless it has to come out in court."

She looked somewhat downcast over that and observed, "Well, I do hope it won't have to. That's why I hated coming here, you see. Of course, I've been reading the newspapers. Maybe what I have to tell you isn't of any account anyway. But it did seem that I really ought to tell the police. I'm a widow, captain, and I live in the Kingsel apartment building; a little apartment on the twelfth floor. I've had it three years. I guess I didn't tell you my name. It's Mrs. Littleton, Mrs. Bertha Littleton."

She hesitated a moment, and looked at the policeman rather appealingly, as though she required some further urging, or a command, to overcome her reluctance. Then by way of taking the plunge she said:

"Really, I suppose it's my duty to tell you. You see, I was busy in the shop Friday evening till half past six or maybe a little later. I do try to get out and walk a little every day when the weather isn't too awfully bad. I'm in the shop all day, you know, and then going up to my apartment, if I don't make an effort I get no exercise at all. My doctor says it's bad for me"—she laughed—"and I know it myself when I step on the scales. It was bad Friday evening, you know, but I thought I must get out for half an hour or so before dinner. So I went up to my apartment and got my rubbers and a raincoat and an old hat, and went out.

"I really don't know just how far I walked up Park avenue. After I'd once got out of doors, for all it was so sloppy, the air felt good, and I just plodded on in the snow, enjoying it. I know I went over to Madison avenue and walked a ways; and then I thought I'd go over to Fifth avenue. I wasn't paying any particular attention to the cross streets, you see, and didn't know exactly where I was until I recognized Mr. Othman's house. I never knew Mr. Othman. That is, I knew him by sight; he'd been pointed out to me; but I never had any acquaintance with him. Of course, I knew his house. I guess everybody in New York has had it pointed out to them. If I had to try to fix the time, I would say it was probably around a quarter to seven when I left the Kingsel and I must have been walking about half an hour when I recognized Mr. Othman's house."

She made a gesture with a plump little hand, indicating a body moving in a straight line. "I was walking west, you see, right past his house, and I was keeping over toward the building. You know how it was Friday night—all that soggy snow coming down. I had my umbrella up, so I didn't see far, and I was watching my step, too, for a body might slip easily. Well, there's a driveway on the west side of Mr. Othman's house, and the first thing I knew I saw a woman stooping down down over at the further side of that driveway, right at that corner, you know, at the west side of the driveway."

Habit enabled Captain Welbasky to keep his face perfectly straight and his voice cool as he suggested, "Suppose you draw me a little diagram, show me just where this woman was when you saw her."

That seemed to daunt her. "Why, I'm no hand at drawing, captain. I don't believe I could get it right," she protested. Nevertheless, taking the pencil which he offered her in a small, fat, gloved hand, she drew a line to represent the front of the house and a half circle to represent the driveway and made a dot. "There, if you see what I meant—she was just about there."

HER dot was at the spot where the pistol had been found.

"And she was stooping down when you saw her," the captain prompted. "Then what did she do?"

"Well, she straightened up just about as soon as I saw her," Mrs. Littleton went on. "I mean, as near as I can remember it, she was straightening up when I saw her. And she stepped out on the sidewalk, just a step, or a half step. She started west, you know, toward Fifth avenue, and then a cab at the curb gave a little toot. You see, captain, this cab was waiting at the curb here." She laid a finger on the diagram. "It was at the curb just east of the driveway, and she came out on the sidewalk and started west. Then the cab gave a little toot and she turned round and saw it and went over and got in.

"You see, captain, this cab must have been waiting for her; she must have told it to wait for her, only, the way I make it out, she thought it would be at the curb west of the driveway and so started in that direction. And then the cab driver saw her and gave a little toot to call her attention, and she turned round and saw her cab and went over to it."

"No doubt," said the captain. "Did she see you?"

She considered that an instant and answered: "Why, I don't know, but I don't believe she did. It was so snowy, you know, and she was in a hurry. She didn't stop at all, just started west and heard the toot and turned round and ran to the cab and got in, if you know what I mean, going right along, you see, in a hurry. And I was over near the building. I don't believe she saw me at all."

"Did you notice the cab?"

"I noticed it was a black and white taxi."

"How good a look did you get at the woman? Would you recognize her if you saw her again?"

Mrs. Littleton considered. "I've been wondering myself whether I would. There wasn't much light, and the snow, too. Only when she went over to the cab I was right opposite her. The cab driver had reached round, you know, and opened the door for her. And then I did get—well, a look at her; kind of a sidewise look—profile. Seems to me I would know her if I saw her again, but maybe I wouldn't. I couldn't be sure. She was wearing a loose dark coat—maybe black or dark blue or brown—and a cloth hat. She had dark hair." She hesitated a moment.

"You see, captain, she did kind of attract my attention, I mean more than just casually noticing a person. That was because I saw her coming out of Mr. Othman's house, or I thought she must have come out of his house. Everybody heard stories about Mr. Othman, you know; the house was a sort of mystery. So I had some curiosity about this woman. I know I thought 'that woman is not a servant'—the way she carried herself and so on. Maybe it was the way she moved that made me think she was young and then, from what I saw of her face, she must be a pretty woman. All around, you see, it made me sort of curious. I noticed her more than you would notice a person you passed in the street in a casual way. I almost think I might recognize her, but I couldn't be sure until I tried it."

"And this, you think, must have been fifteen or twenty minutes past seven?"

"It must have been about then," she replied. That was about the moment of the murder as reported in the newspapers. "So it seemed that I ought to tell you, but I hope I can keep out of the papers."

"I rather think you can, Mrs. Littleton," Welbasky assured her. "And we're much obliged to you. I can reach you at your shop by telephone almost any time?"

"O, any time," she replied.

With rather unwonted gallantry the thin captain showed his plump little caller out, and immediately set to work on her story, or rather on the woman herself. In the first place the police records contained nothing against her. The police district in which the Kingsel apartment building was located knew nothing against her. The agent of the building gave her an excellent reputation.

In fine, Mrs. Littleton was an eminently credible witness; and her story was of the utmost importance because nobody, excepting a few policemen, knew that the murder gun had been discovered at the spot where Mrs. Littleton said she saw a young woman stoop down. Only one question remained, Was the young woman who stooped down there Flora Marsden? In a way this new witness took the affair out of Welbasky's hands. That is, no self-respecting policeman could pause now until he had an answer to that final question.

Following Spring Fashion Around the Clock

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK. — (Special Correspondence.)— Taking liberties with Robert Louis Stevenson, we may remark in beginning that "this spring is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be troubled as kings."

Such a dirge is especially applicable to the provinx of fashion. Every day new modes are coming out, and when we approach the task of replacing our winter wardrobes with spring creations we are apt to get into a state of coma. How select any one particular mode from all the mob scene besieging us? The temptation is to leave the shop with a weary, "O, well, after all, I've got my last year's crepe (or twill or satin). Why don't I just make that do?

To those about to succumb to that temptation, one must say a few harsh, bracing words. Last year's things will not do—not generally speaking and certainly not without considerable revision. For, although the silhouette remains much the same, there are certain sharply defined tendencies in fashion which make this season a distinctive one.

Taking up these changes in a systematic around the clock fashion, let us start with the suit. Last year it didn't matter a bit if we had one and this year we can, if necessary, forego our tailleur in favor of the more obligatory utility frock and separate coat. Yet if we do so today we are apt to feel lonesome. For this spring we are playing no trump but suit.

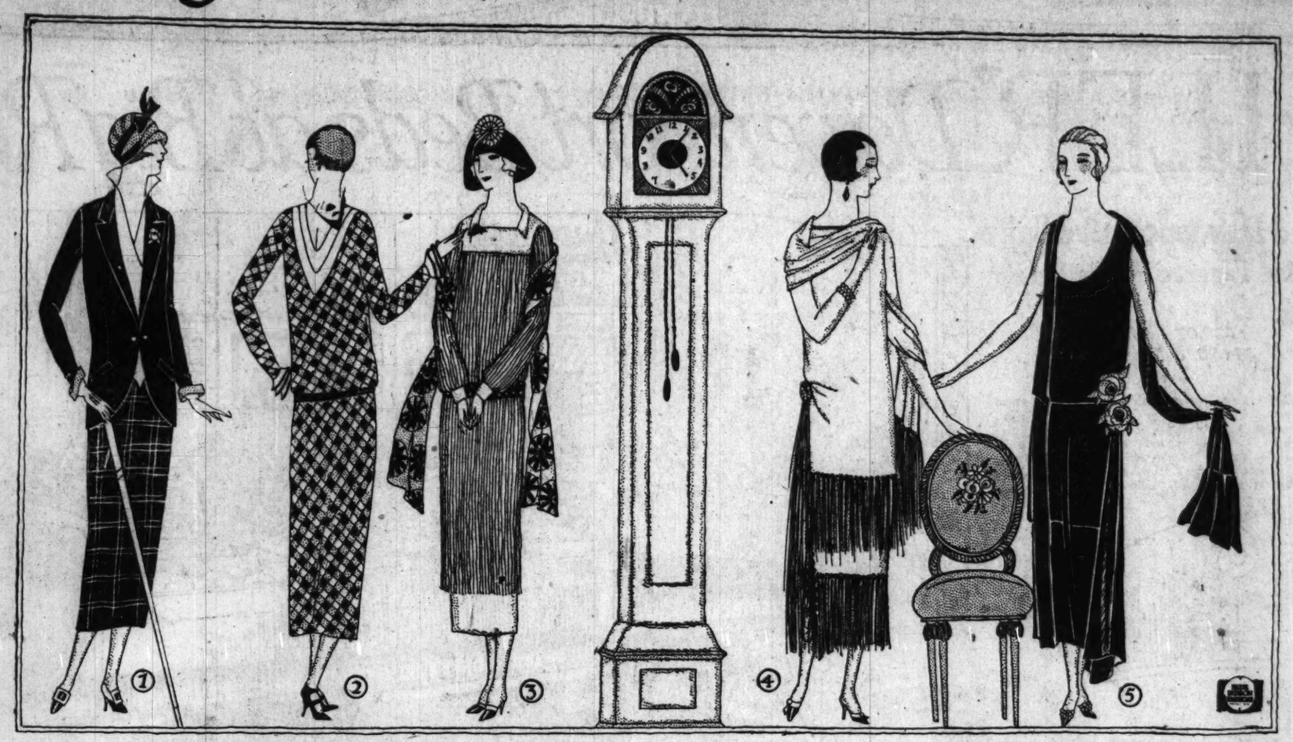
I am happy to say the present trend of suits is away from that mannish sack coat which overran our shops earlier in the season.

In taking a suit census recently at a certain fashionable lunching resort it seemed to me every ultra-smart woman present had chosen for her suit a jacket with a curved waist line. Since this type is infinitely more becoming than the masculine straight line, those cynical spirits who see in fashion only the preservation of the homeliest and most trying modes are getting something of a rebuff. Occasionally we do drift toward beauty—even in these days of chic.

There is another tendency observable in suits. Although the majority of the models display a preference for one material, it is decidedly smart at present to give jacket and skirt a separate vote. The checked skirt with the jacket of plain cloth—here is a note of fashion emphasized by both Paris and New York suit inventors. Another experiment in this field lies with the striped skirt and plain colored coat. One of the New York tailors whose fame has spread all over our continent has indorsed this latter combination in some especially striking examples in which an extra effect is obtained by ingenuity of stripe arrangement.

I am showing the suit with checked skirt and plain colored jacket at the left of the page. It is finished by a waistcoat of white pique, and the jacket complementing this gilet represents that curve at the waist representative of our second thoughts about the mannish tailleur.

One cannot do better by fashion than to start off the day with a suit of this character. Side by side with it, however, must be considered the little general utility frock of wool. In a previous letter I have spoken at length of this type of frock, and so here I suggest the theme merely by that smart little costume second from the left.



Indeed, yes, this frock may be of plain color! But more and more as days go by fashion keeps checking in. Especially smart are both wool and alpaca models executed in black and white check designs. However, it is difficult to particularize in a season when so many moods lead checkward.

Here in this suit and frock are two suggestions for the practical hours of every woman's day. Still a third occurs in the center model, for although the white in which this crepe is shown restricts it to the morning and luncheon hours at a resort, its general style encourages a duplication in black, beige, gray, or any other of the tones identified with city wear.

Just as it is, with its charming play of plaits and tunic, its red suede belt, and inevitable scarf, the model is rich in summer fashion lore. For the white crepe de chine frock of simplest line will be one of the most insistent notes of morning wear at the resorts. The touch of red is exceedingly good. Indeed, those who spent last winter on the Riviera have come back with tales of all red crepes—set off frequently by a touch of black—worn at those famous playgrounds of fashion which dot the Mediterranean. So, if you please, make this frock of red crepe and belt it in black suede. If you feel that way, you may certainly be assured of august precedents.

ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

The coats assumed for general wear have one common denominator. They are straight and slim of line and, although the wrap around movement is still evident, it has certainly surrendered much of its force. Quite apparent when we come to this domain is the fact that the back bone of winter has not been broken. Again and again there is the slim black coat. It retains, too, the narrow white collar of either ermine or white rabbit, so notable on winter productions, and it has added in some instances rows of buttons.

Navy blue is also a favorite with the coat designers, and I have seen a number of these set off with the season's popular note of red. One in blue twill placed horizontal bands of alternating black and red cire braid on its border, sleeves, and shawl collar; another in kasha distributed bands of red kasha on the turnover standing collar, down the front closing, and on the cuffs. Kasha in all tones is, by the way, a dominating factor in coats, and although one sees it most frequently in the brown and tan shades it draws no color line.

So far as wraps are concerned, it certainly is a cocoa spring. So many of the fur jacquettes which one sees nowadays are in cocoa tinted caracul. And if the body of this coat be in black caracul or black baby lamb, it is likely to atone for such waywardness of selection by trimmings of beige fur. This, of course, is not a universal procedure. For it must be remembered that the combination of black and white rages quite as strongly as ever, and even the ubiquitous cocoa tint does not exceed in smartness the jacquette of inky pelt trimmed with white.

When it comes to the fur scarf, our preference still seems to lie with what I have always called the caterpillar mode. That is to say, the one or two skin version of mink or sable—so reminiscent of the furry brown caterpillar—continues to entwine the throat above tailleur or petite robe. Yet there is a sufficient revolt against this bromidic selection to make things interesting. If you have a stole of handsome fur, don't think of throwing it away. For the other day I saw one of New York's most exclusive women with a good old fashioned stole knotted about the shoulders of her suit. Also, many of our fashionable women eschew the homeopathic one of two skin in favor of many tailed fur creations—real adult doses of fur.

It cannot be too strongly urged that this is a year of accessories. It is a case of the star's being eclipsed by the chorus, and many a frock of today is born to blush unseen because of the more arresting qualities of the details which complete it. Shoes, hat, stockings, jewelry, the scarf, gloves—unless they come in proper form, the play of fashion is marred.

Now as to shoes. Those which we select to wear with tailleur or general wear frock are absolute tories. They haven't one drop of radical sentiment about them. Gone are the straps and other frills of yesteryear. We wear patent leather, dull leather, and suede—perhaps alligator—in plain, colonial, or one strap pump. Buckles are often added, and sometimes the familiar perforations grace the tops of the pump. Sometimes, too, combinations of leather and suede are encountered.

The hat which one wears with the tailleur or petite robe is a small pert thing which usually gains its style point through the use of the bow. The high crowned Directoire modification, some version of the cloche, the tricorne, the turban—all have their delegates in the field. Black hats of either straw or satin or in a combination of fabric and straw prevail, but colors are represented, and just now there seems to be more than an impulse toward blue Milan.

As the clock moves on toward afternoon, we have a wide variety of models from which to choose. The period mode with its fitted bodice and full skirt competes here with some version of the tubular silhouette. In both styles, the flounce, the scarf, the cape, plaits, and fringe are the most familiar phenomena. On this page our model for afternoon wear concerns itself mainly with pointing out the extremely popular fashion of fringe. Let it be said right here that this form of decoration is no joiner. Instead of identifying itself with any special group of clothes, it associates with everything from sports wear to evening clothes. As an evidence of its laxity, there are the fringed scarves hobnobbing with plainest little tailored frocks.

For the evening hours, we have chosen from infinite numbers this crepe gown with foundation of crepe Isolde. Here it occurs in black, but the same model may be carried out in white or in color. In any rendition it will preserve the long drapery at the left side balanced by the distinctive feature of this creation—that long strand of self material which, attached to the hem, traverses the two tier skirt and the bodice until it arrives at its ultimate goal—that long scarf edged with a flounce. This scarf continuation theme is decidedly novel and most decidedly deft.

The New Youth

Is It to Be Procured Through Medical Science? Or Is It, Rather, the Portion of Her Who Isn't Afraid of Work?

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Fuzz on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I know a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is something pathetic to me in this mad scramble of women to conceal all the ravages of the years through recourse to medical science.

What is there to look forward to in life if at 50 you are to be assigned to the emotions of youthful pranks by rejuvenating processes? If women feel the drag of years that hard, we have a notion that the new bloom, if there be one at all, will be but a momentary thing. Perhaps Daudet's story of "The Nabob" has prejudiced our mind. You remember how the same ware struck old men and superannuated women in the Paris of the Third empire; how these Paris fashionables wished to forego the dignities of a half century for the giddy twenties, and how the use of pills prescribed in that era gave an artificial bloom but hastened the inevitable dissolution.

Novel Rouses Interest.

Gertrude Atherton's more recent disclosure of one Countess Zattiany, a woman who, at 57, attempted to turn back the pages of life, undoubtedly has given impetus to the hundreds of women who seek to park their fifty-odd in some medical operating room. In spite of the fact that the countess' world old wisdom written in her eyes gave the lie to the youthful figure, the mere suggestion has reawakened hope in the breasts of those who see only in the joy of living the capers of childhood.

We realize fully that science is capable of amazing things. We realize there may be just claim in the virtues of restoring vitality by scientific measures to humans who have begun to droop. We would not set ourselves, in our limited capacity, against the word of men of standing in the medical profession.

And, what is more, we can hardly censure discouraged women whose sagging energy threatens their means of existence and who read of restorative cures and seek the sources thereof.

Seeks No Publicity.

Perhaps we even waver in our judgment when we read, as we have recently, of one New York physician who makes no extravagant claims, who refuses to be interviewed, but reports his experiences in rejuvenating work to the New York Academy of Medicine for men of his own profession to judge.

This man is a specialist in glandular treatment and has devoted much time to the study of the restoration processes. We hear, too, of the work of Dr. Steinach and Dr. Holzknecht of Vienna and Dr. Fraenkel in Berlin. Of the work of these latter men, naturally we laymen depend upon hearsay rather than actual facts. Nevertheless, we admit there may be something to these treatments worthy of sober consideration. The more gullible may believe we are on the eve of eternal prolongation of life for all, if that is our idea of serving happily our sentence upon earth.

But youth in a body being a thing of the spirit which in turn governs the muscles and the arteries and the brain organization, we wonder why more women, if the urge to remain young is what recent disclosure proves it to be, don't put their faith in docturing up the spirit rather than glandular treatment.

It is not claimed, by this New York medical man, at least, that the treatment restores the silver threads in dark hair to their original color. No claim is made that the generative function is restored. Wrinkles are not guaranteed to be ironed out. A quickening of the physical and nervous system, better bodily function, and firmer flesh are claimed. A bonus of vitality, eagerness, and some of the joy of living is thrown in.

It is claimed that the treatment fattens; consequently serves the thin and nervous woman better than fair, plump, and 50 who may be just as full of girlish longings.

When you boil down the claims it looks as though they arrive at the principle of a tonic, a temporary aid. How lasting it is has yet to be proven, but ten years is the duration popularly granted.

It won't restore absolute youth. It won't make a 40 year old woman look like 18. There is no assumption that grandma will ever be mistaken for her flapper grandchild.

Activity Her Recipe.

But here's our point of argument: Gertrude Atherton, whose novel on the theme set women to hoping they could wear their own wedding gowns to their grandchildren's weddings, is 67 years old. She appears to be in her 40s. And she has never had gland transplantation nor the X-ray treatment, the two measures recommended to restore the early profile. She admits in an interview she would take it with enthusiasm if she needed it. But, fortunately, she has always had an enormous amount of vitality, she says, which has shown no signs of failing yet, as you may well believe when you remember her best seller book on the subject was published when she was 66, following a life of constant activity.

Again, here is Ernestine Schumann-Heink, mother of eight children, and one of the greatest known contraltos, at 63 still delighting the world of music lovers with her songs, admitting she hopes to go on until she is 100, giving work as the secret of her eternally youthful spirit. "Work is my life," she says, "I am 63 and I have worked without pause since 16."

Here, still again, is Miss Carrie Foster, with a fifty-six year record in the business of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, at her desk every morning, vigorous, smartly dressed, radiating youth and enthusiasm, advising sleep and work as the key to her significant person.

We Recommend Work.

One could go on ad infinitum with names of women of 50, 60, even 70, who make the Countess Zattiany the fiction that she is in youth, vitality, energy, and beauty.

The women who are running to the operating rooms are not the women who have builded energy out of work, out of daily interest. They are for most part women who have always sought the easiest way of getting through life. They are not the women of large family or the women who have actively presided over homes, or exercised their vitality in big accomplishments outside the home.

The youngest women of 50 and 60 are the women whose brains have been busy, and whose hands have been busy, and whose feet are not opposed to carrying them around on the day's errands.

If women are honestly seeking the thing that prevents periods of senescence in later life, failing memory, aches and pains, we recommend the trite but never failing youth prolonger—work.

Beauty Answers

SPRINGTIME: A 25 PER CENT solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water will relieve excessive perspiration. Apply it twice a week until you see improvement, which ought to be almost right away, and then once a week or once in ten days to prevent a return of the trouble. Do not overdo the applications. To some sensitive skins this may be a little irritating, in which event a little water should be splashed under the arms before applying the formula.

MRS. G. K.: FIVE FEET SEVEN and 24 years call for 127 pounds. How do you measure up? If you are in need of flesh or would like to shed some, let me know and I will send you the secrets of the perfectly symmetrical form. A girl of 14 who is 60 inches tall should weigh 100 even pounds.

MISERABLE: YOU JUST HURRY along your little old stamped, addressed envelope and we will hurry back to you remedies for your several foot troubles, the corns, the blisters, callouses and perspiring feet.

BEBE: DRINKING COLD WATER before eating warm food at mealtime is found to disagree with many people. Drink the water after the food is partaken—and between meals.

A New Way to Tell Your Fortune

BY NAPOLEON'S BOOK OF FATE

Thirty-first Grand Question of Life.

Shall I Spend This Year Happier than the Last?

HOW TO GET YOUR OWN ANSWER.

Fix in your mind the question, to the exclusion of all other things. Then, thinking of it alone, with pen or pencil, set down five rows of upright or inclined lines in the following manner:

taking care, but not consciously so, that each row contains more than twelve such lines, in respect of the number of the signs of the zodiac.

That is, you must not count the lines in each row as you make them, but you must abstractedly guide pen or pencil across the paper, so that the number of lines in each of the five rows, while more than twelve, shall be entirely without design so far as you yourself are consciously aware.

Having thus set down the five rows, you then count the lines in each row, to learn whether the number is odd or even.

Perhaps the count will show the first line to be odd, the second and third even, the fourth odd, the fifth even; you then belong to the sign of odd, two even, odd, and even.

But no matter what your five lines show as to odd or even, beginning with the first line and going down, there is an answer to the grand question of life that is meant especially for you.

You will find the answer you seek under the sign of your particular combination of lines of odd and even.

THE ORACLE'S ANSWERS.

If you belong to the sign of:

Five Odd: "Peace and plenty will be thy certain portion if thou art industrious."

Even, Four Odd: "There is every prospect of happiness for thee."

Odd, Even, Three Odd: "Prosperity awaits thee."

Two Odd, Even, Two Odd: "The harvest of plenty and happiness is ready; thou must reap it with the sickle of industry."

Three Odd, Even, Odd: "Let not thy exertions lag and thou wilt be prosperous."

Four Odd, Even: "Fail not by persevering industry to fill thy barns with grain and thy purse with money, in case of need."

Two Even, Three Odd: "Thy future happiness depends upon thyself."

Odd, Two Even, Two Odd: "Place not thy happiness in store of gold and silver; but in all thy dealing preserve thy conscience pure and undefiled."

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Haley's Magnesia-Oil the scientific way to fight Acidosis and Constipation

If you are afflicted with sour stomach, have chronic indigestion; if your breath is bad and you suffer with heartburn—remember these are Nature's warnings that you must help her fight Acidosis.

Most of us eat too much and exercise too little. That means poor digestion—too much acid in the stomach. Acidosis, the name science gives to this condition, is the forerunner of 75% of all sickness. Don't let Acidosis get you in its grip.

Science Discovers New Way to Bring Relief

Physicians have long recommended milk of magnesia as the safe neutralizer of stomach acids. But milk of magnesia unaided was not enough to win the fight against Acidosis. Another co-agent was needed to help the body cast off waste poisons quickly.

The need for this agent led to the discovery of a scientific method of emulsifying milk of magnesia and pure mineral oil.

Haley's Magnesia-Oil is the name of this wonderful new discovery. It acts quickly and brings welcome relief. The milk of magnesia counteracts the harmful poisons and the mineral oil, by lubrication, brings about easy, natural elimination.

Haleys' Magnesia-Oil is absolutely harmless, It may be given to infants, mixed with their milk, without the slightest danger. Your own doctor will recommend Haley's if you ask him. Stop at your druggist's today and get a bottle. Trial size, 35c; economical family size, $1.00.

Our Children and Morals by DORIS BLAKE

Scientific Tests Show Startling Results of Educational Progress That Eliminates Religious Training

THE beginnings of financial and moral laxity, illustrated in a test given school children, is exposed by William G. Shepherd, journalist and author, in a current magazine article.

Mr. Shepherd tells us that scientific tests show that our children are pitifully weak under the stress of temptation. He attacks the root of adult crookedness.

Why a knowledge of Greek and Roman gods is part of a necessary course in education, why geography and the history of pagan faiths are requirements for graduation, and the God of Christianity is left out of the curriculum is the question at issue.

Statistics compiled in Indiana show that comparatively few children go to Sunday school and that the religious training in a year is twelve hours. Some, of course, receive additional training at their mothers' knees, but as a vast number receive none at all.

Moral Training Ignored.

It is protested that it is the business of the public school to teach the child the plain and simple morals of everyday living; to teach him that it is as sinful to cheat a storekeeper or a railroad company as a friend, as sinful to steal from the rich as from the poor.

Mr. Shepherd tells that the facts prove there is no place in America to which a parent can send his children and keep them within the limits of democracy where they will receive instruction in religion and morals.

"Religion and morals, somehow," it is charged, "have dropped out along the road in our educational progress."

Mr. Shepherd's tests show that more than one-half of our school children will, under temptation, have an unethical outlook on life; that under temptation more than half of them will lie and cheat and steal. These tests, we are told, were conducted scientifically.

True-False Test.

The true-false test was applied to thousands of children in the United States. After each statement given to test the child's moral viewpoint were printed the words "True, False," and the child was asked to underline the word which he believed described the statement. The viewpoint presented by some children follows:

"It is not wrong to steal from one who has secured his wealth dishonestly."

"It is more honorable to have charge of an office than to work at a trade."

"Stupidity is more sinful than deceit."

"Unnecessarily failing to meet an appointment on time is not immoral or un-Christian."

"It is true that our duty is greater to secure justice for the people of our own race and religion than for others."

"Cheating a railroad is not so much a sin as cheating a person."

"It is not the pupil's duty to call attention to the fact that a teacher has given him too high marks."

"It is true that if a storekeeper gives you too much money it is all right to keep it, because he would probably do the same if you paid him too much."

Thousands of American children, we are told, assented to these statements when they had an equal opportunity to dissent by merely making a mark with a lead pencil. Nothing in the way of instruction in school or home inspired them to answer otherwise, we must assume.

The Purchasing Test.

Another test tried children with the temptation to be dishonest, called "the purchasing test." A shopkeeper who had been taken into the confidence of the examiners gave the child purchasers a dime too much in change. Sixty-four per cent of the children did not return the dime. The scientists who made the test, it is insisted, made their selection of the children so carefully that they feel safe in assuming that 64 per cent of all America's children would have done as these children did.

In another test children were taken into cafeterias where they could select their own food. They were expected to make a report of how much food they had bought. Not half of them reported honestly.

The tests were ingeniously disguised. In one city a test was given in a restaurant where the children thought they were giving a banquet for the restaurant keeper, who some weeks before had made a gift to their school organization. Every child brought a certain amount of money to pay for his share of the banquet. At the conclusion of the banquet it was announced privately to each child that the cost was less than had been expected. The children were supposed to return the excess to their school organization. This test involved not only honesty but gratitude to the restaurant keeper and loyalty to the school organization. Only a small percentage of the children returned the money.

One Hundred Per Cent Imperfect.

A test to see how children would cheat in examinations was made. The temptation to cheat was provided, and in some of these tests, we are told, 100 per cent of the children yielded.

Character tests were designed to determine whether children would overpraise themselves or allow themselves unearned credit. Scores were given in every test, and strength of character and the ability to resist temptation were expressed in terms of percentages, as engineers express the strength of steel. The highest score made was 82.3 per cent, by a group of Boy Scouts which had been organized two years. The second highest score was 80.4 per cent, made by a group of Boy Scouts six months organized. The third highest score was 78.2, made by a group of boys in a highly efficient private school, who came from high class families. The boys in a group from a typical American public school came away down the list with a percentage of 56.8.

Honesty a Luxury.

"Are our public schools in America," asks the writer, "being so conducted that honesty and the development of character in our children are luxuries outside of the range of these schools? Is a belief in God, such as the Boy Scouts have, and the Girl Scouts, and such as is taught in most private schools in America, too rare a privilege for American public school children?"

A joint meeting of Catholics, Protestants and Jews, recently held in New York, the first of its kind, held that religious instruction should be outside the school, and that each child should be instructed in the faith of its parents.

That our whole social structure will be as the house built on sand, without the virtues born of spiritual training, is being recognized by educators and is one of the most cheering signs of the times.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

They're Strange Creatures.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a fellow for almost a year now, and I care a great deal for him. He has told me he cares for me more than any one else. I usually see him three nights every week, except an occasional Saturday when he has to work. Last Saturday he called me up and told me as he had to work late, he would not be over, and he was sorry he could not come. Of course I believed him, since I have met him coming home from work on Saturday evenings at 10 o'clock. I know he comes from work on account of the clothing he has to wear for the position he holds.

"Sunday night he came as usual, and the first thing he asked me was where I had been the previous evening. This is a thing he never asked me before, as he has told me he trusts me more than anything else. It aroused my suspicions, so I wouldn't tell him. He said he would tell me where he had been. I told him I really didn't think it was any of my business.

"Well, he told me he had been to a roadhouse and with the most notorious girl in our neighborhood. O, but that sure was a blow to me! When I found out he had lied I let go of my temper. I told him I was surprised that he invaded such places and with such an indecent girl. I also told him no decent girl would go with any fellow to such a place, and he laughed. I called him a liar for having told me he worked when he really was out with another girl. Why must people lie? A lie hurts more than the truth. The answer I got was, 'A poor excuse is better than none.'

"I remained silent the rest of the evening, but that night when we got to my home he told me he knew it was wrong for him to have gone out with another girl when he cared for me. He said it was the first time he ever did. But one lie succeeds another. Don't you think he is apt to repeat?

"When another fellow asks me for a dance he just flares up at me and gets angry, but when he dances with another girl it is perfectly all right. Do you think he cares for me, or am I just a plaything? BLUE EYES."

Men are strange creatures sometimes, Blue Eyes. Sometimes and often they are! If you confessed you had been somewhere with a notorious young man, he would leave the house in high dudgeon and in all probability with his faith in you so shattered he never would return. I have never had much use for men who come making confessions like that to a girl to whom it must mean the destruction of ideals and hopes. It shows weakness and selfishness. Perhaps he does care for you and his idea of righting a wrong is to confess it, but if you do not forgive him he will repeat his offense and go sliding down the hill. But the question is whether he is worth reclaiming, and that is up to you, who knows him better than I.

Sounds Like Wedding Bells.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a young man I have known only as a friend for some time, and I must admit I care a great deal about him when he is not near. Although I love him when he is near I just cannot show him my inner thoughts.

"My parents hope that some day I may become his wife, as his parents and mine used to pal around when they were but mere children. He is the same nationality as I. His folks rather seem to like me and so do his sisters.

"Lately he has been attracting my attention more than ever. Not long ago I went to a masquerade ball which he attended. That night was the first time I had been alone with him, and he told me he loved me. I asked him how he had come to the conclusion so suddenly, and his reply was, "Well, you see, dear, I never had a chance to show you I really cared." He also said or rather asked me if I didn't care for him just a wee bit.

"Do you think I ought to give this fellow his chance to show he cares? Recently he has been coming to my home and wishes to take me out.

"I love him dearly but do not know just whether he loves me truly enough or not. How can I find out his feelings towards me? When at a dance he never seems to want to dance with any one but me. PEGGY."

Well, Peggy dear, it appears to me you have no problem at all. What more must you hear before you are convinced the boy cares? It seems to me he has said a-plenty. What more can he do than to ask you for every dance, ask to take you out? I guess, dear, you are just in love and want to talk about it, now, aren't you? That is quite all right with me, because I like to hear about these young love affairs that have the family approval and all that. I can hear the wedding bells already for you—that is, if you don't weary him by making him repeat too often the assurance of his love.

Kind Boys Like.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 15 and would like to have this question answered. What kind of girls attract boys most? BLUE EYES."

What kind of girls attract boys most, Blue Eyes? All kinds of girls attract all kinds of men, don't they? But, generally speaking, the girl who holds the man is the one who keeps herself looking nicely, makes him think he is just a little bit nicer and smarter than all the other boys, who is never vulgar or coarse in word or deed, and who has a sunny disposition.

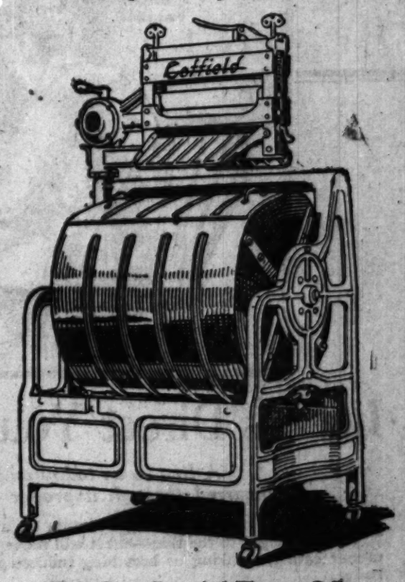
Coffield Washer

THE NEW MODEL

$145

Sold on Extended Payments $2 Down, a Year to Pay

YOU need pay only $2 down—think of it! And we will place one of these wonderful "carefree" washers in your home. We go even further—and guarantee perfect satisfaction.



This Is a Special Term Offer

The Coffield Is a "Carefree" Washer Because—

IT has no complicated mechanism. There is nothing in the tub to lift out or replace. Just a big, round copper tub that noiselessly rocks back and forth, thereby forcing the water thru the clothes so vigorously that they are cleaned quickly and without effort.

THERE is nothing to oil. The Coffield has self lubricating, rust-proof bearings, so housed that no surface oil can possibly streak your clothes.

AND there isn't anything to clean—by its own water action the inside of the tub is self cleaned.

THEREFORE, is it any wonder that the thousands of women who use the Coffield call it the "Carefree" washer? At these low terms you should not fail to come in and purchase a Coffield.

Smiley-Wileys

A Smiley-Wiley is a single of two lines. Any funny little rhyme that will make folks laugh is a Smiley-Wiley. For instance:

May your path be filled with roses
And your kids have turned up noses.

You can probably write a better one than that. If so, do it and mail it to the Smiley-Wiley Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. The Tribune will pay $10 daily for the best one published, $5 for the next best, $3 for the third, $2 for the fourth, and $1 for each additional one. No manuscripts returned.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Patterns by Clotilde

1685—Woman's house dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50 inches bust measure. Size 40 requires 2¾ yards of 54 inch material, with 1 yard of 36 inch contrasting and 3 yards of binding.

1681—Boy's suit. Sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. Size 4 requires 1½ yards of 36 inch material.

2067—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1⅞ yards of 40 or 44 inch material, 1¾ yards of 40 inch contrasting, and 2⅛ yards of edging.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

A FROCK showing straight lines like pattern No. 1,685 is ideal for the large figure, and the slender one as well. The dress is cut in two pieces—front and back—and there is an inset front panel—the sash or belt starting from this panel on each side of the front and tying in the back—if it is a sash—or fastening on the left side, if it is a belt.

There are one piece sleeves, perforated for a three-quarters length, and finished with turned back cuffs; or full length ones set into narrow wristbands.

The collar is seamed in the middle of the back, and tapers down to nothing where it ends at the top of the belt.

For size 40 the skirt measures at the bottom about 1⅞ yards. This design would make up attractively in any of the lovely wash materials, and would be just the thing to wear at home. Mercerized cotton poplin in a becoming color would be pretty with some embroidered design across the band on the top of the front panel and on the tops of the pockets and cuffs. Percale, gingham, or chambray would be good, too. Organdy or linen or checked gingham would make pretty collar, cuffs, and bands across the pockets and front panel.

It is always a wise precaution in using a pattern to compare carefully the principal measures with one's own, for women having the same bust measure may find some of the other lengths and widths will vary.

This design would make up attractively in one of the expensive materials. Satin crêpe, for instance, would make a beautiful dress. The satin side could be used for the panel and trimmings and the crêpe for the dress, or the other way around. One of the woolens, such as wool crepe or jersey, with something contrasting for the panel and trimmings would be effective and good looking.

Pattern No. 1681 is an ideal design for a boy's play suit. Of course, it should be made loose everywhere so that no strain or binding sensation will be felt. The upper edge of the trousers across the back is gathered and set into a belt, which slips through straps in the front, and buttons. The front of the trousers and waist are in one piece. The two small pockets on the waist will be certain to meet with a boy's approval, and the manner of finishing the neck of the waist is both good looking and comfortable. Sleeves may be made long or short, but probably most mothers will decide that the short sleeves will make for comfort.

For tiny boys chambray, trimmed with pin checked gingham, will be pretty. Pongee or mercerized cotton poplin will be suitable for the young or older boys.

Pattern No. 2067 is a design for a morning dress. The front is slashed, faced, and rolled back, showing an inset vest. The short kimono sleeves are seamed on the shoulders and finished with turned back cuffs. The one piece skirt is attached at a low waist line. The width at the lower edge, for size 36, is about 1¼ yards.

Two materials will make up more prettily than one, and one attractive feature of the dress is having two sash ends tied at the sides of the dress, the sash slipping through slashes cut in the waist. This confines the fullness prettily and gives a dressy, jaunty air to the dress. Women never look more attractive than in immaculate, prettily made wash dresses.

Let Us Direct Your Diet by Mail

A line to us today will end many ills incurred through improper eating and drinking

NOT only will proper dieting maintain an attractive figure—reducing obesity or adding weight to the thin—but it will prove the remedy for many serious ills. Improper eating, drinking or breathing induces practically every disease of the human body.

Most of us will acknowledge that rickets results from faulty nutrition and is curable through the right kind of food. Scurvy, inanition, gout and many more, we will agree, come from errors in diet. If, then, a few diseases are placed at the door of food, does it not stand to reason that many more may be caused by the same thing? And it is so.

Absolutely Different!

Our course of treatment is based upon the use of natural foods, unchanged by the hand of man chemically. No person has ever been able to beat the Lord, but by working hand in hand with Nature the body will take away those things which it has produced—called disease. It costs nothing to investigate.

We Are Food Experts

Our researches of eleven years have proven to us that every disease of the human body, barring accidents, is caused by what we eat, drink or breathe. Every tissue, gland, organ, or part is constructed of certain elements which we derive from our food, water and air. It is the lack of these necessary elements which cause ill health.

Rheumatism, arthritis, chronic stomach and intestinal disorders, pelvic conditions, goitre, paralysis from apoplexy and other types, and on through the entire list, will respond to correct eating, drinking and breathing.

Our Home Direction

If you are living outside of Chicago we are offering you the advantage of our extensive experience, and through the direction of your case at home we will restore you to health and to attractive bodily proportions. We will carefully direct what you shall eat to overcome the disease or condition now present. Exercises to aid the elimination of the disease will be given.

Moderate charges are made upon monthly basis. Further particulars may be had upon application.

Golden Days of sunlight for babies who have Lloyds

Wholesome, happy outdoor hours—how much health they mean to your baby! And how you yourself will look forward to them if you have a handsome Lloyd Loom Carriage in which to exhibit the baby to an admiring world! The beauty of line, flawless weaving, rich finish and harmonizing upholstery of this carriage are a fitting setting for the precious bit of humanity who rides in it.

Spiral weaving, on the patented Lloyd Loom, gives this carriage its distinctive appearance, which no other carriage can have. By a remarkable weaving method, a single, continuous strand of finest wicker is fashioned into a graceful bowl shape, without seams, corners or pieced short ends of wicker. This exclusive weaving method, thirty times as fast as hand weaving, also cuts costs amazingly—permits every refinement of finish without adding to the price. Ask your dealer to show you Lloyd Loom Carriages. Look for the Lloyd name plate on the seat. Lloyd Loom Furniture and Doll Carriages are also made by the same spiral weaving process.

You Must Read the Startling New Novel
By the Author of
"FLAMING YOUTH"

"SAILORS' WIVES"

By Warner Fabian

Derr Manning

"Flaming Youth" took the country by storm. As a vivid picture of reckless, modern youth it made the public gasp. Millions read the book—millions were entranced by the moving picture.

And now again Mr. Fabian sweeps convention aside in another breath-taking story—"SAILORS' WIVES." Here is an even more daring revelation of modern life, proving that the risky game of "playing with fire" is not confined to flappers but exists in even more dangerous form among a certain set of young married couples. This stupendous story starts in the Second May Issue of

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

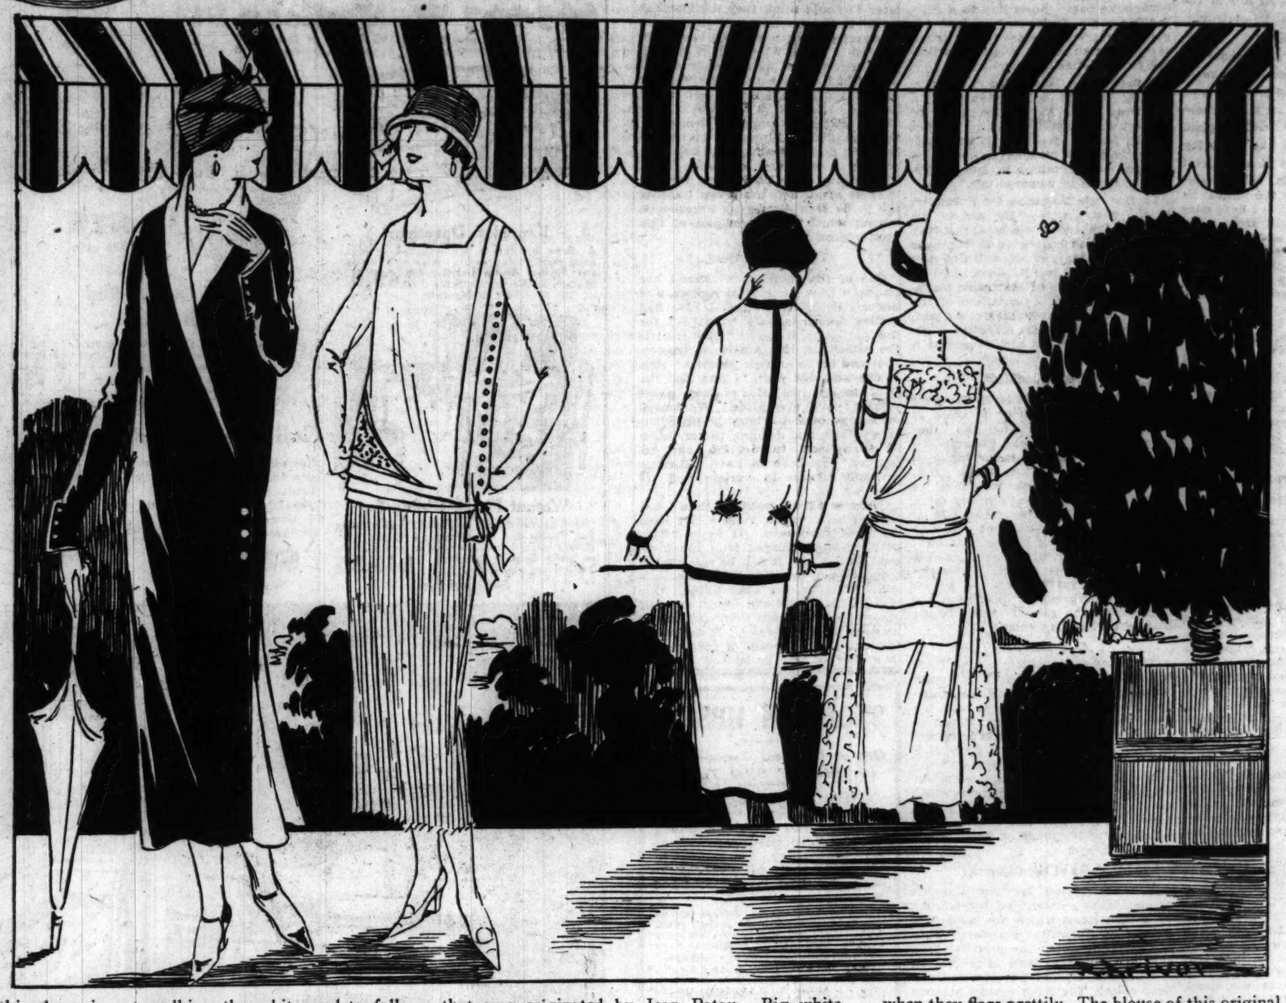
By Bettina Bedwell

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Watch the anti-prohibitionist as he saunters down the boulevard. See how, apparently, he is treading the straight and narrow path prescribed by Volstead. Then observe, also, how the slight bulge on the hip betrays the presence of refreshment and departure from the circumscribed way of the Drys, and you have the answer to the fashionable riddle this spring.

At the late Paris openings, which are now in progress, we all sit around and observe the mannequins as they pass, presenting the straight, narrow silhouette with which we have become so familiar. Apparently, in most cases, there is nothing to break the slim line, and the casual observer may rush out with the bored thought, "Same old thing—absolutely nothing new." But it is at this point that fashion has the laugh on you if you take your superficial observations too seriously, for she is emulating the man with the hip flask, and carrying plenty of comfortable, refreshing fullness, but concealing it so cleverly that we are in appearance the same slim, sylphlike figures as last season, with an added freedom of limbs which comes from plaits and godets unobtrusively and ingeniously arranged.

The rule is, therefore, make your hem line so that there is room for ampler movement, but keep it concealed so far as the line of your silhouette is concerned. Gone are the flaring circular godets which were so stressed a short time ago. The new godet is a chastened and meek bit of circular movement, and it is neither stiffened by braid nor made of material having much body. Crepe de chine, which is as clinging as chiffon, is the favorite material for the restricted circular movement on spring clothes, and this material will lie flat under practically all circumstances.

Take, as an example, the first figure of our sketch, at the left, which shows a new Paris street dress, for the coming warm days when a coat may be discarded. This dress is cut in a straight, narrow tube, but beginning at the right side, half way between the hips and the knees, two circular godets are set in the skirt. The material of the dress is alpaca, in the new silky weave called tussalga, which is quite a firm fabric, but the godets are made of white crepe de chine, to insure their non-resistance to the straight lines of the gown. These godets are set on either side of a two inch band of the alpaca, which extends from the low waist line on the side to the hem line. When the wearer of this dress is not walking the white godets fall in folds so they are scarcely more than slits. The surplice collar is of white crepe de chine, and has another collar of the same material placed over the first, around the neck. This top collar is circular. The cuffs suggest a man's stiff shirt cuffs, an idea that was originated by Jean Patou. Big white ivory buttons fasten the cuffs and the dress at the left hip.



The second figure from the left shows flat plaits, which are deep, making the entire skirt. They retain the absolutely straight line except in walking when they flare prettily. The blouse of this original sports model has its ample side movement arranged in two deep plaits from the left shoulder in front and back. It fastens by means of white pearl buttons directly under the left arm, and extending to the hip. The two wide plaits which form the girdle become sash ends, and tie on the left hip. A big triangular pocket on the right side of the blouse, embroidered in bright colored wool, forms the sole color note to the ensemble. The dress itself is of white crepe de chine.

I am always hearing it said that the French tailleur is more attractive than the American, and this because it is softer, without the severity of the American tailored suit. The artist has sketched one of the new Parisian tailleurs for you so you can decide for yourselves whether the contention is well taken. This model also illustrates the clever way in which fullness can be added to a suit without destroying the slim silhouette. The jacket without those small diamonds of tucks would be the ordinary box jacket we know, but with these as belt indications the jacket drapes gracefully above and below the waist line. The side front of the skirt, which is not visible because the wearer has turned her back, has six deep box plaits held flat by stitched bands to the knees. The material of this suit is slate colored alpaca, and the bands are black. The band down the center back of the jacket is a slenderizing device used successfully by Paris couturiers, and it takes several inches from the appearance of width of the wearer while adding to the height. If you are longing for the fashionable slenderness and have a bit too much flesh, try the vertical band reducer. It's effective.

The fourth model of our sketch is, in fact, just the pillow slip chemise dress everybody knows, but it has an up to the minute appearance because of its unique sash. Made of beige crepe romaine, this model has a yoke of beige wool lace, which is set below the shoulders in that different way which does so much to add individuality to one's clothes. I have shown the back to this model so you might see just how the sash is arranged. It is made from a half width of the beige crepe and edged with wool lace dyed to match. This lace edged length is passed across the back at the low waist line, and through two crepe loops at the sides, from which it hangs in side panels to the bottom of the skirt. It is fastened by snaps under these loops to hold it securely in place. The soft diaphanous character of the material and the lace encourage a straight silhouette, which is delightfully varied when in motion by these floating sash panels. The wide stitched band encircling the hips is another expert device for restraining avoirdupois from too evident appearance. Parisian designers are expert at this sort of thing, since the French woman generally has much larger hips than the American, and it is by such subterfuges that she gives the smartly slender appearance she has.

SOME TROPICAL FRUIT.

MIAMI. — [Special Correspondence.] — Miami [pronounce "mi" like my, "am" like the am in family, and the "i" like "e"] is probably as satisfactory a place as there is in the world to come to if you want to take a citrus fruit cure, that is, to vitaminize yourself with the juices of the orange, the lime, the tangelo, and the grape fruit. You can also satisfy your curiosity in many a way by seeing and using some of the wild fruits of this class.

Miami is, indeed, a most gratifying place in which to become acquainted with many semi-tropical and tropical fruits which have not yet become of commercial importance, but are used locally or domestically as we use our backyard fruits. And, as an aside or a digression, I want to say that if you have an idea that people cannot work in an all the year summer climate you should come to Miami and see how completely that notion has been exploded. It is probably the fastest growing city on the continent today.

No matter what your point of view, I should say my method of preparing myself to find out about the things that would serve me here was a good one. I took the Miami daily morning paper for a month, and was prepared to appreciate the vivid life in this city of southern Florida and also ready to look for the paypaya, the new pineapple orange, a Florida navel orange, the guava, etc. A long standing friend of this column is also here—we had not met face to face—and at her ranch of many acres on the edge of the Everglades I have seen the ripe guava on the tree and on her table—both raw and cooked as a sauce.

The Guava.

This guava fruit of Romany Ranch is yellow, and only the fleshy part, envelope of the pink interior, was in the hot fruit sauce I had for tea. The center is a bunch of seeds with what is evidently a binding quite full of pectin, and is used for the guava jellies which those in the know of fine foods have for long used with cream cheese for sandwiches. This sandwich with cold chicken or turkey is quite the thing for the most exclusive party refreshments, with something hot in the chafing dish. The commercial guava pastes and jellies are usually rather poor, and one should really know at first hand what a guava tastes like before buying them. I have had some of the jelly here that tasted like the guava, but it was too sticky. The experiences make me long to try my hand at making this jelly.

A little booklet which contains a prodigious list of the fruits here says: "The fruit is sometimes green, yellow, or white, the inside portion being well filled with seeds, the color being pink or white according to variety. There are as many varieties of guavas as of apples. Fruit is mostly used for the famous guava jelly. Also used for preserves."

This guava jelly has been made and sold almost ever since Columbus discovered America, I think, but my files are at home, so I have not by me the story, found in a book on life in the West Indies long ago, of its early use.

The Loquat.

A friend took me out to the suburban Little Rivers to the home of one of the leading writers on Florida, a naturalist also, in whose front jungle there are wonderful orchids as well as plain air plants of Quakerish hue. Growing so that we could almost pick the fruit from the high veranda which surrounded the house, was the largest loquat or Japanese plum tree I have ever seen, heavily laden with fruit. We were invited to lunch, and as a compote or sauce we had some of these loquats cooked with apples. The cook was a New England woman, so she had cooked the fruits until they were red. I also had an opportunity to see the beautiful cardinal bird and mate right at the back door. My hostess gave me what she said were wild limes, but which looked more like a small russet orange. This fruit seemed as juicy as a King orange, and I had with it a delicious drink, made lemonade fashion. I would always prefer this drink to one made of lemons, which are not much grown here because they have a tendency to grow too large, as they do on the Mediterranean.

Avocadoes and Mangoes.

One of the food reasons I wanted to come to Miami was to see the experimental garden of the United States department of agriculture. Here has gone on the cross breeding and hardening of the avocado tree, and here also there is great enthusiasm for the Haden mango. My escort to the gardens is a great enthusiast for both these fruits, and has been called here "the grand vizier of fancy fruit packing." I have been fortunate in having known his avocadoes these many years, and now I know how he loves the avocado tree. It may, like the orange, have blossoms and fruit at the same time. We saw it at the garden and at his orchards.

At the gardens I also saw for the first time a pineapple growing, was given heavily loaded stems of loquats, and was delighted to get the sour tamarind bean, which grows on a tree. Alas, I cannot cook this fruit, which dates from Bible times, to find if I can make what the old sailing vessels used to bring home from the West Indies, a preserve that had a delicious sourness and was excellent in drinks, prized for the invalid. In India the tamarind is used in curries. I saw the custard apple and a fig tree of the type that is the most greedy and far reaching of trees. It would take too much space to describe it, but I do not wonder that "Zacchy he, did climb a tree, his Lord to see," since a fig tree was at hand. It sends down threads like strawberry runners from its branches, which attach themselves to the soil, soon become like an iron rod, and then like a good sized tree trunk. The roots go over and under and through thick and thin to far distant points.

The Paypaya.

This community seems to refuse to be educated to the calling of the paypaya by its correct name. They openly call it paw-paw in the stores and hotels, although in one description I have of it "paw-paw" is printed in capitals to emphasize its incorrectness. I had three little bits of it the first day here, with three little bits of romaine, as a salad, and it was called paw-paw on the menu.

It is still the day of small portions in the fine hotels, and in this case about one ounce of a fruit likely to weigh from two pounds up was used. These tree melons sell for 10 and 20 cents a pound. I saw them for 10 cents after I had just paid 20 for the smallest I could get, or one weighing a pound and three-quarters. I had no difficulty in eating the whole of the one I purchased—with a bit of salt—at a picked up luncheon. It seems to have hundreds of not quite round seeds of a mottled gray agate type, about the size of a pea, and a thin, somewhat squashlike peel. According to a little booklet, this fruit may weigh ten pounds. It hangs close to the trunk of the tree on which it grows, drooping in a most curious fashion.

A part of the description of it reads: "Is hollow like a cantaloupe, with numerous seeds having the flavor of nasturtium. Freely eaten in the tropics because the juice is the vegetable pepsin of commerce, known as papain, and contained in most digestive remedies in common use."

In Harper's Magazine for February, in the first article—"By Air to the Heart of the Andes"—a breakfast tray is described as having on it "oranges and paypaya, toast and ham, boiled eggs and coffee" and two bananas. And on pages 427 and 428 of that same magazine you will find a discussion of the Hoosier pawpaw, something else again, discussed because Mr. Meredith Nicholson had praised it and presented a basketful "to the editors."

The Sapodilla.

On sale the sapodilla looks like a lot of poor russet apples or potatoes of some sort, but from what the salesperson may say you can imagine you are going to get a large hunk of chewing gum when you eat it. But, with all its sweetness, it seemed to me more like an apple than any other tropical fruit I have tasted. It is compared to the peach, but seems to me entirely lacking in the characteristic peach flavor, while it has a flavor like that of some apples. A description of it says: "Thin skin, brown pulp, extremely sweet. Species of the chicle tree, the sap of which is the basis of all chewing gums."

The Tangelo.

The tangelo is called a new fruit, hybridized here in Miami. It is a cross between the tangerine and the grapefruit, having the qualities of both, but quite different from either. It has almost no fiber or rag, and is juicy and of a rich tart flavor, but I doubt if it will be popularized as a breakfast fruit. A confectioner coming here from Chicago serves a tangelo punch which is popular. It is made just like a lemonade, I judge, and I think such a punch freshly made at home would be far superior.

Some of the Others.

I have ordered for my intimate acquaintance a dozen Panama oranges or golden limes which are used here mainly for decorative purposes. They are certainly about the prettiest little things I have ever seen in fruit—just a miniature orange but of wonderful deep color! The King orange is much extolled here, and it does have the darkest and richest looking pulp of all, and is juicy. The citron, the sour orange, the bitter sweet orange, the Persian lime, the ponderosa lemons are some of the citrus fruits which I have not yet seen. There is also a long list of miscellanies which I have no hope of finding, including plums and nuts, but I have seen the candle tree and had one of its fruits. But the jujube, mainly used for flavoring confectionery, still eludes me although I have sought it here as elsewhere. Someone has recently joked about the bread crumb tree, but there is a jackfruit tree here, it seems, which is a member of the bread fruit family.

The Fruited Palms.

The coconut palms, tall and short, line the streets of this city and a little later I should think they might make walking an uncertain business. A woman from South America has promised me a recipe which has a Spanish title, one word of which means mouth and which has been translated as Ladies' Slobber. Sounds a bit risqué but the compound is called most delicious. She also makes a dessert of the avocado by whipping it up until it is like a float, sweetening it and then serving it with lime or lemon juice. The banana palm bears fruit when it is quite small and the green bunches are to be seen developing hereabouts, among which seem prodigies of this semi-tropical world.

Tropical Recipes.

One of the churches of Miami has got up a book of tropical recipes, and under "Sapodillo" which I also find spelled authoritatively with "a" for the last letter, it says: "This fruit is the peach of the American tropics. Peel and serve as ripe peaches. Mrs. Haden said last year, 'I find that the fruit makes one of the best sweet pickles I have ever made.' We Americans have been too busy hunting foreign things, and dodging the criticism of foreigners, to develop our resources." Perhaps we have. There is certainly charm in variety and we need it.

There is a fruit, cecropia, mentioned in this book which I have not seen described elsewhere. It says: "This peculiar finger shaped fruit much resembles the fig. It can be eaten fresh from the tree or made into paste as is done with figs, for cake filling. One cup fruit, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup water. Boil until thick and spread between layers of cake. If needed to thicken, a teaspoonful of corn starch or arrowroot may be added."

Defy Old Age

Multiply your beauty, as I've done

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I made myself a famous beauty and gained a great career. I have lived 40 years in the limelight, yet I keep that beauty still. And I look like a girl of 19.

The reason is that I searched the world for the greatest beauty helps in existence. I consulted great scientists and experts. And for many years I have kept in touch with all their new discoveries.

I have supplied these helps to many friends, and seen them gain like results. Now, by thousands of requests, I have placed these helps at every woman's call. Thus I hope in time to bring to millions what they brought to me.

White Youth Clay

The chief beauty essential is clay. Famous beauties have for centuries employed it. Look what it has done for women all about you in late years.

But the day of crude and muddy clays is over. I use a new-type clay, based on 20 years of scientific study. It is white, refined and dainty. It embodies new, important factors. I call it my White Youth Clay.

Youth Clay purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it. It removes the causes of blackheads and blemishes. It brings the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is a rosy complexion. It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores.

The results of Youth Clay will amaze you, whatever else you've used. No girl or woman can afford to omit it. The cost is 50c and $1.

Two Modern Creams

French scientists have developed for me two very remarkable creams. They are, they tell me, the last word in creams. And my results prove their claims.

My Youth Cream is a cold cream. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best that science knows to foster, feed and protect the skin.

I use Youth Cream after my Clay. Also as a night cream. Also day times as a powder base. Never is my skin without it. The result is a complexion all women marvel at. My Youth Cream costs 60 cents, in either cold cream or vanishing type.

Facial Youth is my liquid cleanser, another French creation. The greatest beauty experts now employ this formula. Some charge $3 for it. It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the grime, dead skin and clogging matter come out with it. You will gain new ideas of what a clean skin means when you try my Facial Youth. The cost is 75 cents.

My Luxuriant Hair

My hair is thick, lustrous, silky—finer far than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff and never a touch of gray. Nor have my friends who do what I do.

This is due to my Hair Youth, which I also owe to France. I apply it with an eyedropper directly to the scalp. Thus it does not muss the hair. It cleans the scalp, combats the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair roots. It feeds and stimulates. How hair can thrive when that is done is shown by my results.

I urge all to use Hair Youth. If you have fine hair, use to protect it. If you are losing hair beauty, use to restore it. You will find nothing else so helpful. Hair Youth costs 50c and $1 with eyedropper.

All druggists and toilet counters now supply Edna Wallace Hopper's beauty helps. With each comes my Beauty Book, also my guarantee. When you try one you will use them all, as every woman should. I urge you to learn what they mean to you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

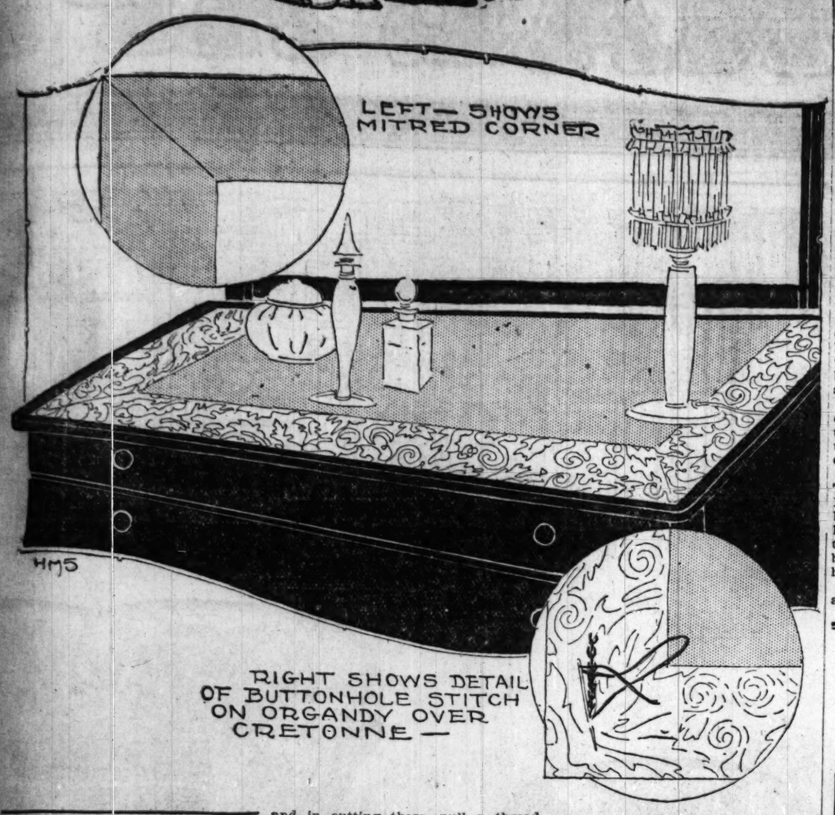
Practical and Fancy Needle Work
By Clotilde



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.

COVER FOR DRESSER.

INDIAN head cotton, organdy, and cretonne are combined in making this attractive cover for the top of a dresser or chiffonier.

If the room for which it is intended is in pink, then the Indian head is in pink, the organdy in white, and the cretonne a small design that harmonizes with the pink.

The size depends upon the size of the dresser top. It is supposed to cover the top completely. The organdy hem is three inches wide, so it should be an easy matter to find out just the size the center part should be. In measuring the three materials, and in cutting them, pull a thread and cut exactly by that. Allow one quarter inch on all four sides of the Indian head for seams. The organdy should be cut six and one half inches wide, and folded evenly together on the length to make the hem. One quarter inch is allowed for turning in on the two edges, and this will make a three inch wide hem. The hem must be perfectly mitred at the corners. A mitred corner is made by joining two edges so a right angle is formed.

In choosing the cretonne, one that is lightweight will be better than too heavy a quality. This should be cut by a thread, exactly three inches—a scant three inches—and this has to be mitred at the corners, and is then laid in between the two thicknesses of the organdy, slipping the bottom edge in between the two turned in organdy edges. This can be basted to the organdy near the outer edge of the hem, and then the edge of the Indian head is slipped in place, between the turned in edges of the organdy; pinned, basted, and stitched twice—once close to the edge, and the second time not quite one-quarter of an inch above.

The cretonne shows through the organdy prettily, and the finishing touch is given by using colored floss and a shallow buttonhole stitch to outline the flowers and leaves of the cretonne.

If one wishes a more expensive cover, taffeta may be used with organdy.

Don't Bite Into It Too Hastily

If some one sends you a going away gift or a welcome home present and it looks like luscious, rosy fruit, don't bite into it too hastily. At least, not if it comes in a round, dried fruit box, in a setting of excelsior and shiny green tissue paper. Because it may be soap!

There is on the market (not fruit market, either) a gift package that is awfully inviting. It contains what purports to be a glowing pear, an apple, and a tempting peach, but instead of growing on a tree they came from the factory where sweet things for one's toilet are manufactured. There have been lemons and figurines made of soap for some time, but this is such perfection it deserves a place in the arts—almost. It is much too attractive to use for such a routine undertaking as a bath, but the owner of a box can glorify her guest's bathroom when an honored visitor is present. And it makes a charming and most tantalizing gift or prize for a card party.

ANSWER TO WHAT'S WRONG HERE

Never sympathize with any one about a broken engagement, even when the latter has been announced. Presumably both parties are glad it is broken.

Cod Liver Oil Now in Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry at the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly and now you can get at your druggist's real genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure. Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of magnesia.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in two weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Owl Drug Co., Buck & Rayner, Public Drug Co., Walgreen Co., MacLean Drug Co., The Boston Store, or any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only sixty cents for 48 tablets.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

MOMENTS.

BARRY Darling: I waited so patiently to hear from you, and when at last your letter came it stirred me out of the apathy into which your absence had thrown me.

I wonder if you realize the strength of my love. It seems long, long ago since you held me in your arms, and said good-by, but the sweetness of your kiss lingers on my lips. Every moment of your absence makes my love a hundred times greater. The fire of it is consuming me. If anything were to happen to you, Barry, my beloved, I should die. Were I to receive only cold glances from your dear eyes, I would pray to be blinded, but even then, Barry, I could feel when you were near that your calm, black eyes were gazing indifferently at me.

If other ears were to receive your dear assurances of love, I would pray that mine could no longer hear, for then all other voices but the memory of yours would be excluded.

But why do I speculate like this? This night, dearest, was made for us. If we cannot be together, I have at least the sweet joy of reading your letter over and over and thinking of the sweet pain your dear arms will bring to me as they crush me to your heart, when we meet again.

Once more, dear, I love you. I shall always love you. Come back to your

Kimlark Woven Rugs, in standard sizes, range in price from $3.00 to $23.00

Have You Ever Seen Such Lovely Woven Rugs Priced So Low?

Ask to look at Kimlark Woven Rugs in the better stores. Picture them on your floors—bright, cheery designs for sun rooms; quiet, soft-toned patterns for living rooms; gay, sprightly colorings for bedrooms; neutral designs for hallways.

Run your hand over their smoothly woven, pliant surface. Think how soft and thick they will be under foot. See how flat they lie, without creeping or curling.

Learn about their special features. How sturdily they resist wear. How easily they are cleaned. How they can be twisted or folded without breaking.

Then look at the price mark—to make sure that such lovely rugs can be priced so amazingly low. Two rugs cost about what you expected to pay for one. And every rug, being reversible, gives double wear.

Where can you see them? In almost any store. Write for our booklet and the nearest dealer's name.

BETTER HOMES WEEK.

"THE future of America will be shaped in large measure by the character of its homes."

This is the platform on which communities all through the United States are falling into line for the Better Homes demonstrations which will be held throughout the nation during Better Homes week, from May 11 to 18, under the auspices of Better Homes in America. "If we continue to be a home loving people we shall have the strength that comes from a wholesome family life. This means that our homes must be convenient, comfortable, attractive."

A mobilization that is highly impressive is going on now through the country in preparation for these demonstrations. The enemy to be routed is a menacing one—the present defects in the country's homes and the appalling national shortage of worthy homes. The objective is worth fighting for—to advance the homes of the land.

Week by week and day by day communities everywhere are enlisting under the flag of Better Homes. Little places and big ones, remote rural sections and city centers, communities that can afford only the slightest outlay and those with more money to spend on a demonstration, are making their plans for Better Homes week. No place is too remote to be interested in the subject of better homes. Last year a little mining town in Pennsylvania on the tip top of an anthracite mountain held a demonstration in which the whole town shared. An Alaskan village into which the materials for a Better Homes demonstration had to be brought by dog sled over scores of frozen miles made its plea to its people for better homes. In like manner, no place is too poor for the subject of better homes to be a vital matter to it. The second prize in the 1923 contest was won by a colored community where the house demonstrated had home made chairs and a tin bath tub, but all the essential qualifications of a better home.

Better Homes in America was recently incorporated as a national educational institution, with Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, as its president, and James Ford, nationally known housing expert, as its executive director. President Coolidge remains the chairman of its advisory council. Last year there were approximately 1,000 Better Homes demonstrations in the country. This year it is expected that the reorganization of the movement along national lines will greatly increase the scope of the demonstrations. Special emphasis will be laid this year upon the demonstration of Better Homes of modest cost. Better Homes in America feels that the greatest service it can offer the country at this time is to give aid in homemaking to families of limited income or wage earning power. Herbert Hoover announces in the guide book to Better Homes in America the organization's belief that worthy homes are accessible to every one.

"The amenities of our civilization should be accessible to all persons, whatever their income or their occupation. High standards are consistent with economy, and can be put within the reach of all."

For the benefit of communities which are still debating whether or not to hold a Better Homes demonstration, the organization answers the question, Why have a Better Homes demonstration in your home town? as follows:

"1. To demonstrate the advantages of thrift for home ownership. Only 45 per cent of the families of America are home owners.

"2. To overcome the present shortage of homes—America needs at least 600,000 new homes.

"3. To make a sweet and wholesome home life available to all.

"4. To assist and encourage home makers and home builders. Over 90 per cent of the women of America do their own work.

"5. To improve home environment, thereby helping to build character.

"6. To increase the efficiency of the wage earner of the house.

"7. To stimulate sensible and appropriate purchasing for home improvement.

"8. To encourage the development of practice houses in the public schools for the teaching of home making.

"9. To mobilize community pride for a common object—pride of home."

For the benefit of communities which wish to hold such demonstrations, but are not clear how to begin, the organization gives the following directions:

"Any community group desiring to affiliate with Better Homes in America for the purpose of holding a Better Homes demonstration should get into touch with James Ford, executive director of the national organization, 1653 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C. A chairman will then be appointed for this community. The program of the national organization is carried out by local committees in the communities which wish to hold Better Homes demonstrations. The type of demonstration to be held in each community is determined by its local committee. In the usual well balanced demonstration, a house is built or borrowed. Its grounds are planted, and its garden is started. During Better Homes week this house is thrown open to the public. A committee of hostesses explains to all who come the merits of the house plan and of its equipment, the convenience of its room arrangement, the comfort of its furnishings, and the beauty of its decorations. Special exhibitions are given of unusual features, such as the well arranged kitchen, the improved garden, the up to date nursery, the devices for home play and music.

"Many variations are possible in the type of demonstrations. In rural sections where it is impossible to secure a house for the demonstration, the method of rotating demonstrations will be followed in some instances. On one day of Better Homes week homes of the community which have unusually convenient kitchen will be demonstrated in a Better Kitchens contest; on another day the homes having an improved lighting system, water or sewerage system will be demonstrated in a similar manner; on a third day homes with unusually attractive lawns and gardens will be demonstrated, and so on through the week. The competitive feature of this type of demonstration will doubtless make it a popular one."

Another type of demonstration held last year which will probably be resorted to again this year was the demonstration by the entire town of Natalie, Pa. Since private ownership of houses is impossible in this town, the community determined upon a Better Homes demonstration on a civic scale. The whole town united in a spring cleaning. Houses were painted, alleys were cleaned up, the main street was oiled, so as to lay the dust and aid the housekeepers of Natalie for a better playground. Hundreds of trees were planted through the town for beauty and shade.

The first prize in the 1923 demonstration was won by the pupils of the Washington Junior High school of Port Huron, Mich., in their demonstration of a house built, equipped, and furnished by themselves, and it is probable that this year the high school students in a number of communities in various parts of the nation will engage in similar demonstrations. Girl Scouts also announce their intention of sharing in the demonstrations of Better Homes week on a considerable scale.

Answers to Queries.

J. R. F.: An escritoire desk in the living room and an extra chair upholstered in rose and taupe striped material would be pleasing additions. Have gold colored silk gauze curtains, edged with narrow black and gold braid. An extra lamp shade could be gold colored, with a novelty edging in jade green. Side lights supplemented by a center chandelier of candle lights—electric—are suitable for the dining room. Use the Dutch silver basket for a center piece on the dining room table. A yellow luster tea set would be lovely for the tea cart. Have jade green enameled furniture in the sun room. Use straw colored window curtains. Let the curtains in the dining room be the same as those in the living room. The braid might be different, if you wish. Wing chairs are quite appropriate for the fireside. Your little home will be lovely, I'm sure, because you take such an interest in it.

L. B.: If possible have the grill work in the living-dining room doorway removed, have both rooms papered in two toned ecru, and don't use portieres between. Either a blue or a gray blotter would be nice on the desk. Have old blue, in a tile pattern, on the floor. Let the little door rugs be gray. Light, French gray paint could be used on the sewing room walls. Paint the kitchen cupboard yellow. In the large bedroom have sand colored walls, old ivory woodwork, and flowered chintz draperies. Old ivory woodwork, ivory and light blue striped wall paper, and ash rose window draperies could be used in the center bedroom. For the third have French gray woodwork, light, greenish gray walls, and mauve window draperies. Carry out a color scheme of white and deep rose in the bathroom. Your suggestion for additional pieces in the living room are quite all right.

J. H.: Use light yellow paint in your kitchen. Have light raspberry pink walls in one bedroom and ash green in the other.

* *

N. G.: A gold colored lamp shade, veiled with black georgette, would look well in your living room. Do not use portieres at the doors unless it is necessary for the sake of privacy. A blue pottery set would be nice. Use gold colored silk gauze at the windows in both rooms. Let the pillows on the davenport repeat the colors of your rug.

O. W.: Aany one of the three colors you mention would be suitable for woodwork in your apartment. Use pistachio green casement silk at the windows. Amethyst silk rep, trimmed with green moss, would be nice for covering the cushions. Enamel the baskets light amethyst.

J. W. F.: With green-blue furniture, old ivory woodwork, and gray walls, old ivory glass curtains with printed linen draperies would be suitable. The linen could be figured in green-blue, old ivory, dark green, and black, with touches of scarlet on a light gray ground.

M. O. C.: Yes, you could use a tapestry chair, in subdued tones, with the pieces you already have. Have ecru glass curtains, with draperies of old gold casement silk, edged with narrow dull jade green and gold braid. Instead of black cords for hanging the pictures and mirror, use dull jade green. Have two toned ecru wall paper. Have a taupe rug. For the floor lamp have a dull jade and gold shade, and for the smaller ones use rose and taupe. Use the same rugs and draperies in the dining room.

R. A.: In the dining room have an ecru and black fiber rug. This will stand for the children's spills. Enameled dining room sets are useful, as they are easily washed or refinished. French gray, trimmed in jade green, would be attractive. Have ecru glass curtains of marquisette with draperies of flowered chintz, on an ecru ground. In the living room have glass curtains matching these in the dining room, and let the draperies of casement silk match the dominant color of the chintz. A taupe rug, closely figured in an all-over pattern of black, would be nice.

G. W. A.: A davenport placed before the group of five windows would be a good addition to your living room furniture. A desk or writing table would not be out of place. Use natural casement cloth edged with dull gold and black upholsterers' fringe for the draperies.

M. M.: A small, kidney shaped davenport should not overcrowd your living room. Have a narrow console table and one or two graceful little side chairs. Have the glazed porch curtains attached to the windows with rods at top and bottom.

* *

B. C.: A plain material, matching the dominant color of the cretonne slip covers, would be better for draperies in as small a room as yours. A floral pattern, showing rose, old blue, two tones of green, and some mauve, on an ecru ground, would be attractive.

* *

C. W. K.: Walnut finished French doors, with two-toned allover patterned wall paper, would be lovely. Use natural colored casement cloth on the door leading into the dining room. The brown rugs will be all right with ivory woodwork. A new davenport in old English tapestry would be nice.

A dose at bedtime of DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Made them feel jolly again

Good Health In Happy Old Age

THE chief concern of elderly people is their health, and that is best assured by regular daily bowel movement. There is no truth, however, in the notion that because you are old you need a "strong physic." In fact, just because you are old a mild laxative is better for you. The trouble with purges and cathartics and physics is that they shock the system and weaken it and make the muscles of digestion flabby. Dr. G. H. Brown, V. S., of Frederic, Wis., nearly wrecked his stomach with purgatives. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin restored his health, as it did Mrs. J. S. Etheridge's, of Milledgeville, Ga.

Does Not Gripe

You can be sure of satisfactory evacuations every day if you will take a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night when you retire. You will not need to take it very long as a few doses will soon encourage the bowels to act for themselves. The popularity of this wonderful family remedy has become so great that it is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Because of its mildness and freedom from griping it is especially ideal for the extremes of ages, for children and for elderly people.

Effective at Small Cost

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. The formula is on the package, and the cost less than a cent a dose. Take it when you feel heavy, sleep poorly, have headache or night cramps, for these are also symptoms of constipation. Give it to the children when they are restless, feverish or have a cold. Syrup Pepsin will keep you and the family free from constipation, a condition that lowers the vitality 25 per cent and raises the blood pressure 28 per cent. Freedom from constipation lessens the pain of kidney trouble, neuritis and rheumatism.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

FUZZY WUZZY MEETS THE BEAVER.

By Raymond Kelly.

It was a wonderful spring morning. The rain was over, and the whole mountain side seemed more beautiful than ever before. All the snow was gone, too, except a few little patches here and there. So, all in all, Fuzzy Wuzzy was a happy little bear. He was glad it was spring and glad he had new rubber boots just like old Father Bear. The boots made a nice noise when Fuzzy Wuzzy skipped, and he made up a little song to go with the noise. It went this way:

Good-by, snow.
I'm glad to see you go,
So I can play
The livelong day,
And watch the grasses grow.

Welcome, spring.
You make the birdies sing.
You wake the breeze,
That sways the trees,
And makes the blue bells ring.

Fuzzy Wuzzy liked that song, and wished that he went to kindergarten, so that the other little bears could hear him. He knew they would just love it.

But it's nice to skip and sing, even if you're all by your lonesome, and Fuzzy Wuzzy danced along feeling happy indeed, and peeking under every bush and flower to see what he could see.

And what do you think he did see? Why, a kiddy car just as good as new, except that the front wheel was gone which, of course, spoiled it for a little bear who wanted to coast.

Now your or Johnnie would have said, "This old kiddy car is no good. I might as well finish breaking it up. That will be some fun, anyhow."

But Fuzzy Wuzzy isn't that sort of bear at all. He thinks trouble was only invented to make little bears use their brains, and that when one does that, why, pretty soon all his troubles are over.

So Fuzzy Wuzzy sat down on a stump and crossed his knees. He thought and thought and thought. He hadn't been thinking more than fifteen minutes when he had an idea.

"I know," said Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I'll take this over to Uncle Billy Beaver, and have him fix it for me."

So away went Fuzzy Wuzzy over the hill and through the woods to the wide place in the creek where the Beavers lived back of the dam. There Fuzzy Wuzzy stood on the bank and called out, "Hurry, Mr. Beaver, I have work for you. Hurry, Mr. Beaver; hurry up, please do."

Then Uncle Billy Beaver put his head up out of the water and called out, "Hello, Little Bear, what do you want?"

"I want you to fix this kiddy car so that I can coast on it," said Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"What will you pay me?" asked Uncle Billy Beaver.

"I will sing my new song for you," replied Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Let me hear the song," said the beaver, "and if I like it, I will make your kiddy car as good as new."

So Fuzzy Wuzzy sang his song, and Uncle Billy Beaver liked it so well that he kept time by slapping the water with his broad, flat tail.

"A nice song, I'm sure," said the beaver when Fuzzy Wuzzy had finished. Then he chewed down a tree and chewed a log off the end of the tree and chewed a piece off the end of the log. He kept chewing and chewing until, in less time than it takes you to wash for school, he had chewed out a new wheel for the kiddy car.

"Thank you, Uncle Billy," said Fuzzy Wuzzy as he climbed on the kiddy car and started for his mother's den. "I like you a lot, because you're nice, and if I couldn't be a bear, I could bear to be a beaver."

A PROVERB

You are to change one letter in each word, and then arrange the new words to form a well known proverb applying to boys—a proverb, by the way, which always pleases little boys.

DIAMOND ANIMALS

Here is a continued diamond, containing four diamonds. The first one we have filled out for you, but you are to fill out the other three. The name of each animal must begin with the last letter of the previous name in each case. If you print the name of the right animal in the middle horizontal and vertical spaces of each diamond, each diamond will be perfect. What are the animals?

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the spring a young man's fancy waistcoat lightly perches on his chest. At this time of the year more than any does this bit of attire appeal to the tastes of the smart dresser, who likes it to brighten up street or sport costumes. Not that we wish to be read as stating that a fancy waistcoat is a necessary adjunct to an attractive outfit. Some of the best dressed men have never worn one, but have depended upon shirts and cravats to give the desired touches of sartorial cheer.

But those who like some added opportunity for relieving the monotony of modern dress will turn to the fancy vest in all its glory. Before going further we should like to issue this word of warning: The fancy vest shows to best advantage when worn with a moderately plain suit, shirt, and cravat. With a suit, say, containing a couple of distinct stripes of contrasting color, an exceedingly fancy striped or figured cravat, and a striped or figured shirt, the fancy waistcoat would stand out like a sore thumb, and add to the whole outfit a motley effect that is not good dressing.

That is, if the vest is one of the popular and smart checked patterns. If the height of fanciness indulged in is one of the plain white or tan linen waistcoats, the suit and tie can add much to contribute to the costume something more violent than a plain blue or dark blue or brown, as the case may be. But the best background in men's wear for those checked English tattersalls which are among the smartest things in vestings is something in plain blue, navy or smoke, or a plain light or dark brown, or light or dark Oxford gray. Suitable color schemes in ties to go with such suits will be suggested below.

First, we want to enumerate the times and places for the use of fancy waistcoats, and the type of vest best suited to the occasion. We mention the English tattersalls. These are, with the exception of the knitted vests, those that will be seen most among the fancy vests. The colors used in these flannel vests are varied enough to fit into any color scheme.

Such waistcoats are possible to wear with street or sport outfits with the black or oxford jacket and striped trousers, as a semi-formal morning or afternoon costume. The

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK—[Special Correspondence.]—In the spring a young man's fancy waistcoat loudly perches on his chest. At this time of the year more than any other does this bit of attire appeal to the tastes of the smart dresser, who uses it to brighten up street or sport costume. Not that we wish to be recorded as stating that a fancy waistcoat is a necessary adjunct to an attractive outfit. Some of the best dressed men have never worn one, but have depended upon shirts and cravats to give the desired touches of sartorial charm.

But those who like some added opportunity for relieving the monotony of modern dress will turn to the fancy vest in all its glory. Before going further we should like to issue this word of warning: The fancy vest shows off to best advantage when worn with a moderately plain suit, shirt, and cravat. With a suit, say, containing a couple of distinct stripes of contrasting color, an exceedingly fancy striped or figured cravat, and a striped or figured shirt, the fancy waistcoat would stand out like a sore thumb, and give to the whole outfit a motley effect that is not good dressing.

That is, if the vest is one of the popular and smart checked patterns. If the height of fanciness indulges in one of the plain white or tan linen waistcoats, the suit and tie can afford to contribute to the costume something more violent than a plain black or dark blue or brown, as the case may be. But the best background in suits for those checked English tattersalls which are among the smartest things in vestings is something in plain blue, navy or smoke, or a plain light or dark brown, or light or dark Oxford gray. Suitable color schemes in vests with such suits will be suggested below.

First, we want to enumerate the times and places for the use of fancy waistcoats, and the type of vest best suited to the occasion. We mentioned the English tattersalls. These are, with the exception of the knitted vests, those that will be seen most among the fancy vests. The colors used in these flannel vests are varied enough to fit into any color scheme.

Such waistcoats are possible for wear with street or sport outfits or with the black or oxford jacket and striped trousers, as a semi-formal morning or afternoon costume. They may be worn successfully with white or gray flannel trousers and odd coats. We looked over numerous samples of these vests at the show room of a manufacturer of highest grade waistcoats, well known for their day and evening vests, and who are making quite a specialty of tattersall and knit vests. The colorings were more attractive than ever.

The knitted vests are best reserved for sport use. We do not recommend them for use with business suits. You will find some men wearing them with business clothes, but their place is primarily the country and the golf course. With a knicker suit, or tweed or flannel sport suit with long trousers, the knitted fancy vest may feel at home.

Other occasions upon which a fancy waistcoat may be worn are those demanding the formal day dress, the cutaway coat and striped or matching trousers. But this outfit calls for a different type of fancy vest. Plain colored worsted or linen is used. A light gray, or taupe, or light tan in the worsted is much played, while in linen we find white, pearl, and tan. Any of these cutaway vests may be worn with sack suits, or jacket and striped trousers as well.

Although the double breasted waistcoat has been struggling for a strong foothold, it has not as many followers as the single breasted, even in the fancy models. Corners are blunt or pointed in about even proportion. Extremely long points are not seen, although they are getting longer.

As we looked over the vests at the above mentioned waistcoat maker's, we pictured the many possibilities for successful color combinations that were suggested to our mind by the vestings. Here, for instance, are the tattersalls, with the suits that would harmonize with them. We will not go into detail on the shirts and ties that might be added to the outfit, as to do so would involve far more space than we have here. But remember our warning about getting too much pattern and color into the whole effect. Often a solid colored tie, or one of self figure, will go best with a checked vest, with the color duplicating one of those in the vest, especially where a bright color, such as red or French blue, is in the vest.

One of the waistcoats had a white background with bright blue and brown overcheck. This suggests itself for combination with a suit of any shade of blue, navy, smoke, or grayish blue, or any shade of brown or tan. A blue suit with an extremely faint brown line stripe might be worn, but in such case the tie and shirt must be of the simplest.

The white background vest with black overcheck may be worn well with black, gray, or blue suit, or the oxford jacket and striped trouser combination. The red and black checked vest might be combined with black, light or dark oxford gray or blue suit. A gray suit with faint red stripe would not be impossible.

The blue and black checked waistcoat would pair nicely with a suit of any shade of blue or gray. A fawn checked vest would be in harmony with a black, tan, brown or blue suit.

Even more attractive than these tattersalls with white background are some with gray background, and some with brown or tan background, the checks in the grays being of French blue, or a darker gray than the body. These two vests should be worn with blue or gray suit of any shade. Either would be excellent with oxford jacket and striped trousers, or light gray flannel trousers and odd coat, or a whole suit of light gray flannel.

The brown and tan vests checked with lighter and darker shades of the same color would best be worn with brown and tan or blue or black suits, leaving the grays out of it.

We must not neglect to mention the colorings of the knitted vests. Some with faint stripe pattern were of the following color combinations: Lavender and tan, tan and blue, tan and white, green and tan.

Others of small checked design were composed of these colors: Blue, heather and tan, tan, brown and heather; brown, grayish blue, and heather; blue, gray and oxford gray; black and two shades of gray; heather, smoke blue and gray.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper. When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant, and send direct.

By Sally Joy Brown.

PUT IN SERVICE.

WHEN the first warm day brought out the green grass and the birds on the trees we all felt glad spring was coming, and thought about house cleaning, gardening, and outdoor sports. But spring also brings a wonderful opportunity to help others, particularly invalids and shut-ins, and help ourselves while doing so. I'll tell you how easily it can be done.

Undoubtedly you're checking over your home right now, either in preparation for moving or spring house cleaning. Somewhere about you certainly have books and magazines you no longer want. Perhaps you have phonograph records that are never played and merely are cluttering up the cabinet. Such articles, given to shut-ins and invalids, are all but priceless—so why not put them in service to this good cause?

Many have other articles, too, that will be more helpful than you could imagine, unless you've actually seen the need. Please think over what you have and let us know. Crochet books, cuttings of cloth for use in making quilts—even beads—many a shut-in will spend many a happy day and weeks if you give such articles. Any article of discarded furniture or outgrown clothing, too, will find many grateful receivers.

Sure to Be Answered.

"Do you think some of the good women have some discarded clothing an elderly woman could make over so to appear respectable? I would be glad to make them over, as I am trying to save so I can visit an aged sister a great many miles from here. I would be so glad if some one would help me a little. Mrs. M. C."

Spring house cleaning ought to unearth some clothing for Mrs. M. C. I shall be glad to give her address.

Request for Cornet.

"A middle aged man, partially blind, would like to have a B-flat cornet. He once played in a band, but has had no instrument for ten years and cannot afford to buy one.

"He is now living with his sister, helping her with the housework, especially with the washing, as she has six children to care for.

"Has some reader the much desired cornet to give to this handicapped man? F. N."

I hope so, F. N., and I hope he'll write for your address soon.

Three Canaries Offered.

"Because I am moving to a smaller apartment where I will have no room for them, I shall be glad to give my three female canaries to those who will give them good homes and care. They sing pretty little songs and should prove a great deal of company to shut-ins and to elderly persons. C. F. R."

Every one loves the cheery little yellow warblers. I'm sure there will be many requests for C. F. R.'s generous gift.

Fan Her Need.

"I am asking for an electric fan for a poor old woman. Her room is tiny and there is only one window. A fan would make the summer more bearable for her. Mrs. S. B."

Mrs. S. B. deserves coöperation in her effort to help this woman.

Of Course There Is.

"I am a boy 10 years of age, and I am fond of books, but I have none. My father is dead and my mother and I live on a little farm. Evenings are lonesome for me. Maybe there is some boy who has read his books and will give them to me. I will gladly pay postage. H. H."

A Worthy Cause.

"Among those who are moving or house cleaning, are there any who have carpet rags of any kind or pieces suitable for quilts that they will kindly send me? All of these materials are to be used for the boys in the government hospitals. The friends have always been kind before, so I am sure they will again. Mrs. J. L. M."

A worthy cause, indeed, to help Mrs. J. L. M. in a work of mercy.

Joy for a Child.

"May I enter a plea for a 14 year old girl who is crippled and would like a wheel chair? Her parents are hard working and deserving, and they have spent all their savings trying to bring health to the child. It is about all they can do to keep their five children sheltered and fed. Mrs. H. F. K."

I shall be glad to give your address to some one with a discarded wheel chair, Mrs. H. F. K. It would certainly be fine to bring joy into this child's life.

Baby Needs Fresh Air.

"We have a large family and mamma is sick and under the doctor's care. We cannot take the 14 month old baby out because we have no stroller. The baby is pale, and the doctor says she should be out of doors more. Will you please see if some one has one no longer used? Mrs. E. G."

Some one's old stroller would bring the roses back to this baby's cheeks. I have Mrs. G.'s address.

Requests Child's Books.

"My little girl is ill, and she is restless and cannot sleep. I read to her. I have not many books on hand and cannot afford to buy new ones, as I am a widow and only earn a small salary in a laundry when I could work. I wonder if some kind reader has children's books no longer in use. I would be so happy to get some for my little girl. M. H. S."

Violin and Instruction.

"Some time ago you printed a request for a violin. Has that been taken care of? If so, you may know of some other youngster who longs for one and who would like to take lessons. I have a violin some one may have and am willing to give lessons free of charge. "E. L."

What Causes Wrinkles? What's The Remedy?

Stop to consider what prodnces wrinkles and sarziness of skin. Premature aging, mal-nutrition, etc., cause the flesh to shrink, loss its youthful plumpness and firmness. The skin then is too large for the flesh underneath; doesn't fit tightly and snurly as it used to—it wrinkles or sags.

It must be plain that to tirhten the skin, make it fit the face perfectly in every place, will effectually remove the hateful wrinkles and sazziness. This is easily and harmlessly accomplished by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and using the solution as a face wash. The ingredients you can get at any drug store, of course. The results are surprising. The skin immediately tightens up, becoming firm and fresh as in youth. Every wrinkle and sar are solicited at once.

RESORTS AND HOTELS

See Oregon!

Enjoy your vacation in AMERICA'S WONDERLAND

Multnomah Falls

COME to this land of the evergreen forests and towering mountain peaks. All nature joins to welcome you. Rest and recline on soft mossy banks beside emerald lakes. Cast a fly into one of the myriad deep pools. Breathe the pine-laden air full of life and rejuvenation. Tramp the mountain trails or motor over almost 2000 miles of paved highways. Innumerable inns, hotels and auto camps furnish inexpensive accomodations.

Oregon's charming cities will fascinate you, too. Bustling with life and energy, they have that Western spirit which, once felt, you will never forget.

Investigate Oregon's great commercial and industrial opportunities. Agricultural lands are low-priced and fertile, crops diversified, certain and profitable.

The climate is ideal—the days are bright and sunny — never hot; the nights cool and invigorating.

If you should come by rail you have many choices and low summer excursion fares. The best and most direct motor route to Oregon, "Land of Opportunity" and other Pacific Coast resorts is via the Old Oregon Trail to Portland.

Beautiful Wallowa Lake

OREGON Invites YOU

WISCONSIN the Land O'Lakes

lights her fires of friendship!

LONG ago, before Juneau, and before the French Fathers came down her rivers, the Pottawatomies and the Chippewas were hosts to neighboring tribes. Friendly signal fires burned the night through to direct the wandering feet of the strangers. They hunted and fished together for a season and dwelt again on the mighty deeds of their fathers in hunting the buck or snaring old Ounaniche—The King of Fishes. They lived together a while in happiness and parted with sorrow.

Wisconsin, the Land O' Lakes, again sends out her call, this time to brothers of rod and gun, to weary men of the cities, to our neighbors to the East, to the South and to the West.

Come to Wisconsin, the Land O' Lakes, and find again the Health and Happiness that is your due.

Plan now your vacation time 'mid the fields and streams and pine girt lakes of Wisconsin.

There are interesting lectures, entertainments and musical programs at the Chautauqua and the Summer School Sessions of Colorado University (fifth largest in the U. S.).

Boulder can entertain you—in a refined way—no matter what your preference for amusements—and you will enjoy yourself every minute.

We really want you to come. Your ticket agent will tell you about the low railroad rates to Colorado—or you can motor all the way.

GOOD MORNING!

Which would you rather do today—plant a garden or read a review? O, come on—read this review! I have to write it—and you know what Mr. Dawes thinks about waste of good material?

This picture all takes place at sea. Here a large sailing vessel is captained (ye naval authorities, IS that a good word?) by a tempestuous commander who has learned about women from them and spends his life taking his knowledge out on the world at large. Mean does not begin to express his disposition, which is just plain ugly, and which he carries about all the time together with a formidable physique which keeps them right in their own respective little corners doing the master's bidding. You will understand, of course, that they're not singing any hallelujah chorus while they're performing their various duties—but, believe you them, those decks are swabbed (sounds like a tonsilitis case) and when "Brute" raises his voice—or his fist—he gets results.

As the boat sails along a fishing smack containing two men and a girl blocks the traffic.

"Let 'em get out of the way, or run 'em down," orders the captain.

It never occurring to the occupants of the little boat that a big boat with all the ocean at its command WOULD run 'em down—they get run down!

"Stubborn things!" growls the captain—"now we'll have to save 'em."

He saves them—and then does he get fun! My dear!

Birthday May Be Secret of Successful Film Star

By Mildred Spain.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—You've read countless articles on how to become a successful movie star. The simplest formula seems to be to have a birthday in April. The brightest stellars in the film firmament are celebrating this month with parties and dinners.

CLAIRE WINDSOR. She wants the world to know about her six year old son. [Freulich Photo.]

Harold Lloyd, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Constance Talmadge, Claire Windsor, Allan Dwan, Mickey Neilan, Jacqueline Logan, Bill Russell, Mary Miles Minter, Natalie Talmadge, and Kathlyn Key were born in April.

Bert Lytell gave Claire Windsor a birthday dinner at the Ambassador hotel on Tuesday. There were sixteen candles on Claire's cake. It was Bert Lytell who put them there, not Claire. Because, you see, Claire is proud of her 6 year old son, Billy Bowes, and wants all the world to know about him.

Miss Windsor wore a Mme. Frances model of white. Corinne Griffith was in blue georgette trimmed in blue ostrich tips. Alla Nazimova was in a striking gown of red brocade. Pauline Garon came with Eddie Carewe, and Ruth Stonehouse was escorted by Richard Rowland. Miss Stonehouse was in black and ermine. Mr. Lytell wants it known he was in black kittenishly relieved with touches of white and a camellia for a boutonniere. George Fitzmaurice and Corinne Griffith's husband, Walter Morosco, were also present.

Bill Russell's birthday party was at his home and largely a family affair. There was Helen Ferguson, Bill's fiancée, Al Russell and Vola Vale, William Beaudine, a cousin; Jack Dempsey, Jack Kearns, and Renee and Frank Borzage. The Borzages brought a cake with ninety-six candles on it. Helen gave Bill an onyx fountain pen set—probably to sign cheques later on. Jack Dempsey's gift was a secret. I understand, however, it was an antique from Scotland, arriving in this country prior to 1919.

Harold Lloyd's birthday was on Easter and there was a family dinner party.

Constance Had a Wonderful Day.

Constance forgot all about her birthday, which was on the 19th. But Norma and Natalie didn't forget. No. They told Joe Schenck and Buster Keaton, and soon all the jewelers in Los Angeles were looted for the fair Connie. Mrs. Peg Talmadge arranged a dinner party at Natalie's, and Constance had a wonderful day after all.

Jackie Logan had two birthday cakes. One for her film debut four years ago and the other for her terrestrial debut (?) years ago.

Mickie Neilan gave a dinner party at Cocoanut Grove. His guests were Marilynn Miller, Jack Pickford, Alice Terry, Eleanor Boardman, King Vidor, Bert Lytell, Claire Windsor,

Mr. Eckstein Unrolls Ravinia's 1924 Roster

By Edward Moore.

ANIMATED by the laudable desire to let the world know what he has been doing for us since Labor day of 1923, when Ravinia closed for the season, Mr. Eckstein selects today as just the time to broadcast for 1924. He has many singers to tell about, and additions to his répertoire, and a new and choice conductor of concerts, and much else. I know of nothing else in the musical activities of this vast land of ours so likely to be of present and immediate interest as an epitome of Mr. Eckstein's prospectus; for it foretells for many of us the diversions and the excitements of summer nights in the delectable niche of the muses on the north shore of our popular lake.

HERBERT E. HYDE. Conductor of the Civic Music children's choruses at Orchestra hall this afternoon. [From a drawing by Carl Bohnen.]

I am, with the recurrent springtimes, partial to quoting Mr. Eckstein when he says, as he always does: "No artistic institution can stand still with prosperity. Movement is imperative: if not forward, then backward. Ravinia opera is accepted everywhere as an artistic institution; and I should be a poor steward if I didn't realize that each new year's design and effort must make for a better season than that of the preceding year. Achievement, of course, is the third element in progress; but we learn of achievement at Ravinia when the season ends. Just now we are concerned with design and effort." . . . I am partial to quoting that each year because it is a good gospel for the opera house, for the symphony orchestra, for the theater, for the ballet, and for the academies of the fine arts.

New Voices for Ravinia.

You will wish to know, of course, who will be new in this year's Ravinia opera, and who of your favorites are returning. You will wish to know also of when the season begins, and with what. And ever so much else, including the matter of additions to the many operas (there are more than fifty of them) already in the expanding répertoire of this unique retreat.

Well, here, alphabetically, are all the principal singers in their loose classification by range and voice quality:

Sopranos—Lucrezia Bori, Florence Easton, Graziella Pareto, and Thalia Sabanieva.

Contraltos—Merle Alcock, Ina Bourskaya, and Jeanne Gordon.

Tenors—Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, Giovanni Martinelli, and Armand Tokatyan.

Baritones—Vicente Ballester, Mario Basiola, Giuseppe Danise, Louis D'Angelo, Desiré Defrère.

Bassos—Paolo Ananian, Léon Rothier, and Virgilio Lazzari.

Easter Week Brings Brady Revival of "Leah Kleschna"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—William A. Brady, who has a way of gathering in six or eight distinguished but idle actors about Easter time and reviving one of the old time successes, has picked on "Leah Kleschna" this year.

Twenty years ago, when Mr. and Mrs. Fiske were trying to reestablish in New York such a stock company as once boasted the names of A. M. Palmer and Augustin Daly, and later that of Frohman, as director, they organized the Manhattan Stock company.

"Kleschna" was then a new play written by the C. M. S. McClellan who had graduated from New York journalism to write the best books and lyrics then being furnished the musical comedy stage, including "The Belle of New York." The Fiskes bought it and organized a company that could properly surround Mrs. Fiske as the girl Leah.

It was a fairly mature organization, but distinguished. John Mason played opposite the first actress as a French deputy and amateur criminologist. Charles Cartwright, an English actor, was the Kleschna, Vienna's most famous thief. George Arliss, newly come to America with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, appeared as a rotter presumably in his twenties but looking easily as a 40 year old cutup, and William B. Mack played the first of his many sympathetic crook parts as Kleschna's assistant.

In the Brady revival William Faversham has the Mason rôle, Arnold Daly is the Kleschna, Lowell Sherman plays the rotter, Jose Ruben is the young crook, and Helen Gahagan, late of "Chains," has the Fiske part.

The old melodrama acts well. The thief scenes—those in which Kleschna bullies Leah into going through with the job of robbing her hero, the amateur criminologist, and the later one in which he tries to turn her from her determination to go straight—are still good holding melodrama.

There used to be an epilogue in which Mr. Mason and Mrs. Fiske stood in a cabbage patch at St. Cloud and plighted their troth, after Mrs. Fiske had taken Leah away and made a good woman of her. This has been dropped in the revival. Miss Gahagan quits her father and starts for the pure life and the curtain falls. This is a gain in logic, but a loss in sentiment. I don't know how the melodramatists for whom it was written will like it. So far their response has been fairly generous.

Footnotes on Last Week's Novelties

By Frederick Donaghey.

THE last new piece in the Russians' visit, "Enough Stupidity in Every Wise Man," was put on too late in a jammed week to permit of adequate reviewing in the daily issue. It were foolish to say that this or any other of the items new to Chicago in their répertoire would have effected attendance for the better if put on earlier in the engagement. They opened with a novelty, "Ivanoff," to a mean gathering, and gave two others, "Uncle Vanya" and "The Death of Pazukhin," in the first week in a theater wellnigh empty. Nor did "An Enemy of the People" bring out a crowd for its first performance. "The Brothers Karamazoff," their piece-de-resistance on this tour, packed the galleries, but left most of the three-fifty tickets in the treasurer's rack. . . .

WALTER C. PERCIVAL. He's the song-publisher in "Henky," and is good in the part. [White Photo.]

For the integrity of the record, rather than for news-reporting, I tell here that "Enough Stupidity in Every Wise Man" was not only one of the most interesting of their vehicles, but also was a better play than any of the adored Tchekhoff's so far made known in Chicago. Reading it, I could not rid myself of the notion that Ostrovsky had written it after a study of Sheridan and his fellows who made plays in the Georgian Regency. Not only is the piece a comedy-of-manners, in the sense that "The School for Scandal" is one, but it suggests in scene upon scene that its author knew that play, "The Rivals," and even "The Critic," and had carried the spirit of Sheridan into a piece reflecting what we must accept as the social life of Moscow in the Eighteen-fifties.

Also for the sake of the record, I add that it was star-cast, with nearly all the celebrities of the company in it: Katchaloff, Stanislavsky, Leonidoff, Moskvin, the protean Luzkshy, the sprightly Bulgakoff, and Mrs. Tchekhova. . . . And they're gone, never, in all likelihood, to come back; and Chicago has provided no reason why they should come back.

Miss Day and Some Others.

"Wildflower" is not another "Irene" for Miss Edith Day, who, however, lacks the handicap for her new piece of having performed here in the old one. When I saw her as Irene in London, she had improved incredibly over what she was in the Chicago performances of "Going Up!" There is in operetta or musical comedy nobody else at all like her: she sings light music well, dances enticingly, and knows something of the trick of acting comic and sentimental scenes. But she errs when she seeks to be emotional, and she errs again when she seeks to be operatic in the manner of East Congress Street in the Wintertime. If she could hear herself schrei, she would probably mitigate her output. . . .

And "Wildflower" is a so-so piece on the German model.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD. . . . XIX.—MAN'S PEDIGREE

THE facts of anatomy, physiology, and embryology, of which we have given illustrations, all point to man's affiliation with the order of monkeys and apes. To this order is given the name Primates, and our first and third question must be when and whence the Primates arose. The rock record answers the first question: The Primates emerged about the dawn of the Eocene era, when mammal was beginning to cover the earth with a garment. Their ancestral home was in the north in both hemispheres, and then they migrated to Africa, India, Malay, and South America. In North America the Primates soon became extinct, and the same thing happened later on in Europe. In this case, however, there was a repeopling from the south [in the lower Miocene] and then a second extinction in the upper Pliocene, before man appeared. There is considerable evidence in support of Prof. R. S. Lull's conclusion, that in southern Asia, Africa, and South America the evolution of Primates was continuous since the first great southward migration, and there is, of course, an abundant modern representation of Primates in these regions today.

As to the second question: Whence the Primates sprang, the answer must be more conjectural. But it is a reasonable view that Carnivores and Primates sprang from a common insectivore stock, the one order diverging towards flesh eating and hunting on the ground, the other order diverging towards fruit eating and arboreal habits. There is no doubt that the Insectivores [including shrews, tree shrews, hedgehog, mole, and the like] were very plastic and progressive mammals.

What followed in the course of ages was the divergence of branch after branch from the main Primate stem. First there emerged the South American monkeys on a line of their own, and then the Old World monkeys, such as the macaques and baboons. Ages passed and the main stems gave off [in the Miocene period] the branch now represented by the small anthropoid apes—the gibbon and the siamang. Distinctly later there diverged the branch of the large anthropoid apes [the gorilla, the chimpanzee, and the orang. That left a generalised humanoid stock separated off from all monkeys and apes, and including the immediate precursors of man. When this sifting out of a generalized humanoid stock took place remains very uncertain, some authorities referring it to the Miocene, others to the early Pliocene. Some would estimate its date at half a million years ago, others at two millions. The fact is that questions of chronology do not as yet admit of scientific statement.

We are on firmer, though still uncertain, ground when we state the probability that it was in Asia that the precursors of man were separated off from monkeys and apes, and began to be terrestrial rather than arboreal. Prof. Lull points out that Asia is nearest to the oldest known human remains [in Java], and that Asia was the seat of the most ancient civilizations and the original home of many domesticated animals and cultivated plants. The probability is that the cradle of the human race was in Asia.

Man's Arboreal Apprenticeship

At this point it will be useful to consider man's arboreal apprenticeship and how he became a terrestrial journeyman. Prof. Wood Jones has worked out convincingly the thesis that man had no direct four footed ancestry, but that the Primate stock to which he belongs was from its first divergence arboreal. He maintains that the leading peculiarities of the immediate precursors of man were wrought out during a long arboreal apprenticeship. The first great gain [in favor of life on bipedal erect lines [not after the quadrupedal fashion of tree sloths, for instance] was the emancipation of the hand. The foot became the supporting and locomotor gripping member, and the hand was set free to reach upward, to hang on by, to seize the fruit, to lift it and bring it to the mouth, and to hug the young one close to the breast. The hand thus set free has remained plastic—a generalized, not a specialized member. Much has followed from man's "handiness."

Arboreal life had many other consequences. It led to increased freedom of movement of the thigh on the hip joint, to muscular arrangements for balancing the body [as in walking], to a backbone a supple yet stable carved [as in a strongly developed collar bone which is only [of some use when the fore limb is used for more than support, and to a power of opposing the thumb and the big toe to the other digits of the hand and foot—an obvious advantage for branch gripping. But the evolution of a free hand made it possible to dispense with protrusive lips and gripping teeth. Thus began the recession of the snout region, the associated enlargement of the brain box, and the bringing of the eyes to the front. The overcrowding of the teeth that followed the shortening of the snout was one of the taxes on progress of which modern man is often reminded in his dental troubles.

Another acquisition associated with arboreal life was a greatly increased power of turning the head from side to side—a mobility important in locating sounds and in exploring with the eyes. Furthermore, there came about a flattening of the chest and of the back, and the movements of the midriff [or diaphragm] came to count for more in respiration than the movement of the ribs. The sense of touch came to be of more importance and the sense of smell of less; the part of the brain receiving tidings from hand and eye and ear came to predominate over the part for receiving olfactory messages. Finally, the need for carrying the infant about among the branches must surely have implied an intensification of family relations, and favored the evolution of gentleness.

It may be urged that we are attaching too much importance to the arboreal apprenticeship, since many tree loving animals remain today very innocent creatures. To this reasonable objection there are two answers, first that in its many acquisitions the arboreal evolution of the humanoid precursors of man prepared the way for the survival of a human type marked by a great step in brain development; and second that the passage from the humanoid to the human was probably associated with a return to mother earth.

According to Prof. Lull, to whose fine textbook, "Organic Evolution" [1917], we are much indebted, "climatic conditions in Asia in the Miocene or early Pliocene were such as to compel the descent of the prehuman ancestor from the trees, a step which was absolutely essential to further human development." Continental elevation and consequent aridity led to a dwindling of the forests, and forced the ape man to come to earth. "And at the last arose the man."

According to Lull, the descent from the trees was associated with the assumption of a more erect posture, with increased liberation and plasticity of the hand, with becoming a hunter, with experiments towards clothing and shelter, with an exploring habit, and with the beginning of communal life.

THE GIBBON IS LOWER THAN THE OTHER APES AS REGARDS ITS SKULL AND DENTITION, BUT IT IS HIGHLY SPECIALIZED IN THE ADAPTATION OF ITS LIMBS TO ARBOREAL LIFE. [Photo; New York Zoological Park.]

It is a plausible view that the transition from the humanoid to the human was effected by a discontinuous variation of considerable magnitude, what is nowadays called a mutation, and that it had mainly to do with the brain and the vocal organs. But given the gains of the arboreal apprenticeship, the stimulus of an enforced descent to terra firma, and an evolving brain and voice, we can recognize accessory factors which helped success to succeed. Perhaps the absence of great physical strength prompted reliance on wits; the prolongation of infancy would help to educate the parents in gentleness; the strengthening of the feeling of kinship would favor the evolution of family and social life—of which there are many anticipations of lower levels. There is much truth in the saying, "Man did not make society, society made man."

A continuation of the story will deal with the emergence of the primitive types of man and the gradual ascent of the modern species.

Tentative Man

So far the story has been that of the sifting out of a humanoid stock and of the transition to human kind, from the ancestors of apes and men to the man ape, and from the man ape to man. It looks as if the sifting out process had proceeded further, for there were several human branches that did not lead on to the modern type of man.

1. The first of these is represented by the scanty fossil remains known as Pithecanthropus erectus, found in Java in fossiliferous beds which date from the end of the Pliocene or the beginning of the Pleistocene era. Perhaps this means half a million years ago, and the remains occurred along with those of some mammals which are now extinct. Unfortunately the remains of Pithecanthropus the Erect consisted only of a skull cap, a thigh bone, and two back teeth, so it is not surprising that experts should differ considerably in their interpretation of what was found. Some have regarded the remains as those of a large gibbon, others as those of a pre-human ape man, and others as those of a primitive man off the main line of ascent. According to Sir Arthur Keith, Pithecanthropus was "a being human in stature, human in gait, human in all its parts save its brain." The thigh bone indicates a height of about 5 feet 7 inches, one inch less than the average height of the men of today. The skull cap indicates a low, flat forehead, beetling brows, and a capacity about two-thirds of the modern size. The remains were found by Dubois, in 1894, in Trinil in Central Java.

2. The next offshoot is represented by the Heidelberg man [Homo heidelbergensis], discovered near Heidelberg in 1907 by Dr. Schoetensack. But the remains consisted only of a lower jaw and its teeth. Along with this relic were bones of various mammals, including some long since extinct in Europe, such as elephant, rhinoceros, bison, and lion. The circumstances indicate an age of perhaps 300,000 years ago. There were also very crude flint implements [or eoliths]. But the teeth are human teeth, and the jaw seems transitional between that of an anthropoid ape and that of man. Thus there was no chin. According to most authorities the lower jaw from the Heidelberg sand pit must be regarded as a relic of a primitive type off the main line of human ascent.

3. It was in all probability in the Pliocene that there took origin the Neanderthal species of man, Homo neanderthalensis, first known from remains found in 1856 in the Neanderthal ravine near Dusseldorf. According to some authorities Neanderthal man was living in Europe a quarter of a million years ago. Other specimens were afterward found elsewhere, e. g., in Belgium ["the men of Spy"], in France, in Croatia, and at Gibraltar, so that a good deal is known of Neanderthal man. He was a loose limbed fellow, short of stature and of slouching gait, but a skilful artificer, fashioning beautifully worked flints with a characteristic style. He used fire; he buried his dead reverently and furnished them with an outfit for a long journey; and he had a big brain. But he had great beetling, ape like eyebrow ridges and massive jaws, and he showed "simian characters swarming in the details of his structure." In most of the points in which he differs from modern man he approaches the anthropoid apes, and he must be regarded as a low type of man off the main line. Huxley regarded the Neanderthal man as a low form of the modern type, but expert opinion seems to agree rather with the view maintained in 1864 by Prof. William King of Galway, that the Neanderthal man represents a distinct species off the main line of ascent. He disappeared with apparent suddenness [like some aboriginal races today] about the end of the Fourth Great Ice Age; but there is evidence that before he ceased to be there had emerged a successor rather than a descendant—the modern man.

PROFILE VIEW OF THE HEAD OF PITHECANTHROPUS, THE JAVA APE MAN—AN EARLY OFFSHOOT FROM THE MAIN LINE OF MAN'S DESCENT—The animal remains found along with the skull cap, thigh bone, and two teeth of Pithecanthropus seem to indicate the lowest Pleistocene period, perhaps 500,000 years ago. [After a model by J. H. McGregor.]

PILTDOWN SKULL. THE DARK PARTS ONLY ARE PRESERVED—NAMELY, PORTIONS OF THE CRANIAL WALLS AND THE NASAL BONES—Some authorities include a canine tooth and part of the lower jaw which were found close by. The remains were found in 1912 in Thames gravels in Sussex, and are usually regarded as vastly more ancient than those of Neanderthal man. It has been suggested that Piltdown man lived 100,000 to 150,000 years ago, in the Third Interglacial period. [From the reconstruction by J. H. McGregor.]

4. Another offshoot from the main line is probably represented by the Piltdown man, found in Sussex in 1912. The remains consisted of the walls of the skull, which indicate a large brain, and a high forehead without the beetling eyebrows of the Neanderthal man and Pithecanthropus. The "find" included a tooth and part of a lower jaw, but these perhaps belong to some ape, for they are very discrepant. The Piltdown skull represents the most ancient human remains as yet found in Britain, and Dr. Smith Woodward's establishment of a separate genus Eoanthropus expresses his conviction that the Piltdown man was off the line of the evolution of the modern type. If the tooth and piece of lower jaw belong to the Piltdown skull, then there was a remarkable combination of ape like and human characters. As regards the brain, inferred from the skull walls, Sir Walter Keith says:

"All the essential features of the brain of modern man are to be seen in the brain cast. There are some which must be regarded as primitive. There can be no doubt that it is built on exactly the same lines as our modern brains. A few minor alterations would make it in all respects a modern brain. . . . Although our knowledge of the human brain is limited—there are large areas to which we can assign no definite function—we may rest assured that a brain which was shaped in a mould so similar to our own was one which responded to the outside world as ours does. Piltdown man saw, heard, felt, thought, and dreamt much as we do still."

And this was 150,000 years ago at a modern estimate, and some would say half a million.

There is neither agreement nor certainty as to the antiquity of man, except that the modern type was distinguishable from its collaterals hundreds of thousands of years ago. The general impression left is grand. In remote antiquity the Primate stem diverged from the other orders of mammals; it sent forth its tentative branches, and the result was a tangle of monkeys; ages passed and the monkeys were left behind, while the main stem, still probing its way, gave off the Anthropoid apes, both small and large. But they too were left behind, and the main line gave off other experiments—indications of which we know in Java, at Heidelberg, in the Neanderthal, and at Piltdown. None of these lasted or was made perfect. They represent tentative men who had their day and ceased to be, our predecessors rather than our ancestors. Still, the main stem goes on evolving, and who will be bold enough to say what fruit it has yet to bear!

Carroll's Vanities Captivates the Loop Crowds. More entertainment, wit, laughter, beauty, art and diversion into two hours than all the rest of the same kind of shows spread out over the week.
Amy Leslie, News.

In short, Earl Carroll's "Vanities" is an entertainment that will intrigue all those who like glitter, combined with tasteful artistry, fun in liberal proportions and music of the popular brand. The producer is deserving of congratulations.
Paul S. Martin, Chicago Journal of Commerce.

In good taste, without pain either to eye or ear, and with the assistance of a chorus which is quite 100% chosen.
Edward Stirling, Journal.

"Vanities" is cutaneous, but fresh and cool. Not for an instant has it the soiled-linen look or atmosphere characteristic of so many revues that reach the loop after a Broadway and road run.
Bartlett Cormack, Chicago Evening American.

His scenery is rich, his girls are pretty and his jesters are amusing.

with three or four bully tunes (including the one called "Bambalina", a pretty good comic song about the vamps of history), an infantile "book," a thrifty mise-en-scène, shopware comedians, and a conductor who knows what to do with this particular score. He combines with Miss Day and the tunes to make it worth an evening.

Miss Harding, a newcomer of the week, has had her share, so far as her unimportant but attractive duties in "The Horse-Thief" go. She is a lively stranger, seems to be a good actress, and is certain of a welcome when she comes back in something else. The first night excitement over the play and Mr. Marion's acting therein is outside my understanding. . . . And enough has been written about Mr. Fields and "Henky," although it is being merely genial to repeat the wish that he will one of these days run into something that's good for him in the way of a play and a part. . . .

Mr. Mitchell, also a returning comedian in the week's batch of new entertainments, is as good as anybody might be and better than most others might be in "The Whole Town's Talking," which is a fair farce, full-bodied and vulgar and not dirty in its fun, and quite untidy in workmanship and text. He was so good an actor in "A Tailor-Made Man," and even in the chowder called "A Prince There Was," that I should like to have him, also, acquire better plays and better rôles than he has had of late. . . .

Mr. Bryant, taking over Cosmo Hamilton's "The New Poor" for the Playhouse, is served badly by his stage-director rather than by his actors, although the comedy would not stagger badly under a better cast. The piece, which is "Guess Again!" in its revival, has its barbs in a happy and topical variant of the trick-plays in vogue now for a decade or more. It is not another "Seven Keys to Baldpate" (of which there has not yet been another); but I sigh when I think of what Mr. Cohan might have done with Mr. Hamilton's notion of a troupe of actors counterfeiting the austere elegance of Russian royalty in order to obtain a hot-weather income as household flunkeys.

About Revues.

Richard Mansfield once told me that he worried until he found out what his adversaries were doing, and, finding out, would then be fortified to do something else. The men who stage the so-called revues worry until they learn what Mr. Ziegfeld is doing, and then copy him. The defect of Mr. Carroll's Vanities and of Mr. White's Scandals and of nearly all the other annuals is that they are gaudy counterfeits of the Ziegfeld Follies. This is not so of the Music-Box Revue; and it was not so of the three which Mr. Cohan wrote and staged. His, in scheme and in matter, were the best the American stage has known since the late C. M. S. McLellan devised topical revues for the New-York Casino. . . .

Mr. Carroll's current show is bright to the eyes, is reasonably clean, and will run off with a measure of style; but it lacks ideas, fun, and variety. Mr. Cook is nine-tenths of the diversion; and that is more than even the clever and tireless Mr. Wynne undertook with a less pretentious frolic. Miss Joyce is, of course, a curio; in an earlier and not-so-lavish day, she would have achieved art through an offer from Kohl & Middleton for appearance in their justly-famed museum. . . . But I have no doubt that she draws them in for Mr. Cook to entertain. No better invocation to laughter has been heard this season than his punctilious explanation of why he does not do an imitation of four Hawaiians. He makes deft use of what he says was his apprenticeship in a circus: and he is funny.

THIS-AND-THAT

"Easy-Street," by Ralph Kettering, will be ready for disclosure not later than May 11, it is now said: this is the piece formerly paragraphed as "Money! Money!" . . . The author's idea is that Miss Helen Hayes Miss Ruth Shepley, or Miss Helen MacKellar would be good in the principal woman's part; so, he is trying to get one of them.

Miss MacKellar is mentioned as the probable star of "The Dreamers," by Barry Connors. . . . Gilbert Miller, who operates the storied Charles Frohman trademark for Famous Players, says that he will undertake a Gilbert-Sullivan revival next season. William A. Brady recently announced one for this Spring, with some gorgeous names in the roster; and that was all there was: there wasn't any more.

Although "Icebound" won last year's Pulitzer prize of $1,000 for Owen Davis, it is said by those who have seen it to be a good play. It was listed for Autumn revelation in the Harris, and never brought hither. . . . Now the North-Shore Theater Guild is to make it known this week over its circuit.

Warfield Farewells the Bard.

David Warfield last night ended his devout and mistaken activities as Shylock, satisfied, perhaps, that he had overlooked nothing in the line of territory, at least. . . . Mr. Belasco has tactfully abandoned his paragraphing to the effect that Lear will be Mr. Warfield's next part in Shakspere; and there will be no next part in Shakspere for this good actor, who, doubtless, will find his clientèle reassembled when he revives "The Music-Master" or even "The Auctioneer."

The Moscow Art Theater spends this week in Detroit, and then goes into New-York for what is said to be its American farewell. . . . The company is to sail May 17 for Europe, with a Berlin engagement in sight before it returns to Russia.

Although she was recently reported to have asked the law to compel Mr. Gest to give $500,000 to her in recompense for damage to her reputation as an actress, the Princess Matchabelli continues to perform for him in "The Miracle," in which she shares the rôle of the Madonna with Lady Diana Manners. . . . Marie Carmi is the stage-name of the Princess; and the consensus is that Mr. Gest is not going to pay $500,000 to her.

Miss Florence Reed, whose New-York success with "The Lullaby" didn't carry her far when she took to travel in the piece, is to try something new in Minneapolis. It is called "Ashes," and is by Reginald Goode, an actor.

A New Part for Heggie.

A Mrs. Cavendish is the author of a play called "Whistler" in which O. P. Heggie is to have the title-rôle—that of the celebrated American artist of such high repute for his ill-manners.

Miss Gladys Unger, who is afraid of nothing that comes in by steamer, is making an adaptation for us of "Werewolf," which everybody who has seen it in Germany says simply cannot be adopted: that is, for us. . . . Miss Laura Hope Crews and Miss Marion Oakley have been engaged to act in it.

The Equity Players, a side-line of the actors' union, has, after two seasons of flivvers, found a success in "Expressing Willie," as Mr. Mantle tells you in another column. The matter is mentioned here to introduce the tale that one of a number of producers who turned the piece down described it as "only an eighth of a play."

"Our Nell" is a new London musical piece with Nell Gwynne as the central figure and José Collins as the star. . . . And this restoration of Charles the Second's orange-pedlar to the theater recalls, of course, Miss Henrietta Crosman's acting in "Mistress Nell" and Miss Ada Rehan's in "Sweet Nell of Old Drury."

It seems that Herbert Richard Lorenz, the author of "Henky," is three persons: Herbert, Richard, and Lorenz Fields, sons of Lew Fields, the star of the piece. . . . Gerald Griffin, a tenor who belongs in this neighborhood, has been taken in by the British National Opera, which is a co-operative venture.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT THIS WEEK

MISS AUDREY HART
[Ray Huff Photo.]

MISS FRIEDA INESCORT
[Nicholas Muray Photo.]

MISS HART is with us because of the indisposition of Miss Lillian Cpoper Kemble, who was to have come along to act the attractive rôle of the Princess Irina in "Guess Again!" Miss Hart's epitomized autobiography has it that she has been in many, many plays, including "Happy-Go-Lucky," with O. P. Heggie, and "The Rear Car," with Taylor Holmes. . . . Anyway, she's here in "Guess Again!"

Miss Inescort is coming tonight for the part of Julie in the play made from "Simon Called Peter." If you've read Robert Keable's story or its sequel, "Recompense," you know all about Julie; if you've read neither, you are hereby told that she's important in the flaming though fictive proceedings. . . . So far as the records show, Miss Inescort is a new actress in the neighborhood.

New Playbills

Bulletins of Incoming Novelties as Far Ahead as the Managers Tell About.

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Simon Called Peter" [Great Northern]: A dramatization by Jules Eckert Goodman and Edward Knoblock of Robert Keable's like-named novel, a best-seller in post-bellum fiction. The play was some time since tried out in Washington (D. C.), to an accompaniment of official interference; and it is told that censors and such have annoyed the management by increasing the box-office sales in other cities en-route to Chicago. The cast is headed by Miss Frieda Inescort as Julie, Miss Jetta Goudal as Madeleine, and Noël Tearle as Peter; and there are thirteen others in the roster of principals. . . . William A. Brady, whose venture "Simon Called Peter" is, piously expresses the hope that there will be no trouble about the play in this city; and his fingers are visibly crossed as he speaks.

SUNDAY, MAY 4:

"Sun-Up" [La Salle]: A play in three acts by Miss Lula Vollmer which has been running in New-York since May 24 of last year. The scene is the Carolina Mountains; and the cast is headed by Miss Lucile La Verne.

"No! No, Nonette!" [Harris]: A musical-comedy version by Otto Harbach and Frank Mandel of the farce called "My Lady-Friends." The tunes are by Vincent Youmans, who composed some of those in "Wildflower"; and the cast includes Richard ["Skeets"] Gallagher and the Misses Anna Wheaton, Georgia O'Ramey, and Juliette Day.

SUNDAY, JUNE 1:

Miss Alys Delysia in Topics of 1922 [Apollo]: The star of "Afgar" in a revue-like piece from the New-York Winter Garden.

Broadcasting the News of Ravinia for This Summer

the répertoire who answer to the respective names of Margery Maxwell, Philine Falco, Anna Correnti, and Giordano Paltrinieri.

The roster of conductors for the new season contains the names of Gennaro Papi, Louis Hasselmans, Eric De La-Marter, Wilfrid Pelletier, and Giacomo Spadoni: five familiar names, but one quite unfamiliar in connection with Ravinia—that of Mr. De LaMarter. This gifted musician is to make the programs for all the concerts, and conduct them. As each week carries four series of concerts, he is not going into a sinecure.

A Bit of Ravinia Who's Who.

I assume you have been through the foregoing roster and picked out the newcomers therein. Also, that you have noted the balance indicated by the four principal sopranos, and that the three principal tenors are singers of high distinction. And that two of the three contraltos will be strangers to Ravinia's stage, where the third, Miss Bourskaya, made her début in both French and Italian in 1922.

Mr. Martinelli, who is about to make his Ravinia debut, is important at the Metropolitan, and, for that matter, wherever opera is given in the world. This will be the first summer he has spent in the United States, although for five years past he has been the recipient of a flattering invitation by Mr. Eckstein to come to Ravinia. Those who are up on the big casts of the big opera houses will recognize him as an artist of high distinction.

Mr. Lauri-Volpi's return is something else that is pleasant to contemplate. He was among the newcomers last summer, but he speedily won his deserved recognition, and throughout the season was a subject of flattering applause. Since then he has gone farther in the history of the Metropolitan, and the printed comments upon musical subjects speak of him with much approbation. And both will be in the opening bill.

That Miss Easton will also return is another announcement to bring cheer to the hearts of her admirers, and she has many of them. She came back to Ravinia last summer after an absence of three years, and at once established herself again as one of the most versatile of singers, an artist capable of singing a wide range of diverse rôles, with a voice of great beauty and a power of distinctive characterization for each of them.

Miss Bori is a celebrated newcomer. She is known all over the musical world, except this part of it, as the possessor of a lovely voice and a magnetic personality, and altogether as a great interpreter of some of the great lyric rôles. She is one of the Metropolitan's leading features. And she and Miss Easton will also appear on Ravinia's opening bill.

Miss Pareto, whom Chicagoans first heard at Ravinia in 1922, returns for the coloratura operas; and Miss Sabanieva, a newcomer of 1923, will be heard in a larger répertoire than a year ago, when she was a volunteer to help the management through the period of delay in the arrival of another singer caused by a mistake in transcribing a cablegram.

The New Contraltos.

Miss Gordon has an operatic record in Chicago of one performance: she sang Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana" in the Auditorium with the Scotti opera in the autumn of 1919, and soon thereafter joined the Metropolitan opera, of which she is still a member, singing the great contralto rôles in the Italian, French, German, and English répertoire. Miss Alcock has never sung here in opera, but is of high repute as a concert and oratorio singer. She joined the Metropolitan opera at the beginning of last season and is reported to have been highly successful.

Miss Bourskaya, of course, needs no introduction at this time in a city where she made her first marked American success in Russian, and afterward proved her quality in the general répertoire at Ravinia, with the Chicago opera, and with the Metropolitan.

Double Bill for Opening.

And now for the first program of the season, June 21. It will be an innovation as an "opener," inasmuch as it will consist of the gemini of music-drama, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." Why? Let Mr. Eckstein explain, thus:

"They are popular. They are contrasts. Each contains but a few rôles, all of which are definite and important. And I wish to make the night a gala by putting forward more of the celebrities of the 1924 company than I could get into any one opera suitable for opening the season. And I guess I have a prompting of excessive prodigality for this night; for I could not make this bill pay me back if I were to double the prices and then double the capacity!"

Miss Easton, Mr. Lauri-Volpi, Mr. Ballester, and Miss Alcock will sing in Mascagni's thriller.

Miss Bori, Mr. Martinelli, Mr. Danise, and Mr. Defrere will be in Leoncavallo's.

Yes, Mr. Eckstein: two good casts!

The Civic Music Festival.

The annual festival of the Civic Music association will be held this afternoon at Orchestra hall. Three o'clock is the hour—daylight saving time, in case you have neglected to reset your watch. The combined children's choruses of the organization will sing under the direction of Herbert E Hyde, and the Civic orchestra of Chicago will play under the batons of Frederick Stock and Eric De LaMarter. Songs by four Chicagoans of present or former residence are announced, Edith Lobdell Reed, Beatrice MacGowan Scott, W. Otto Miessner, and Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, also other works by Reinecke, Schubert, Jessel, Lieurance, and Molloy. The orchestral part of the program includes compositions by Wolf-Ferrari, Smetana, Tschaikowsky, and Johann Strauss. The orchestrations for the children's songs have been made by Conductor Hyde. At the end of the program there will be a short period of community singing led by Frederick W. Carberry.

The Civic orchestra will carry word of its accomplishments through the medium of two concerts, one before the convention of the State Federation of Music Clubs at Jacksonville on Tuesday, the other to dedicate the new school auditorium at Highland Park a week from today.

Among the Civic Music association's other activities a band has been started at the Boys' Brotherhood Republic and an orchestra at the Park Ridge School for Girls. Both are in the formative stage and gifts of instruments or money for their purchase will be welcomed. Such gifts will be received at the office of the association, 637 Fine Arts building.

[Further news of the music world will be found on page 6.]

A STELLAR QUARTET OF RAVINIA

Here are four of the golden throats with whom Mr. Eckstein proposes to renew the charm of Ravinia during the coming ten weeks' summer season. All are prominent members of the Metropolitan Opera company. Miss Bori has never been heard in Chicago; Mr. Martinelli has sung here in concert. Mr. Lauri-Volpi became one of the Ravinia stars last summer; Miss Easton has been famous there during a series of summers. This notable quartet will all appear on the opening bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

Leave It to Priscilla to Tame the Brute

that's the master's little whim—see? The other poor captives he sets swabbing, etc., while he molls about.

With Priscilla Dean as the heroine, however, you know that no mere man is going to become too rough and get away with it. How she shows the captain a thing or two I shall refrain from explaining—while you plant your gardens.

It behooves me to say, however, that time develops the fact that there's a little bit of good in every bad little boy, even though a ship may have to sink to prove it.

"The Storm Daughter" is pretty fair program entertainment. It has hits moments. It is well directed and acted, etc., but what gets me is how ANY one man could so completely tow a muscular crowd of men as does "Brute" Morgan—without the aid of hypnotism. And there isn't a single thing in the story to hint that he's a miracle man. He's just a sorehead until his feminine co-star appears on the scene and makes him snap out of it.

See you tomorrow!

Ask Me! Ask Me!

JANE: There are two ways of looking at that. I can see your point of view—also your mother's. If you feel you look and act so much like Miss Talmadge, why not practice before your mirror—for a while, at least? It IS trying, you know, to have the totally unexpected crop up at Sunday night tea! (But I loved your letter, Janie!)

LIONEL: What do you mean "great actress"—a woman who seems perfectly natural or a woman who delivers her emotions in italics? No, I don't know her personally. Did you ever stop to think that repression is a much greater art both on and off the stage and screen than simply letting loose and getting whatever's IN—OUT of one's system?

Voice of the Movie Fan

Astonished to Note

Dear Miss Tinée: To get my point of view you must think of a poor Irish boy of about 26 who has been in the United States only four years. Naturally, I regard the country of my adoption as the most up to date, yet I am astonished to note that "The Birth of a Nation" and "Quo Vadis" are being boomed as something new and stupendous in the way of production. I saw both of these pictures when I was in knee pants, and thought they were forgotten. They are, however, indisputably works of art.

What do people look for in a picture? Lavish expenditure? If so, "Under the Red Robe" was good. Otherwise it is not nearly up to the standard of another picture of my knee pants days.

For sheer good acting I have never seen the equal of a film portraying the elopement of an Indian with a girl of his tribe, who, being pursued by other warriors, so touched them by his bravery that he was forgiven and welcomed. I would like to knwo the title of this old picture so that I could buy a film to run through my private projector.

Gloria Swanson was good in "The Humming Bird," but in my opinion she would have been better had she not indulged in that preposterous hand on hip lunging walk at times, which was unnatural and entirely unconvincing. SEEMES.

[Editor's Note: Sure, when you learn to write on one side of the paper ONLY I print your entire letter. "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown for the second time because it's so GOOD!

Shingled Comes Back.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am answering A. R.'s kick. I feel I've a lot of room to be righteously indignant. Sunday morning when my azure eyes found their way to the Kick Corner, I was surprised and a bit pained to find that some one had a fault to find with my kick about Dorothy Mackaill and "The Next Corner." I felt badly crushed, yet I considered the source and concluded that A. R. is an old horse and buggy. I know she's jealous of my shingle. It's too bad that she's past 40 or she'd have one, too.

Why, any one could tell at a glance that my letter was everything but ignorant or slangy. Anything so exquisitely wrought could not in any way be ignorant. It requires a couple of spoonfuls of intellect to dish out a grievance that way. As for slang—she might look at her own letter.

Please don't try to say that Miss Mackaill was mis-cast. She's a chronic misfit, if you ask me. There's nothing about her you'll like. If she appealed to you, I don't need your photo to tell you just exactly what you look like, A. R. It must be wonderful to be so cultured. Your letter, so brimming with knowledge, so pruned, so polished, so suave, went far over the heads of us ignorant, coal heaving proletariats.

Well, ol' one horse shay, Conway Tearle, though he may be only a working girl—even as you and I—might have at least offered a little protest to having himself cast as he was. He certainly knew it was the bunk, and he acted the part. SHINGLED.

KICK KORNER FOR MOVIE FANS

ITS OBJECT—OBJECTION

Editor's Kick: Will you PLEASE kick on one side of the paper only? Some beautiful roasts come in and I didn't have time to copy them. I'd do anything for you, but—PLEASE—when you write anything for any one of the corners have a heart and kick only on one side of the sheet of paper on which you happen to be writing.

Much to Admire.

Dear Mae Tinée: Some one's protest against Norma Talmadge in "The Song of Love" has just come to my notice. In my turn, since I, too, am a fan, I would protest against the protester.

It is quite true that we all adore Norma in the lavender and old lace parts, and that in her natural self she seems best fitted for just such. Yet I saw her in "The Song of Love," and while it was a bit unaccustomed, found much to admire in it and much clever work. I can just imagine her enjoying kicking over the traces for once and being a bit devilish for a change. It seems to me it would be mighty discouraging to any film artist to feel that she was confined to just one kind of acting—and by us, there's the rub. Norma probably does not wish to become a rubber stamp, like William Hart. If she is the actress I feel confident she is, she probably would like to do other things, too, to grow, expand, develop, and branch out infinitely, and she has a right to. So, I say if she wants to try her hand at even comedy or vamp parts, or anything else her little heart desires, let's not be crêpe hangers, but instead say, "Atta boy, Norma, go to it, and show us what you can do."

Who knows what undreamed of possibilities there may be ahead of even greater things than she has already done? LEONA.

What Ho!

Dear Miss Tinée: Some of your contribs have said something about a knock being a boost. Well, here goes for a boost with reverse English. In "Under the Red Robe," aside from the acting of Thomas and Mantell, what is there but fuss and feathers? Supposing the cast was dressed in the Mack Sennett style, how much of a hit would it be? As a comic skit it might go at that. What did Thackeray say about bowing to externals? We stand in awe of the wig and gown, and not of the judge if he is baldheaded.

Aren't we all walking manikins? In other words, there can be no romance without robes, ribbons, and ruching.

Imagine Juliet in a flapper rig and Romeo a la Cosmo Hamilton. And yet there is romance all about us, but it hasn't the salad dressing of the stage. O, blah! Likewise, pish and tush. A hit? Why, of course! Why? Because the box office says so.

"What fools these mortals be!" You said a mouthful, William.

News of the Music World

The Metropolitan Opera company, promptly in the field with news of what's to come next season, sends word of ten novelties and revivals listed, which, says Mr. Gatti-Casazza, is at present the complete and definite program of activities outside of the regular repertoire. They classify thus: Italian—"Giovanni Gallurese," book by Francesco d'Angelantonio, music by Italo Montemezzi; "La Gioconda," by Ponchielli; "Falstaff," by Verdi, and "Dinorah," by Meyerbeer. French—"Pélléas et Mélisande," by Debussy; "The Tales of Hoffmann," by Offenbach, and "La Juive," by Halevy. German—"Jenufa," book by Gabriele Preiss, music by Leos Janacek, and "Rheingold" and "Götterdämmerung," by Wagner.

"Giovanni Gallurese," Montemezzi's first opera, composed eight years before "L'Amore del Tre Re," and "Jenufa" will be heard in America for the first time. The latter was composed in 1901 and produced at Brünn, Germany, three years later. "Pélléas et Mélisande" is a new work for the Metropolitan, though for years it has been the most artistic item in Mary Garden's gallery, done first with the Hammerstein organization and later with the Chicago company. In the coming presentation there is a report to the effect that Edward Johnson and Lucrezia Bori will take the name parts.

There has been further gossip that if Boito's "Nerone" turns out to be a big thing when it gets its first footlight at La Scala, Milan, in May, Mr. Gatti-Casazza will probably add it to the Metropolitan schedule. However, a bit of forecast from Milan published in the New York Times throws a dash of cold water on too great hopes. It says that four acts of the work, composed and orchestrated, were found after Boito's death in 1918, with merely a sketch of one scene for the fifth. The music, not highly original, and something in the style of Verdi's "Otello" rather than Boito's previous "Mefistofele," was considered by Arturo Toscanini worthy of performance except that the orchestration was exceedingly weak. Tommasini, the Roman composer, was therefore called in, not only to modify but to make drastic revisions in the score.

The forecast concludes that "Nerone" is expected to have a sympathetic and enthusiastic reception because of a first class performance and lavish staging, "but everybody in Milan has his doubts that it will represent anything of importance from the point of view of art, or that it will have such a vitality as to enable it to continue its way across the Alps to the world at large."

There may be another Chaliapin in America next season, Lydia, a black haired, dark eyed daughter of the famous blonde basso, and said to be beautiful. She sang Russian folk songs in London recently to the accompaniment of two guitars, and plans to make other appearances in Paris and Berlin. After that, the United States.

Among the musical events of the afternoon is a recital for the benefit of a good cause. Gwennie Williams Evans, soprano, and William Davies, tenor, will sing songs of Wales at Kimball hall, and the proceeds of the event will be turned over to the Welsh Old Peoples' home of Cleveland.

A recital of Irish folk songs will be given this evening in the Sovereign hotel by Cathal O'Byrne, who recently returned from Ireland. Selections from his book of Irish poems, "The Grey Feet of the Wind," will be read by Anne Larkin as part of this evening's program. In his recitals Mr. O'Byrne wears the costume of the ancient Irish bards, with a shoulder brooch, or torc, which dates back to the eighth century. The torc is of silver, gold inlaid, and enamel.

Have a Birthday in April if You Would Be a Star

Pola Negri, Mack Sennett, May McAvoy, Bobby Agnew, Blanche Sweet, and Mr. and Mrs. Charley Eyton.

Mickey and Mary Pickford exchanged presents by express—a silver knife for a silver paper cutter.

"We've been exchanging those presents for years," said Mickey. "We are such old friends that we don't need to think of gifts—only the day."

"I don't know what Mr. Chaplin did on his birthday, April 16. Mr. Chaplin doesn't like stories about himself lumped with other movie stars.

Kenneth Roberts, who writes for a well known weekly, came out to Hollywood on an indefinite assignment. Try and get a story. He called at the Chaplin studio, but was asked before he saw Mr. Chaplin whether he intended to write a separate story or to lump the comedian.

Mr. Roberts didn't know, really.

"Mr. Chaplin doesn't care to be lumped," said the august press agent.

But Charlie did have a birthday lumped, I fear, in April.

In Honor of Fred Niblo.

Fred Niblo was honored as the man who has done most for the motion picture industry on Monday night at the opening of his picture, "They Name Is Woman," at the Mission theater. Later there was a banquet at the Biltmore, with Lew Cody master of ceremonies and Will Rogers toastmaster.

Mr. Rogers said it all about Mr. Niblo when he told the stars that every one in the picture business owed his livelihood to it, but the business owed something to Fred Niblo.

Those who came to pay homage to Mr. Niblo were Norma and Joe Schenck—Norma in white, with emerald trimming and a corsage of orchids; Lew Cody and Gertrude Astor, who wore orange velvet and white charmeuse; Norma Shearer, Irving Thalberg, Rupert Hughes, Vola Vale, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Nagel, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ray, Lucille Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rawlinson, Ruth Roland, Larry Semon and his fiancée, Miss Colletta Ryan; Frances White, Hazel Keener, and, of course, Enid Bennett, who is Mrs. Fred Niblo of Beverly Hills.

Lucille Carlisle has had her nose redecorated, and it looked very well, with her silver and lace gown and long coat of mink. Hazel Keener was in blue and gold brocade and wore a wreath of tiny leaves in her hair. Ruth Roland had a Spanish swing to her gorgeous shawl, and her black gown was splashed with scarlet beads.

Mae Murray Arrives.

Mae Murray arrived in town this week, all set to film "Circe," written for her by Blasco Ibenez. Miss Murray looked more like Clytie, with her yellow hair flying from a black tam and a yellow flower in her lapel.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McLean, who vie with Doris May and Wallace Macdonald as Hollywood's prize honeymooners, had a tin wedding anniversary last week. There was a dinner at Cocoanut Grove, and Douglas gave Mrs. Douglas a stunning set of crystal beads and earrings.

Pola Negri gave a dinner party on Tuesday. Incidentally it was a house warming. Miss Negri has moved into a bungalow at the Ambassador hotel. Every one was captivated with the colors in Miss Negri's home, especially her boudoir, which is in blue and gold, with white fur rugs, and an oil painting of Miss Negri entirely covering one wall. Kathlyn Williams was there, of course, Blanche Sweet and Mickey Neilan, Baron von Barmakow, Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Reynolds, Lew Cody, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Denny, and Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Moreno.

KEEPING FAITH

When U. S. Word Rolls were reduced during June, 1922, from $1.25 to $1.00, we pledged to improve their quality and lower their prices still more, when the volume increased sufficiently. Now the necessary volume has been realized and it becomes our pleasant duty to express our appreciation of the vastly increased popularity of U. S. Player Rolls, in terms that provide a material saving and greater enjoyment from your player piano investment.

On April 1, 1924, all $1.00 U. S. Word Rolls were reduced to 75c, without sacrificing musical excellence, workmanship, quality, quantity or materials. They will be maintained the highest grade that skill, money and eighteen years of specialization can accomplish, with the pledge of any further price reduction that increased volume may dictate.

Brady Gathers Star Cast for "Leah Klesch'na"

having been in and of the theater since he escaped from Columbia.

Sammy's early advances as a playwright were neither rapid nor particularly promising, but he struck oil in the modern sense of the term, with "Friendly Enemies," and later with "East Is West." Since then he has been able to look any dramatic critic in the eye and shout "Poof!" whenever so moved. Being of a gentle and forgiving nature, he has embraced this privilege only in private.

When a Sammy Shipman play is to be produced on Broadway its approach is frequently accompanied by strange rumblings. No one, however, is ever able to tell whether they presage the approach of the storehouse wagons or the applause of the Shipman clan.

Last week the newest of the Shipmans was offered by Richard Herndon. It is called "Cheaper to Marry," and comes in close contact with life as it is discussed at the Forty-second Street Country club. In it Mr. Shipman seeks to prove that it is much more economical to marry the girl than it is to take a flat and escape the moral and financial obligations of matrimony at the cost of self-respect, a goodly bank account, and a promising future.

Mistress vs. Wife.

The people in "Cheaper to Marry" are of the younger business set. Two of them are Jim and Charlie, who have started a glove business. They love each other even as did Damon and Pythias, but they have different ideas about settling down.

Charles is an old fashioned sort. Having met a girl, loved her for three days, and convinced himself he wants to marry her, he wishes to observe the conventions, buy the ring, hire a preacher, and start honeymooning showered with blessings and pickle forks.

Jim, on the other hand, is for the freer life. He, too, has met a girl. He, too, has reacted to the call of the mating season. But Jim is practical. A nice little apartment, a pleasant little housekeeping arrangement, a satisfying sense of freedom to go and to come as the spirit moves—that's Jim's idea of a sane domestic arrangement. All the comforts of home with no entangling conventions. And Jim's girl is willing.

The partners split on the issue, and are near a separation. Charlie refuses to give up his sweetheart or to let her associate with Jim's mistress. Then they decide to put it up to the girls. As partners in the enterprise, let them decide. And much to their surprise the girls are delighted. What are a few old conventions these days? Let everybody live as he wants to and be happy.

An Easy Thirty-six.

They start on this basis: At the end of six months the glove business is in jeopardy because Jim has taken $25,000 of the firm's money to buy his mistress pearls. Calling in their assets, the partners then discover that Jim's girl has saved herself a neat little personal account of $36,000 by pawning the pearls and by overcharging him at the stores for her clothes and pocketing the difference. This action she defends on the plea that she must look out for her future, seeing that Jim is under no obligation to take care of her. Also she refuses to give it up.

Charlie's wife, on the other hand, has accumulated no more than a squirrel coat, bought wholesale, and $8,000. Which, feeling safe, she offers to turn over.

The business appears saved as the play ends, the bank advancing money with the understanding that the safely married partner is to have charge of its future conduct.

Jim, in love by this time, asks his girl to marry him. But she has learned to love another, and he loses the $36,000. Which proves the plays' text—in the play.

Florence Eldredge plays the mistress and Claiborn Foster the ingeniously happy fire. Alan Dinehart is the good husband and Robert Warwick the free lover and pearl expert. They give the Shipman situations and dialogue, neither being altogether convincing, their chief distinction. Samuel is inclined to be a bit showy as to speech. His epigrams, for instance, include one reading, "Sex is a man's curse and a woman's currency."

Equity Getting Ready.

Did you read that the Equity actors had leased the Manhattan Opera house for the month of June?

That is their first answer to the producers' threats to force them into a strike. They may need a hall in which to give benefits and tell the folks their side of the story.

They are also advantaged in another situation. They have just produced—or that section of their membership interested in the venture has just produced—a play by Rachel Crothers called "Expressing Willie" at the Forty-eighth Street theater that looks ever so much like a hit.

Being the first play that has given them that kind of thrill during the two years they have been conducting the actors' theater, Broadway and the Lambs club, not to mention the Players and the Friars, are more or less agog.

"Expressing Willie" is another of Miss Crothers's observant American comedies, neatly touched with satire. It takes up the posing self-expressionists and gives them a jolly ride down Long Island and back. And though the author succeeds in bumping them out of their attitudes, she never completely unseats them. Which helps to make her play seem almost real.

Willie of the title is a young toothpaste king who has built himself an Italian villa on the island and been taken up by the advanced crowd that goes in strongly for individualism and the self determination of the well to do. His shrewd old Yankee mother, whose business sense has made the Smith money, is much against the intruders. Also she is eager to open Willie's eyes. So when the poseurs come to the villa for a week-end, mother sends to Tuckeryille and invites Minnie Whitcomb, Willie's boyhood sweetheart, to join them.

The guests include a garrulous artist specializing in soul portraits and psychoanalysis, and a young widow of the pursuing type, whose ambition is to achieve purple nights and the complete expression of her purring soul.

Willie Sees the Light.

Minnie, of course, is a startled gawk among them, tripping over the rugs and falling prostrate when she starts for the piano to play for them. Willie is greatly distressed. He resents mother's bringing her to the villa. And Minnie, noting his embarrassment, and loving him, seeks ever so hard to make up for her unhappy intrusion.

In her enthusiasm she goes to his room at night to tell him he must surely marry the widow of his dreams. And when the widow also comes to Willie's room, seeking, it may be, to advise him further as to his self-expression, and Minnie fights her way out of the clothes press into which Willie has locked her, she is terribly jealous and Minnie as greatly amazed.

Later Minnie, forgetting herself in her eagerness to help Willie, sits at the piano and plays a Chopin scherzo with a great deal of soul, and Willie begins to see that she is really the only real person among them. Which ends, of course, in his loving her again and his polite but firm rejection of the cult chasers.

There is much gorgeous satire in this adaptation of "The Man from Home" motif, and fortunately, as said, it is not overdone. The cheating cultists are still people and plausibly realized.

Chrystal Herne is excellent as Minnie and Richard Sterling, playing Willie, the perfect type of impressionable boob. Louise Closser Hale repeats her familiar and true study of the shrewd old Yankee mother, and the expressionists are well played by Merle Maddern, Alan Brooks and Molly McIntyre.

Elsie Janis staged a bit of a strike of her own the other day. Billed to appear in vaudeville at the Palace for a week, she noted that she was coupled in the billing with James Barton. On the banner in front of the theater their names were given equal prominence, and Elsie refuses to be co-starred with anybody anywhere. Besides, as she says, it is specifically stated in her contract that she is to enjoy all the headline privileges. So she calmly walked out of the bill.

They got along without her the rest of the week, but she came off triumphant. After mature reflection and a complete investigation E. F. Albee sent Miss Janis a check for her full week's salary of $3,500 and begged her pardon. The error, said he, was the management's.

Which means that just now the Keith circuit needs Elsie more than Elsie needs the circuit. She goes to Paris shortly to play "Sally" in French.

NEW ZEALANDERS TELL OF HEARING W-G-N PROGRAM

OHIO FARMER MAKES RECEIVER PAY "DIVIDENDS"

Method May Be Worth While to Others.

Ohio has at least one farmer who has a high class receiving set which he acquired with the firm intention of making it pay dividends. He is John Weldon of near Mansfield, and according to a recent story in the Southern Ruralist, he has more than succeeded in his original intentions. The story, which may prove of benefit to others, follows:

"When I installed my outfit in 1922 I determined to get something from the air besides music," Weldon said recently. "I could receive reports from two large city markets, and a number of smaller ones; and to keep tab on these I bought a ledger.

Keeps Ledger on Set.

"At the top of each blank page I wrote down the city where the market was located and names of the principal dealers therein, with their addresses. This book is kept on the table where the radio is located, and when I have something to market I get in touch with one of these cities and write down quotations as I receive them. Then I 'tune in' for another city and get their prices. Afterward I go over these reports and compare them.

"It is a simple matter, then, to estimate distance, shipping cost, etc., and from this I can select my market.

"Dealers in these cities are aware of my method, and I have made arrangements with them by letter to accommodate my shipments at any time. This not only applies to live stock, but to poultry, eggs, and butter. The latter articles are shipped by parcel post the morning after the quotations are received:

"I have a wide range of markets to select from where formerly I was compelled to depend upon a local buyer's quotations.

Easy to Be in Touch.

"And the radio offers another advantage: By getting weather reports and crop conditions from different parts of the country I can guess pretty accurately the trend of the market.

"From the news reports I learn beforehand about railroad strikes, freight tie-ups, grain pools, and many other conditions which are likely to affect the price of products grown upon my farm. I have a ledger filled with information of this sort, and it has become a habit with me to keep it open for new 'tips' whenever an evening's program is broadcast."

It's "Broadcast," Brother; Don't Believe Otherwise

About once a year it is necessary to call attention to the use of the word "broadcast," which should be used instead of the incorrect "broadcasted". Weather is forecast and radio concerts are broadcast.

250,000 IN RADIO INDUSTRY.

More than 250,000 persons now are directly or indirectly connected with the radio industry in the United States.

B. L. A. REDUCES INTERFERENCE BY ORGANIZED MOVE

Reports of excellent progress in tracing and eliminating several forms of radio interferences were made at the last meeting of the Broadcast Listeners' association, with headquarters at 6240 Cottage Grove avenue.

According to F. H. McDonald, president, "the worst is over," despite the fact that the B. L. A. is hardly a month in action.

Amateurs Guide Search.

Quests of sources of interference are guided by licensed amateurs, who are making efforts to impress the broadcast listeners that the amateur is even more interested than the B. L. in wiping out interferences. In an address to the members, M. H. Romberg, electrical engineer University of Chicago and operator of station 9BD, pointed out methods of tracing intereference. The talk was illustrated.

Coöperative Buying a Feature.

A feature of the organization is its coöperative buying plan, whereby purchasers of complete sets and of parts reap the benefits of expert advice and of wholesale prices. An illustrated lecture by some well known expert features each Friday evening meeting.

CODE SIGNALS CROSS CONTINENT DURING DAYLIGHT

Schenectady, N. Y., April 26.—Amateur radio signals have been transmitted across the continent in daylight. Ernest Hobbs, operator of station 2ADM in this city reports that he recently received messages on amateur wave lengths from station 6XAD, owned by Lawrence Mott of Catalina island, soon after sunrise.

The two amateurs had been conversing with each other by radio telegraph, as they had been accustomed to do a short time before daybreak, and it was not until the times of sunrise at both stations had been checked up that Hobbs realised the full significance of the feat. Of course, the three hour difference of time was taken into consideration.

For six months amateurs conveniently situated across the country have endeavored to relay a message from ocean to ocean in daylight. At one time six stations worked on schedule. Always as soon as the sun appeared the signals began to fade. Failure of this relay makes the final success the more remarkable.

2ADM transmitted on 195 meters and 6XAD on 230 meters.

I Have Found A Way To Whiten Yellow Teeth—Instantly

Here It Is—

"I never thought it was possible to have perfectly white teeth. But now I know that it is. It seemed that every dentifrice I used failed to bring the result I desired. I had about given up hope of ever removing the stubborn film on my teeth—when I saw an advertisement of Bleachodent in the paper. The very next day I went to the drug store and got a package. I really didn't believe it would whiten my teeth. But to my astonishment—like a magic wand—my teeth were affected by white! Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling! I thank the Bleachodent Dental Laboratories for their invention."

This, in substance, is what an appreciative young woman recently wrote the Bleachodent Dental Laboratories, regarding their remarkable new tooth whitener. Bleachodent Combination, the new discovery, consists of a mild liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid softens the stains, while the paste gently removes them. No effect on enamel. Bleachodent was perfected by two prominent dentists who used it on their own teeth, and on their patients' for four years with highly beneficial results before offering it to the public. Whitens yellow teeth almost instantly. Removes tobacco stains. Fine for children's teeth. Get Bleachodent Combination (containing both liquid and paste) for small cost at all good druggists.

HOOKUP AIDED BY "NAMELESS" WIRING DIAGRAM

Novice Should Find All Easy Sailing.

Study of the accompanying photograph of underbaseboard wiring of the Nameless circuit, an ideal arrangement combining efficiency with neatness, probably will convince the average novice that something has been dispensed with. Lest such fears assail let it be assured that it is all there, except for the radio frequency transformer connections, which necessarily are above the baseboard.

The photograph printed previously of underbaseboard wiring, as explained then, was of a home job. No claims were made for it; but it did for the "attic builder" more than a year's wiring practice—it aroused Harry A. Bremer, designer of the Nameless circuit, to the need of some schematic wiring guide for the average amateur builder. Hence the diagram and photograph herewith.

Constructors May Rewire.

For those who already have wired the Nameless little will be lost, for a few hours' work in wiring will transform the circuit into one of ideal arrangement.

In wiring the Nameless, or any other, circuit the main points to keep in mind are, first, arrangement, so as to keep plate and grid wires well separated or at angles to each other; second, to complete the job with the least amount of wire.

Plate and grid wires of all tubes preceding the first audio frequency transformere—that is, all R. F. tubes, including detector—must be well spaced from each other. The audio amplifier tubes may be considered as another unit and their grid leads should be well spaced from other wiring in this unit.

Plan Wiring First.

To accomplish this plan your wiring before starting. The best method is to classify the leads into "A" battery leads, "B" battery leads, tube and transformer leads.

Starting with plus A lead, note all connections which this wire must pick up, and then, starting at the binding post, for instance, arrange this wire as a feeder so placed as to pick up all these connections with least possible amount of wire. Then note carefully all connections to minus A lead and arrange this wire to make all these connections in the best manner.

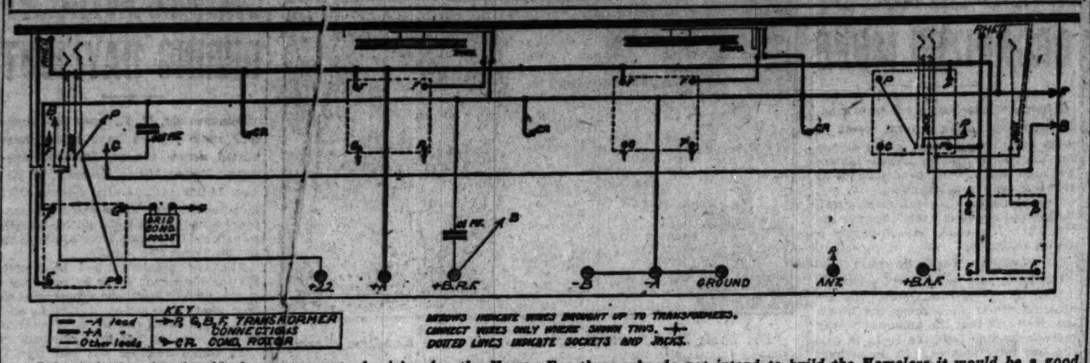
Arrange Plan First.

In the same way arrange plus B 22 post and lead, then plus B 90 connections, etc.

Do not start actual wiring until you have traced all connections, because you may find that a slight rearrangement is desirable.

It is a good plan to check off each connection on a diagram as it is made. You will find this method a great time saver.

NEW WIRING DIAGRAM FOR THE NAMELESS CIRCUIT ASSURES NEAT AND EFFICIENT CONSTRUCTION



Schematic drawing for ideal arrangement of wiring for the Nameless Circuit, by which shortest possible leads are made and at the same time grid and plate wires are kept well separated or at right angles.

For those who do not intend to build the Nameless it would be a good plan to save and study this diagram, the engineering principles of which may be applied to any circuit.

BREMER TALKS ON SET

The new Bremer-Tulley "nameless circuit" method of radio frequency amplification was explained and discussed by H. A. Bremer, its designer, at a meeting of the radio section of the Electric Club of Chicago in its rooms at the Hotel Morrison Tuesday evening.

Mr. Bremer explained how research work with radio frequency amplifiers of almost every type had led to the new method of controlling oscillation and gave a good deal of credit for development of radio frequency amplifying transformers to John L. Reinartz of Reinartz tuner fame. The speaker showed that almost all transformers used in every type of radio frequency set was an evolution of the old small, close coupled, untuned primary, with the secondary tuned by a shunt variable condenser. The problem resolved itself, he said, to one of controlling, without entirely eliminating, oscillation within the amplifier, for a good deal of poor signal strength is often due to too perfect elimination of regeneration, which makes the set dead and unresponsive.

Set Made Versatile.

In the questions which followed his talk it was shown how the controlling condensers allowed either regeneration or neutralization, and how the set could be made nonradiating and at the same time regenerative and sensitive to weak signals.

One of the high lights of Mr. Bremer's address was his expression to the effect that he believed nothing radically new had been discovered in radio since Armstrong's development of regeneration, and his single claim for the "nameless circuit" was that it provided a new method of improving control over oscillation.

J. H. Whitehead of the Universal Battery company gave a deal of information on construction and proper care of a storage battery in an address.

Plan C. R. T. A. Alliance.

A committee was formed to take charge of a movement toward meetings with the Chicago Radio Trade association, the amateur organization, and a sentiment was expressed for closer contact and better understanding between the B. C. L. and the amateur.

THE INVISIBLE AUDIENCE

The machinist, the electrical worker, the elevator boy, the janitor, and the watchman are all listening in on the wireless telephone, together with the banker, the engineer, the merchant, the executive and the student. If there ever was a cosmopolitan audience in the history of the world the invisible audience of radio is the last word.

All other audiences in the past have been members of a local community. The individuals had more or less similar tastes and experiences in life. They lived in the same climate; ate the same things. They were all brought up amid similar environment; they were subject to much the same mental, physical, and moral influences and seeking entertainment from the same kind of amusements.

But the radio audience is different. That is why it is a new factor.

To millions the Woolworth building is only a picture; thousands have never seen a battleship or an Atlantic liner, much less set foot upon one or explored the marvels below deck.

Other thousands who are "listening in" have never been in the country and would not know a bullfrog's evening serenade from the lowing of cattle. Thousands have never seen snow or frost or natural ice or a mountain; and thousands living on the prairies have never seen a hill.

To some the song of the nightingale is well known; to others, that of the whip-poor-will. Some have hunted the deer but have never seen a coyote, and others have fished for cod and hunted whale in northern waters but know nothing of the crocodile or alligator. Thousands among the vast radio audience have tramped the forest and can tell the spruce, fir, and balsam from the hemlock, pine, and cedar, while others live amid the royal palms and the cactus plants.

All breathe the same air, you all listen to the same programs that come through this same air. What will this new brotherhood do in years to come to advance the progress of the human race? No one can say.

WTAS EXPECTS TO RAISE $10,000 FOR FIRE WIDOWS

Radio WTAS's campaign to raise funds for the widows and orphans of the firemen killed at Curran hall is expected to net a fund of $10,000, according to figures given out by Charles E. Erbstein, owner of the Villa Olivia station.

Thousands of dollars' worth of radio apparatus has been donated by manufacturers, jobbers, and dealers of the city, this to be given away in the form of prizes as a stimulus to the campaign for funds. These will be distributed at Guyon's Paradise ballroom next Sunday afternoon. In addition the receipts of the ballroom for that afternoon will be donated to the fund.

The campaign is carried on nightly over WTAS (286).

PACIFIC RADIO EXPOSITION ON NO-PROFIT PLAN

Breaking away from the conventional, the Pacific Radio Trade association has launched plans for the Pacific radio exposition under its own management. The show, it is announced, will be conducted on a cooperative nonprofit plan, the exhibitors to share 50 per cent of the profits.

The exposition will be held at San Francisco, Cal., in the civic auditorium, Aug. 16 to 21.

The executive committee comprises: A. S. Lindstrom, chairman; P. L. Jensen, F. J. Cramm, H. W. Dickow, and C. C. Langevin. Headquarters are in the Pacific building, San Francisco.

Maj. Gen. O'Ryan, Henry Van Dyke Will Be Heard Tonight

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan of the national army, commander of the 27th division in Belgium and France, will tell his view on "America's Interest in World Peace" at the o'clock meeting of the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, master of letters, minister to the Netherlands, and later at his own request, chaplain in the navy, will speak on "Signs of the Times" at the main meeting beginning at 8 o'clock. David R. Forgan and the Rev. Herbert W. Prince of Lake Forest also will have a part in this service.

Radio to Play Big Part in Presidential Campaign

Whether or not "radio elects the next President," as some enthusiasts have prophesied, it will play a tremendously important part in the Presidential campaign this year.

A.R.R.L. TO STUDY MANY PUZZLING PHASES OF RADIO

Tests Planned to Help Public Generally.

Hartford, Conn., April 26.—Believing that problems affecting the transmission and reception of signals are a long way from being solved to the satisfaction of the radio public, the technical department of the American Radio Relay league is giving an increasing amount of thought to the development of its experimental section.

Various phenomena connected with radio reception will be studied under a variety of weather conditions by men whose different geographic locations add much to the importance and value of the data gained in this manner. The effect of the moon's phases upon reception, signal strength in daylight, dead spots, and efficiency of wave lengths below 90 meters will be explored.

Many Tests in View.

Experimenters have been asked to conduct tests with filters, rectifiers, counterpoises, special coils and helices. Included as a part of the current work, it has been suggested that information be sought as to the desirable material for condenser insulation, best disposition of this material, effect of frequency upon condenser resistance, effect of the material and thickness upon coil resistance and other kindred subjects.

BRITISH AGAIN FAIL IN AROUND WORLD BROADCAST EFFORT

The effort to have the voice of King George heard around the world as he delivered a speech in opening the Wembley exhibition Wednesday failed of success, according to reports from radio enthusiasts throughout the empire. Some 10,000,000 of the king's subjects in the British Isles heard the resonant nuances of his voice, while the cabled message circled the globe along all the British cable routes and was returned to the king's temporary throne in the big exhibition stadium in eighty seconds. The royal voice itself, however, did not carry beyond the British isles. Radio fans in Canada, Africa, Australia and India listened vainly, except for isolated cases, when snatches of speech or music were heard.

WBZ Will Broadcast M. E. General Conference

News of Methodist Episcopal general conference which meets in Springfield, Mass., during the entire month of May, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, (337). There will be a summary of the proceedings each day at 10 a. m. (Chicago daylight saving time). Many of the evening sessions including addresses by men of national reputation, and music by famous artists will be broadcast each evening. Addresses of bishops also will be broadcast.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

Perhaps when the day arrives that witnesses the end of wired transmission of electrical impulses the radio world will have been freed of interference of all types. Until then the struggle to keep from the ether various forms of parasitic frequencies will have to be piecemeal.

With the amateurs of Chicago organized to hunt out offenders in their ranks who fail to observe silent hours, and formation of at least one effective Broadcast Listeners' association, there is certain to be a vast improvement in reception before summer rolls by.

Another hopeful sign is in the full awakening of amateurs and commercial stations to the utter needlessness of the obsolete spark set with its load of interference over a wide band of frequencies. Where dozens of spark sets could be heard at any time a year ago, few are extant, although it is within the range of these few to create a lot of unpleasant interference whenever they are on the air.

Perhaps nowhere, with the possible exception of New York, is interference more intense than in Chicago; perhaps nowhere is there greater need for organized effort toward its elimination, or, at least, modification.

This, however, cannot be reached by newspaper space, nor by any individual's efforts, but must be arrived at through district organization. Such grouping of broadcast listeners is a certainty of the near future in all congested districts, and, in fact, wherever interference is the rule rather than the exception.

The voice of the radioan will not penetrate far into the sources of correctible annoyance until it speaks through numbers, but it will be heard then.

But with these crossing affairs there is no such thing as right angles, for they have no definite direction, but amble aimlessly, first east and west, then north and south, then touch several between points of the compass before diving under the tracks for the business in hand—that of ringing the warning bells at crossings and blotting out weak signals on sensitive receivers within a radius of at least a block. And this, combined with the whistles and howls emanating from the radiating antennae of the people who don't know how to tune regenerative receivers, or who do know but don't care whether their neighbor enjoys life or not, real reception beyond local stations is out of the question.

Elevated trains require power, crossings need warning signals, and these necessities are paramount to a radio evening sans the disturbed clatter of a bell to drown out a critical musical night; but there doesn't seem to be any reason why these lines cannot have a definite direction on a straight stretch of track so that owners of radios can reduce this induction with antennae set at right angles.

So far as the radiating receiver goes, its day is about over. Conscious owners of these will, through a sense of fairness, correct their contributions to the present radio nightmare, or be stamped as peace disturbers through choice.

ECHOES OF THE HEAD PHONES

A. W. "SEN" KANEY.

BY ELMER DOUGLASS.

"Now don't go 'way."

It isn't often that you're offered a chance to tune into what's past, you know, although that opener suggests something that is to come—rather some one, and that "some one" is "Sen" Kaney, whose thunder I have stolen. His is the voice that we are to hear from W-G-N, beginning Tuesday; the voice that in one instant can assume the dignity of a prince introducing a king and in the next cleverly amuse children and grownups, make people laugh or cry at will, make chicks chuckle or birds sing.

Congratulations. These are for W-G-N, its audience, and "Sen," too. But, "don't go 'way, folks."

Still fresh is the memory of the program of Easter music given by St. Bride's Catholic church choir on last Saturday night from WMAQ. The Chicago Theater male quartet, heard from the same station a little earlier in the evening, is likewise still ringing in my ears. A peculiarity of this quartet is the individuality of each voice, yet blending with a vigorous, rather than the smooth effect usual with good quartets.

Carolyn Schuyler, pianist, one of this evening's lights at W-G-N.

As though that were not enough, the operatic concert by soloists at KYW's Congress hotel studio was, to the writer, reminiscent of his operatic days and a real joy.

From a technical point of view Brunhilde's Valkyrie cry, call, or whatever it is, from Wagner's "Die Walküre," sung by Mia Sikova Gierman, was remarkable.

Sunday night the Drake Concert ensemble gave a first reading of Rachmaninoff's "Romanza," it being the closing number on their 9:15 p. m. concert—an extremely delicate composition. Hope this number will be repeated every so often.

One always enjoys hearing from our friends, so it was with keen interest I listened to Tom Malie and Jack Little at WOC, Davenport, Monday night.

One of the exceptional treats of the week was the Shakespeare anniversary program Wednesday evening by pupils of the Kenwood public school, Chicago.

The Elizabethan period music to Shakespeare's songs stood the test of comparison with modern compositions nicely. Seems to me programs of a historical nature like this might be given more often. They should be popular.

Was about prepared, mentally, to write a paragraph on the inadvisability of using tragic themes for radio dramas or playlets. But Martha Russell, with her playlet, "Thy Neighbor's Wife," at W-G-N Wednesday night, upset, or at least materially changed my preconceived theories.

"Thy Neighbor's Wife" is the only radio drama heard that scored a real hit with me.

Won't some one give the comedies a tryout?

Women's Overseas League Announces Its First Benefit

By Kate Webber.

NORTH SHORE folk who have been wondering what "A Perfect Forty-eight" can be will find their answer at the Auditorium on Friday and Saturday evenings, when the musical comedy by that bewildering title is staged under the auspices of the Women's Overseas league.

The league is made up of Red Cross nurses, canteeners, social workers, entertainers, and others who wore the uniform in France, and who helped to fight the battles of homesickness and despair for the American doughboys back of the lines or even in the trenches.

This is the organization's first appeal in behalf of the disabled ex-service women, hundreds of whom were gassed or wounded on the firing line, and who are now in need of help.

"A Perfect Forty-Eight" is a blue joint comedy, the joint work of Lieut. Vaughan Bailey, Miss Marjorie Valentine, an overseas girl and hostess at Great Lakes, and Robert A. Seidel, chief yeoman. It will be enacted by the jackies, with the assistance of some local talent.

Among the patronesses are Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Holmes Forsyth, Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. Noble B. Judah, Judge Mary Bartelme, Mrs. Edward P. Bailey, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. A. A. Sprague, and many others.

Mrs. Robert D. Usher is chairman of the committee on arrangements, with Miss Ethel Mills as vice chairman. Others actively interested are Miss Louise Wells, national president of the league; Miss Louise Hately, Mrs. Lloyd Maxwell, and Miss Sara Frances Jones.

The comedy deals with a merry masquerader, a dream girl, who in the denouement is revealed merely as a gob.

Nuns to Open Mission Here

A GROUP of Chicago women, gathered from all sections of the city, has organized a club known as the Little Flower Settlement auxiliary in order to finance and assist in other ways the work of a small community of nuns that is preparing to come to Chicago to do sociological work on the west side. These nuns are known as "The Helpers of Holy Souls" and they are the first order of nuns to take on sociological work in all its branches. They will do field work the same as lay workers. They are already established in New York, San Francisco, and St. Louis, where they have had considerable success with their missions.

The Little Flower Settlement auxiliary has pledged itself to support the Chicago mission, and its first step on behalf of the settlement will be a dancing and card party to be held at the Coliseum, Wabash avenue and 16th street, on the evening of Saturday, May 4. Mrs. Thomas J. Healy, chairman of the executive committee of the auxiliary, has full charge of the arrangements for the party. She has enlisted the aid of a group of business men which, under the leadership of Dennis J. Egan, has secured popular entertainers to furnish a program to be given between dances. Through the settlement organization 1,100 men and women have guaranteed the success of this party and have promised further help in carrying on the work of the Little Flower mission of the Sacred Heart parish.

Miss Ann Cusack is active in the work to make the party a success.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE members of the committee in charge of husbands' night were getting the invitations ready to mail.

"It has always seemed strange to me that men have clubs exclusively for men and women have clubs exclusively for women," remarked the newly married member. "I think we should have more of our clubs open to both."

"It doesn't work," disagreed the public official. "I belonged to a professional club once that had both men and women members. Everything went along beautifully as long as the men held the most important positions. Then a woman was elected president, and, if you please, the gallant sex withdrew and formed a club of its own. I wonder, would you call it jealousy?"

"There was a striking case along that line recently at a well known university," contributed the chairman. "The four class clubs had always elected men presidents and women vice presidents. It so happened that for one cause and another three of the men presidents had to leave the university. The women vice presidents proceeded to take the presidential chairs, as they should have, according to fair play and general precedent, but were they allowed to keep them? No, they were not. The men students got together and elected three new class presidents—men!"

"I used to belong to a club of both men and women that was successful," recalled the senior member. "It was a fellowship club and we had two presidents, a man and a woman. One presided at one meeting and the other presided at the next meeting. It worked out satisfactorily."

"I'm strong for the clubs just as they are," declared the committee secretary. "Men enjoy having their own clubs, and we women enjoy having our own clubs. It's good for each of us to have one place in which we can rule supreme."

Beauty and Luxor

There is no formula for beauty. How often regular, statuesque features leave us cold and unmoved, while a face with no seeming claim to beauty delights us with its glowing loveliness.

The answer—naturalness! Dame Nature has many moulds. She would make each—in its own way—beautiful. But man tries to improve on Nature's artistry—and fails.

Truly beautiful is she who brings out to the full the loveliness with which Nature has endowed her.

That is why she loves LUXOR COMPLEXION POWDER. It helps her to keep fresh the velvety skin of youth. Luxor was never intended to supply a mask. It cannot mix with perspiration, cannot become pasty.

Instead, its feathery, fine-bolted softness clings to the face—produces that even, natural texture that makes youth so beautiful.

For every need there is a Luxor Requisite of equal worth—rouges, creams, perfumes, specialties. Sold everywhere.

These news items reproduced here were clipped from WOMEN'S WEAR, the Retailers' daily newspaper, published every business day in New York. Here are some of the paragraphs:

—The basement department was so jammed with customers that it was almost impossible to move around.

—The high spot was Leiter Building Store's basement, where they were forced to open the doors fifteen minutes earlier than usual because of the crowds.

—The company estimated that they cleared about 3,500 dresses during the first hour of the sale.

—A new non-stop record was established (a week by the Leiter Building Store, Women's Wear Magazine).

—There was a fair response from the buyers.

ART AND ARTISTS

Three Exhibitions of Note in Print Rooms of Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE are three exhibitions of interest at present in the print rooms of the Art institute. Two are by contemporary artists, the third by an Englishman, Thomas Rowlandson, dead almost this hundred years. Neither death nor time, however, has staled his charm or weakened the wit that caricatured the foibles of his generation.

an Englishman, Thomas Rowlandson, dead almost this hundred years. Neither death nor time, however, has staled his charm or weakened the wit that caricatured the foibles of his generation.

Arthur B. Davies, possibly, ranks first in any enumeration of the three men. First, because his manner of work has become something of a fad. Not to like him, not to understand him is a sign of something hideously lacking in you. He is properly looked upon as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, contemporary painters of purely imaginative and decorative pictures. If it is hard to feel a fondness for his vastly tall, nude, golden females, that feeling must be encouraged, the negative suppressed.

Upstairs in the institute a room of his paintings in oil may be seen. In the print rooms the exhibit confines itself to drawings in black and white, with a rare sprinkling of drawings in color. In two examples are the figures clothed, one a charming group of two boys, brothers, and the other a landscape, dominated by two peasant women in peasant garb, a beautiful composition. The rest of the drawings deal mostly with studies of the female form, sometimes complete, sometimes minus shoulders or head or limbs. As studies they have their place. Willingly one grants them more than one dares give in the way of approval to the little cases of tiny sculpture efforts by Mr. Davies, to be found upstairs with the oils.

Such a drawing as "Venus Surrounded by Animals" has a primitive kind of charm. It draws a smile of sympathetic understanding to the lips. This none too beautiful goddess, as portrayed here, lolls negligently, clad only in her skin, upon the back of a mild mannered ass; a dove flutters from one outstretched hand; other doves circle about; a goat munches a reflective mouthful of hay; another one of many lovely pictures.

"The Fountain," by John Singer Sargent, is in the permanent collection of the Art institute and possesses particular interest, as it is one of the group of paintings by Sargent being shown at the institute through the months of April and May.

an adorable kid stands by its side, cocking unafraid ears at all it hears and sees. The type of picture, you readily see, that makes an instant appeal to one's sympathies.

In other moods, there are "The Wave," a beautiful flood of human figures; "By the Caliban Sea," breathing romance; and "The Temple," a picturesque effort. For the most part, however, there are figures and figures, most of them exquisitely proportioned, all of women or young girls, used again and again to illustrate a thousand subjects—spring, autumn, summer, and what the artist wills. If you have sufficient interest in the one theme endlessly expounded, you will probably care for the exhibit; otherwise, you may find yourself turning with a sigh of relief to the north corner of the room where, like a breath of fresh air, are waiting you a number of invigorating etchings by Anders Zorn and a few more restrained, rather prim, altogether classical, etchings by Meryon.

This Zorn and Meryon group, however, is just by the way. The next important thing to see is the collection of block prints in color by Gustave Baumann, lent from the William Gold Hibbard Jr. Memorial collection. Unless you see these you will not understand the marvelous beauty of color and composition that it is possible for a wood cut to possess. The exhibit is a revelation in this art.

Two linoleum cuts, wonderfully smooth, are "Interior Stable" and "Froehliche Weihnachten." Strangers from Hopi Lands," a wood cut in color, shows some of the strange gods worshiped by the Hopi tribes of Indians. They are awesome, but splendid. Below this hangs "Playroom Toys," a child's dream of glorious possessions.

Illustrations for a book by James Whitcomb Riley are good and other spicy illustrations, full of blood and thunder, leering faces, shining cutlasses, bounding seas and full sailed ships, to point the excitements in a pirate book, remind one of Peter Pan and his pirate crew, and are as deathless as those bandits.

Returning again to the pictorial in the wood cuts, we find "Summer Breezes," a harmonious blending of skillful composition and delightful color, and "Road of a Morning," another one of many lovely pictures.

The exhibition is extremely good.

The water color drawings by Rowlandson (1756-1827) have many of them a humor that might have been born of Dickens or Punch. Some of them recall customs that have since died out. The "Fitting a Wig" is an example. Then, a misdemeanor not dead but still concealed, the adventure in "A Surprise Visit," where the wife pushes her lover back of the fire screen to hide him from the wrath of her husband, who rushes in unexpectedly from the hunt, his dogs bounding beside him, himself still in his scarlet coat and hunting hat with his whip in his hand.

Then there is the "Classical Studio," a room filled with modest statues of Roman emperors and ladies, the visiting man and wife and the urgent sculptor. Another romance is written in "Filial Affection," the father pursuing on a dashing steed his errant son, who, brandishing pistols, is eloping with his lady love in a galloping post chaise to Gretna Green. The "Apothecary Shop," the "Cock Fight," "Poverty," and "Days of Prosperity" all dip humorously into the pages of life as lived in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.

Other amusingly instructive drawings are those showing glimpses of places or countries such as "Hitchin Market Place, "Hotel de Flandres, Brussels," "Angel Inn at Islington," and "Covent Garden."

Artists like Rowlandson are all too rare. Every generation should have one, but it is the privileged generation that has. Wit, humor caricature, charm, good color, and significant expression, these qualities are inherent in his work. Where is his successor in this generation and when will America produce this type of cartoonist? England is not as poor in such talent as we. France, too, has those clever with brush and pencil to touch up her affections and foibles. Perhaps with the years we shall grow a race of Hogarths, Cruickshanks, or Rowlandsons to point our fashions, customs, and weaknesses to the lenient eyes of future Americans.

The next important event at the Art Institute is the opening on Thursday of this week, May 1, of the thirty-seventh annual Chicago architectural exhibition and of the twenty-second annual exhibition of applied arts. In other years some little dissatisfaction nas been aroused over the installation of the architectural show. This year a member of the Architectural club cooperated with the Art institute hanging committee so it will be arranged satisfactorily to everyone.

The applied arts exhibit will include work of most of the foremost decorative artists in the country. Some of the pieces have been selected from the New York architectural show. There are to be decorative sculpture and decorative painting. The examples of work shown this year are limited to objects possessing originality in design and being distinctively modern in material and treatment. Anything smacking of former periods has been discarded. Quality of design marks the exhibit, merely expert handling of material is not enough to win admission.

A group of foreign work has been included. French wall papers, textiles and ceramics will be seen; Danish ceramics and silver; a few German and Austrian things—but French predominates.

Among the artists who will be represented are Robert Chandler, Charles Prendergast, Marguerite Zorach, William Varnum Poor, Samuel Yellin, Anthony De Francisci (showing over-door panels that will be placed in the Chauncey McCormick apartment), George Biddle, Marie Zimmerman, and Hunt Diederich.

The Little Gallery of the Artists' guild announces an exhibition of unique photographs, made with neither lens nor camera, called rayographs, by Man Ray, a Roumanian modern artist. Line engravings by C. E. Uphoff, a young artist from Verpswede, will also be shown. The exhibitions opened last Monday.

Charles W. Dahlgreen has returned from his trip west, and has gone on a short sketching visit to Brown county, that favorite haunt of many of our best Chicago artists. His etching, "The Open Road," a charming thing, has been given for publication in the Art School books.

In Search of a Tray.

My most embarrassing moment occurred one day last week while I was downtown shopping. Being tired of shopping all morning and being hungry I decided to stop in at a cafeteria and have a bite to eat.

After getting my lunch, I located a table and went back for a glass of water. Lo and behold! I had forgotten where I left my tray. The place was crowded with patrons and to hide my embarrassment and confusion I went back for another glass of water, thinking that by doing so I would be able to get my bearings. But even then, I couldn't remember.

Well, to make the long story short, I was compelled to go to the proprietor who was standing near by, and ask him. He would mind helping me to find my tray. We walked from one table to another and finally I spied it. But by this time it seemed that every one in the place knew what predicament I was in. Amid their laughter and excitement, I can honestly say that the rest of the lunch in less than five minutes, and was glad to get out into the street again. V. M. J.

Never Came Back.

When I was a kid, a big fat man stopped me in front of a cigar store on a hot afternoon and asked me to hold his ice cream cone for him while he would return from said cigar store and he would give me a quarter.

Boy, that was the most tempting and embarrassing moment in my life, with me in the shade.

And that fat man never did come back, and the cone died in my hand.

Class in Action.

I am a school teacher, and at present am teaching a class of boys. The school had just got some shoemaker outfits for my class, and I was to give them a lesson that day. As a beginning I had each boy take off his left shoe, and I took off mine. I was just explaining how the vamp is made when some one knocked.

Thinking it was the janitor, I called "Come in."

In walked two young women teachers who were visiting the school. There we were with one shoe off and one on.

"Sit down," I stammered, and proceeded to occupy the only chair.

While fumbling about for my shoe I signaled the boys to get theirs on. Of course, they got the signals mixed, and by the time the visitors left my hair was wilted and my face looked like a large crimson rambler. H. P.

Figures Won't Lie.

I went shopping, and on my return I stopped at the grocery store and paid my week's bill. After I arrived home I figured up my bills and found I was 10 cents short on the grocery bill. I hurried back to the store, not waiting to see if the groceryman's figures agreed with mine.

"Mr. Levie, I think you owe me 10 cents. Give me credit in lemons," I said.

"O," he said, "you owe me a dime." It was so embarrassing. I could hardly say, "I beg your pardon."

Over the Line.

When I went to high school I was an enthusiastic football fan. One day when the game was more exciting than usual I forgot myself and stepped far over the side lines. The signals were given and before I could get out of the way one of the players ran into me, throwing me to the ground. I was not hurt, but was dreadfully embarrassed. I was always careful to stay behind the lines after that. L. W.

Made His Escape.

I was in the diner. Just as I attempted to cut a piece of lamb chop the train gave a violent jerk, throwing meat and potatoes clear to the next town. As I am only 15 and easily embarrassed, I finished my dinner in less than five minutes. I then tipped the waiter, departing as fast as my feet would carry me. C. M.

Add Social Errors.

I was giving a musical recital with a dancer.

We were both waiting to begin and I said to her, "What a hideous dress your teacher has on."

"My mother brought it to her from Paris," replied the dancer, eyeing me frostily. C. N.

Out Came the Sleeves.

When I was about 8 years old my mother made me a pretty plaid dress to wear to school. I was much pleased with it and felt proud the first morning I walked down the aisle with it on. After the first recess, during which we played several outdoor games, I felt that I had the most embarrassing moment that could befall any one, as both sleeves came out of my dress because mother forgot she had only basted them in. L. E. G.

Mistaken.

On coming home one afternoon I saw a man busily at work under my husband's car, and as some one had recently stolen the tires, I supposed I was looking at the thief, so hastened in and called the police. In a few minutes a detective arrived, and I went out to the car, where the man was still working. Imagine my embarrassment when I found he was a friend of my husband. He knew that some things had been stolen from the car and was taking off several parts for my husband so that they would not be stolen on his afternoon off. O. C. J.

He Bought a Bed for His Books

One of the lovers of Way Back Whens in the furniture world found what he considers a treasure in objects of interest and beauty. It was an old Breton folding bed. It is now a bookcase, the chef d'oeuvre of his Paris studio.

It seems the original in-a-door bed was in use long ago in Brittany, long before kitchenettes and other modern accompaniments were conceived. Only the folding beds of those days were ornaments as well as utilities. They were big and awkward, but they shut up into cases that were carved and painted in beautiful ways. And the artist who discovered their loveliness and the use they could be put to seised one and took it back to Paris for his own use. He simply had a wooden back and shelves added and painted, using the same old sliding doors of the bed for the doors of his bookcase. The result is a handsome, most unusual and commodious piece of furniture, and those who have seen it and him say that quite a rage for the same sort of thing is starting.

Another whisper of furniture whims that comes to this country from Paris is the popularity for rustic furniture. Many are choosing it for their living room or dining room. Perhaps it's the reaction after the passion for period things, and the fatigue of upholstering and draping that inevitably goes with the re-doing of one's habitation. Anyway, the simplest of rustic pieces are in vogue, with suitable cretonne, gingham, or chintz cushions and hangings to harmonize.

It was a summer hotel, not exactly modern.

"If you are an early riser," answered the clerk. "You won't find anybody in the ocean before 7."

Right.

How He Knew.

"Speaking of railroad service in Georgia," said a traveling salesman of Baltimore, "one day I was waiting for a train in a small town of that state. One hour, two hours, three hours passed but no train pulled in.

"I was about to negotiate for a vehicle to drive me to the place I wished to make, when the station agent said: "I wouldn't go to that trouble, sir. The train'll be along soon now."

"What makes you think so?"

"Well," he drawel, "I'm pretty certain of it. Here comes the conductor's dog now." G. P.

Just the Same.

Dr. Crabbe had almost succeeded in dismissing Mrs. Gassoway when she stopped in the doorway, exclaimed, "Why, doctor, you didn't look to see if my tongue was coated!"

"I know it isn't," said the doctor, wearily. "You never find grass on a race track." W. W.

Proof Enough.

Ethel—How do you know Gladys is engaged to Jack, dear? Have you seen the ring?

Clara—No, but I saw them both in gallery seats at the theater. B. M.

Madam's New Hat Has a Monogram

Again the monogram! It seems to be the one touch needed to make the world turn round. Only this time it isn't in evidence. It's just one of these nice little finishing bits that gives a woman confidence that she is perfectly garbed, down to the tiniest detail.

For the dernier cri of the millinery branch of service is that a monogram shall adorn the lining of madam's new hat. Not that it's necessary as in the case of men's headwear, for purposes of identification—heaven forbid that there be even one duplicate of one's cherished Easter bonnet!—but it's the dash of supernicety that is important to poise and self esteem. And the hat departments and shops will have it done for their patrons, some of them even going so far as to make no charge. Which makes it even nicer for her who watches the pennies and loves the luxuries.

If One Prefers Chic to Comfort

Higher and higher is the call of the collar for this and the coming season, the pitch being raised, no doubt, by the tailored rage that has swept the feminine world onto its street feet. Boyish shirts have superseded round collared blouses and vestees; nice little boyish shirts with narrow pointed collars that fit snugly about one's neck, giving a finished effect. And they're not even resting there for a breathing spell.

The most chic thing, if one prefers being chic to being comfortable, is the high close fitting stock or cravat. It isn't every one who can indulge the desire for the ultra, when it gets right down to a matter of stocks and such bonds. Some necks were never meant for severity of that sort. Nor were some faces. But there are women built so that even the most trying collar line looks well, and they fill the hearts of observers—feminine—with green envy. Being beautiful, even startling, in evening clothes isn't such a difficult proposition for a woman of taste. But being eye riveting and pleasing at the same time in one's tailormades is a job, indeed. Ask any one who says she simply has to wear soft, ruffly things.

White organdy or soft silk or linen, with an occasional black note if one wishes, is the smartest thing for the new neckwear, matching well the dark simplicity of the most attractive suits.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Methodist General Conference to Vote on Plan of Union

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE REV. CHARLES W. GILKEY.
[Mabel Sykes Photo.]

THE general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which meets every four years, represents a world membership of nearly 5,000 and is the lawmaking body of the church, will convene this week in Springfield, Mass., continuing in session throughout the month. The conference opens officially on Thursday, but for two days previous there will be public meetings and on Wednesday evening a reception to the bishops and visiting delegates. The main meetings and receptions will be held in the municipal auditorium.

The official delegates number 850. Of these seventy nine come from countries outside the United States, China, Corea, Japan, Malaysia, the Philippines, South America, and several countries of Europe, including Austria, Germany, France, Italy, the Balkans, Norway and Sweden. There is an equal number of ministers and laymen, each of the 162 conferences being represented by at least one minister and one layman. From Rock River conference, which includes the territory in and around Chicago, there will be eight ministers and eight laymen. There are thirty-eight bishops, all of whom are on the active list, except Bishop Joseph C. Hartzell, who is retired. Some will be retired at this conference, and some new ones may be elected, but nothing is certain until the conference votes on the matter except in the retirement of those who have reached the age limit of 73.

One of the most important of the questions will be the proposed union of the two largest branches of the Methodist Episcopal church, which were separated on the slavery question in 1844. Four years ago the plan of union was rejected, but under the revised plans for two jurisdictions many believe union is possible. Other questions will center in the attitude toward war, the limiting of the term of the bishops, consolidation of the boards and benevolent agencies, the relation of the church in foreign countries to the church in America, the realignment of the Church Advocates, and the amusement question, which has been debated quadrennially for the last fifty-two years. It is not thought that doctrinal questions will cause much debate.

A union ministers' meeting under the auspices of the Chicago Church federation will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 at Association auditorium, 19 South La Salle street. The Rev. Theodore Kemp, D. D., associate secretary of the commission on international justice and good will of the Churches of Christ in America, and the Rev. Samuel Chadwick, D. D., president of Cliff college, England, fraternal delegate to the Methodist general conference at Springfield, Mass., will be the speakers. Dr. Kemp's subject will be, "The Crusade of the Church for a Warless World." Dr. Chadwick was president of the conference in Great Britain and Ireland in 1918. Today at 11 o'clock Dr. Chadwick will preach in St. James' Methodist Episcopal church at the Kenwood club, 47th street and Lake Park avenue.

Christ Evangelical Lutheran church, Wilson and Spaulding avenues, the Rev. George P. Lottich, pastor, will dedicate today its main auditorium, which completes a church plant valued at $200,000. The church and parish house are of dark brick trimmed with Bedford stone. Ivar Viehe Naess & Co. are the architects. The Rev. J. F. Seibert, D. D., will preach at 10:30 and the Rev. H. M. Bannen, D. D., Rockford, Ill., will speak at 3 p. m. Home coming and community night will be observed on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

A musical will be given at 8:15 this evening in Temple Judea, 1227 Independence boulevard. Rabbi Leon Fram will speak at the temple next Friday evening on "What Civilization Owes to the Jew."

The Rev. Charles W. Gilkey is pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church, Woodlawn avenue and 56th street, which will begin next Friday the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the church in 1874. The celebration will continue to May 21, when a dinner will be held marking the completion of a campaign for the erection of a new $100,000 community house for Sunday school and social purposes.

Next Friday evening and on Friday evening, May 9, a pageant entitled "The Church Triumphant" will be given in six episodes. Next Sunday morning the Rev. Mr. Gilkey will preach the anniversary sermon. An anniversary reception will be held Monday evening, May 5, and an anniversary service the evening of May 6. The every member canvass will be conducted May 11-21. Dr. T. W. Goodspeed has written a history of the church, which will be printed in book form and distributed during the celebration.

Mr. Gilkey is one of the youngest ministers in America holding so important a pastorate. He was graduated at Harvard university and Union Theological seminary, New York, and has been in demand as a speaker at many other colleges and universities. He was active as a lecturer in war service. He will go to India next fall to deliver a series of lectures in the principal cities of the empire on the Haskell foundation. He will also visit China, Egypt, and Palestine. His rank as a preacher is evidenced by the invitation to preach for five Sundays this summer in Westminster chapel, London, where Dr. Hutton is pastor following the late famous Dr. J. H. Jowett. He will leave England for India in October.

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commander of the 27th division of the American army in Belgium and France during the world war, will speak on "America's Interest in World Peace" at 7 o'clock this evening at the Sunday Evening club, and Dr. Henry Van Dyke, author and diplomat, will speak at 8 o'clock on "Signs of the Times." Clifford W. Barnes will preside. David R. Forgan and the Rev. Herbert W. Prince will take part in the service, and the choir of 100 will sing.

Today at 11 o'clock the Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban will dedicate St. Felicitas Catholic church, school, and convent at 83d place and Blackstone avenue. The dedicatory sermon will be preached by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. F. A. Purcell, D. D., rector of the Quigley Preparatory seminary. The new church will seat 600, the school 200 pupils, and the convent will have accommodations for eight sisters. The pastor is the Rev. John S. Morris.

A solemn memorial service for the firemen who lost their lives in the Curran hall fire will be held on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in the Cathedral of the Holy Name, North State and Superior streets. Members of the Chicago police and fire departments, Mayor Dever, and his cabinet will attend. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. William J. Gorman.

NECKS ARE NOTHING WITH A SILVER CUP AT STAKE—This striking picture shows the field taking Becher's Brook during the running recently of the Grand National steeplechase in England. The way the horse in the foreground has negotiated the barrier makes it seem simple enough, but proving it is not as easy as it seems is the riderless jumper at the lower left.

EFFECTIVE DISGUISE—Marshal Foch is shown in the streets of Rome, where he is spending the season. In his civilian garb he is rarely recognized as France's great war hero.

WHEN THE SEA DEMANDS ITS TOLL—The sinking of the S. S. Glyndon in the Atlantic off Cape Hatteras is shown in this remarkable photograph taken by Fred Ward, third assistant engineer of the S. S. Canova, which rescued twenty-two members of the crew. The captain and two of his aids remained aboard and gave their lives as tradition requires when the vessel plunged to the bottom of the sea.

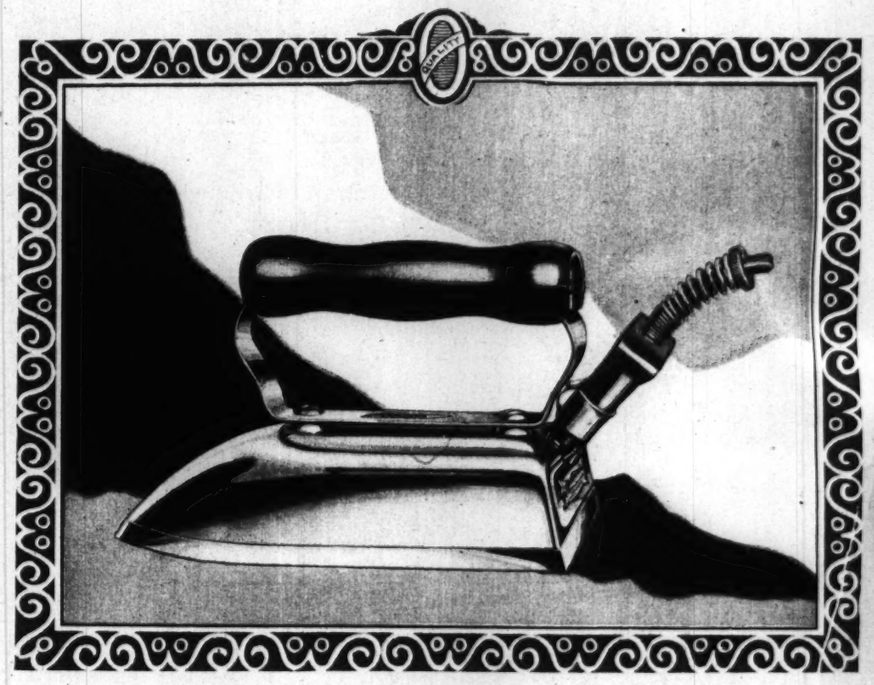
After Ironing Where do you put the hot Iron?



Now-the wonderful Sunbeam comes in a Handy Heat-Proof Steel Case

Wherever the iron is regularly kept—the pantry shelf, the kitchen cabinet, the shelf in the closet—it can now be put there immediately after ironing.

To the Man of the House:

With your man's viewpoint of what is best in design, construction and workmanship, you recognize in what we say here and what you see here that the SUNBEAM is truly the IRON OF IRONS and the iron outfit for your home.

For thirty-four years we have made quality products—and for thirteen years we have been making electric irons. As a result of our long experience we are now building the one best iron outfit ever put into the American home.

The outstanding value of the SUNBEAM sets it apart from and above all other irons. Your wife and your home are deserving of this marvelously perfect iron outfit.

Ask your dealer to send up a SUNBEAM Iron and case, or stop in tomorrow and see one. When you see it you will want your home to have it.

Haven't you always wanted a handy, substantial, good-looking case to hold your iron, cord and stand when not in use?

Now the SUNBEAM, the IRON OF IRONS, comes in a sturdy, good-looking steel case—heat-proof and indestructible.

No more waiting for the iron to cool. Just slip iron, cord, stand and all into the case and put the case away.

The case keeps the iron clean, dry and out of the way—and the cord and stand always with it.

SUNBEAM is truly the IRON OF IRONS. Does perfect work and is comfortably easy to handle. Women who once use a SUNBEAM prefer it.

The SUNBEAM is made to iron best and to last longest. Therefore it costs more to build than any other iron.

It naturally costs you a little more than other irons; but the wonderful ironing of all kinds that it will do—and its years and years of longer life without need of repairs make it worth far more than its slightly higher cost.

Even though you have one iron, you need THIS EXTRA GOOD IRON. It gives you everything in ironing service and convenience.

To the Woman of the House:

Read what we have said to your husband.

Tell him it's the thing to do.

No matter if you have an iron, you need ONE EXTRA GOOD IRON.

The SUNBEAM will delight you and the case to keep it in is so practical. With a SUNBEAM iron in your home you will have an iron with enduring quality built right into the very heart of it—an iron that will last a lifetime, and one that will always do wonderful ironing.

It may be that your dealer can't immediately supply it with the new steel case. If that is so drop us a note for one. Send no money. We will send it complete in the steel case, prepaid, right into your home.

When it comes just pay the postman the regular price, $8.50, the same as if your dealer had it; but ask your dealer first.

AFTER THE CRASH IN A MIDNIGHT FOG—The Japanese steamer Tokofuku was sunk and the German ship Heimdal, shown above, was badly damaged when they collided in the English Channel. More than twenty members of the crew of the Japanese vessel lost their lives. Neither ship could see the lights of the other. Immediately after they crashed the Japanese steamer turned on its side and went down. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

A LESSON IN AMERICAN HISTORY—This is the birthday of Ulysses S. Grant, eighteenth President of the United States. He was born at Point Pleasant, O., April 27, 1822. After his graduation from West Point in 1843 he made a distinguished record as an officer in the Mexican war, but left the army in 1854 to become a farmer. The civil war called him back to the service and he rose rapidly, becoming commander-in-chief of the Union armies in 1864. He was elected President in 1868, served two terms, and died in 1885.

ROYALTY TOOK THE COUNT for all time in Athens when Greek patriots turned out en masse to stage this tremendous demonstration. It marked the proclamation of the Greek republic, which has elevated army and navy leaders to the high government places. The banner at the left pictures M. LARGEST AND FASTEST of German ships, the New North German Lloyd S.S. Columbus is expected to arrive in the port of New York this week after her maiden voyage. The ship is 775 feet long, of 39,000 tons displacement, and is said to be the finest achievement of German shipbuilders since the war.

IF YOU'RE RISING, CALL ME EARLY, is the plea of Miss Margaret Wylie of Washington, D. C., for she's to be Queen of the May at Bryn Mawr this year. The festival—May 9 and 10—is a college tradition and its queen is invariably the school's most beautiful girl. Bobbed haired beauties are barred, for the Queen is also Maid Marian in the May play, "Robin Hood," and must possess flowing, blonde tresses.

THEY'RE ALL DOING IT—Falling off seems to be the fashion now that the Prince of Wales has blazed the turf. But here Capt. H. E. de Trafford, number thirteen on the card in the Grand Military Handicap Steeplechase at Sandown Park, England, is exhibiting a new and fancy Brodie. The photographer says he wasn't badly hurt—ho-hum!

The Styles

that women are wearing in Paris—already there is a pattern for each one

THE cape and capette swing gaily from many a Parisienne's back; the long tunic blouse is slim and straight at each fashionable rendezvous; the new dresses have boyish collars or use plaits a dozen different ways.

You want these new styles for yourself, and you can have them! For Butterick has patterns ready for each dominant style of the new season.

At fashionable gatherings in Paris, at the showings of great dressmakers, there is an expert from the Butterick office. Swiftly that expert sends word of the significant style tendencies. Immediately patterns are made for each successful mode.

The capette dress, the new long over-tunic, the dress with plaits, or a little-boy collar—for each of the new styles you can buy a Butterick pattern. And with the pattern for each you get the secret of its making—the Deltor that shows you every detail of the cutting out, putting together, and finishing of that new style by Butterick of New York, of Chicago, of Paris, of London.

The Easiest Pattern to Use

The Deltor shows exactly what pieces to start putting together and just how to do it! Even the kind of dress you never tried before you make with complete success. Everything is shown you by pictures and clear directions. Follow the Deltor and there is nothing to puzzle you—you simply can't go wrong.

The Only Complete Finishing Directions

Half the charm of French clothes is the clever exquisite way they are finished. With the Deltor you give your clothes this perfection that other patterns fail to provide for. Each tiny detail in the finish of the new styles is shown in the Deltor.

Special Layouts to Save Material

Ordinary patterns give you one or sometimes two general cutting charts. The Deltor gives you individual cutting layouts. There is one for your size and view laid on your width material. This individual layout, because it is made to meet your particular needs, saves you from ¼ to 1⅜ yards on everything you make—something no general chart can do.

CONSTANCE BENNETT will be seen soon in "Cytherea." She is the daughter of Richard Bennett. Perhaps you remember her in "Reckless Youth," "Evidence" or "What's Wrong With the Woman." Miss Bennett has blonde hair and blue eyes. Mae Tinee.

HELENE CHADWICK always takes such good looking photographs that it's forever a temptation to be printing one of her. Yielding to temptation—here's her latest. You saw her last on the screen with Lewis Stone in "Why Men Leave Home." Hard to believe that this lady could BE such a reason! Mae Tinee.

All Children Love "California Fig Syrup"

Dependable Laxative for Baby or Child—Harmless!

Mother! Even a constipated, bilious, feverish, or sick, colic Baby or Child loves to take genuine "California Fig Syrup." No other laxative regulates the tender little bowels so nicely. It sweetens the stomach and starts the liver and bowels without griping.

Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits. Insist upon genuine "California Fig Syrup" which contains directions.

"GOOD-BY, BOY; I'M THROUGH!" The figure to the right is Douglas Fairbanks, chortling over the fact that, having finished "The Thief of Bagdad," he and his wife, Mary Pickford, are about to depart for New York—later to tour Europe. The dejected figure on the left is Charles Chaplin, who couldn't go, too! HE'S got to stay home and work on that new comedy he's making. (Well, it's TIME he made a comedy!) Mae Tinee.

LITA GREY is Charles Chaplin's new leading woman. She fills the place of Edna Purviance, who, like Miss Grey, started her career under the guidance of the famous comedian, and who has now graduated into stardom. Doesn't it seem to you that there's a decided resemblance between the two actresses? Or is it merely their expression that is much the same? Mae Tinee.

ADOLPH MENJOU is that sleek, subtle, dark gentleman you're coming to notice more and more in the films. Remember him in "The Marriage Circle" and "A Woman of Paris?" Mr. Menjou was born in Pittsburgh. His middle name is Jean. He was educated at Culver and Cornell and was on the stage before he started his screen career with Vitagraph. I guess he must be modest, for it's taken him a long time to come to the fore—and he IS an artist! Mae Tinee.

BEAU BRUMMEL! Here's Jack Barrymore as he appears in the Warner Brothers' production of "Beau Brummel." Have you bright eyes like a mouse? If so, is this a painting or merely a reflection of the gentleman in a mirror? Mae Tinee.

For Re-roofing
Use a RE-ROOFING shingle

FOR re-roofing—ask your dealer for Beaver Vulcanite Jumbo Hexagon Slabs.

Put these big, thick, tough, fire-safe slabs right over your old shingles. They are designed especially for that purpose.

We want you to see the difference—we want you to see why it is so important to use a special re-roofing shingle for this modern way of making old roofs new.

Let us put a complete sample Jumbo Hexagon Slab right in your hands. Then, twist it. Bend it. Throw it on the floor. Jump on it. Kick it. Scuff it. Dip it in acid. Soak it in water. Lay it on ice. Put it on a hot radiator. Build a fire on it. Make all the six daring tests listed on this page.

And then compare.

We dare to invite these drastic tests because we build Jumbo Hexagon Slabs so much thicker that they are:

50 per cent tougher—100 per cent stiffer. More than that, each slab is unusually large in area—a big, one-piece shingle that builds extra rigidity in your roof.

Note the patented design. It produces a beautiful, distinctive effect because of its color, its shape and heavy shadow lines. It saves time in laying because fewer shingles are required to cover a given area. It spaces automatically. It makes a roof double thick.

But the big economy is in the long life of Vulcanite. Tens of thousands of satisfied users have proved this over a period of nearly 25 years. Thousands of dealers recommend it.

Learn all about this simple, modern way of laying new roofs over old. Get the complete sample slab and our free book, "How to Re-roof," from your nearest dealer. Mail coupon to us, today.

6 DARING TESTS
you should make before you buy any roofing

1 Heat test: Lay sample of Vulcanite on hot radiator for 12 hours. See if it will melt or dry out.

2 Ice test: Lay sample on ice for 12 hours. Then pour boiling water on it. See if extremes of temperature affect it.

3 Water test: Soak sample in water for 12 hours. See if, by weight, it absorbs any water.

4 Acid test: Immerse sample in hydrochloric acid. See if it is affected in any way.

5 Fire test: Lay white-hot coal of fire on sample. See if it sets the roofing on fire.

6 "Scuff" test: Lay sample on floor; scuff it hard with your shoe. See if any of the slate-surfacing will come off.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

April 27, 1924

AFTER THE OPERATION

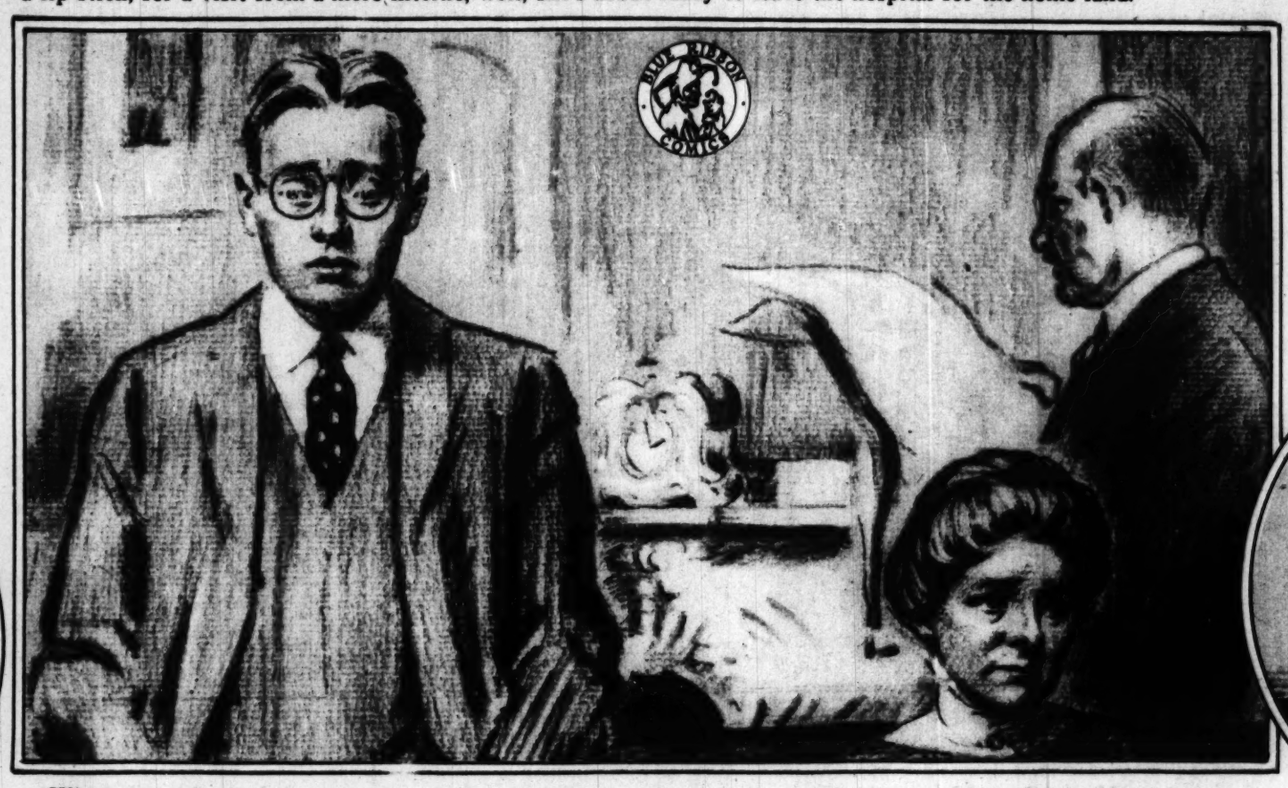
BY W. E. HILL

(Copyright: 1924: by The Chicago Tribune)

"Well, you don't look sick at all! Everybody says you're getting on finely!" The Pollyana visitor—just the wrong person to call on a patient two days out of ether.

Three estimable ladies in as many stages of convalescence. When they cease to care whether or not the doctor sees them in their own hair as in No. 1 they feel pretty low about life in general. After the fifth day she will probably put on a cap, pending a visit from the surgeon. She's coming on nicely. But when she fixes up with just a little rouge and a lip stick, for a visit from a mere interne, well, she's about ready to leave the hospital for the home land.

Somebody's husband calling on sick wifie. Not at home in a sick room. Tips over things.



When the trained nurse stays on and on, and finally leaves, there's a great gap in the household. Mama has no friendly ear for her "symptoms," papa has no fourth at bridge of an evening, and Harold has no congenial soul to kid with. It's a sad world and a lonely one for the time being.

The convalescing bachelor is beginning to take notice of the nurse. First he was afraid she would fall in love with him, and now he's afraid she won't.

It's a sure sign of a patient's rapid recovery when the night nurse begins to snooze now and then.

Three internes talking over the pros and cons of a surgical case. If the young man on the left had been the surgeon—well, he'd have done differently.

Bright young interne following the surgeon around the ward. Pretty bright boy.

The first callers want to hear all about the operation—all the horrid details and everything. And then they will compare notes on the number of gall-stones as big as hen's eggs taken from Cousin Ida and will settle once and for all as to whether or not she still holds the family record.

MME. VON DAROCZY, wife of the Hungarian minister at Vienna and one of the most noted of continental beauties, has intrigued the Austrian press by naming her only son Edward Albert Christian. Edward Albert, etc., as you know, happens to be the name of the Prince of Wales. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

PEGGY JOYCE is in town again, basking happily, as usual, in the limelight. It's not a matter of husbands this time, however. Art claims her now, for she is the bright particular star of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," to be observed at the Colonial theater. (Photograph by Kissler.)

FLO LEEDS, much in the public prints of late as a figure in the Stillman divorce tangle, sailed for London and Paris the other day with her equally famous son, Jay. Here they are on the deck of the Olympic, where Mrs. Leeds was known as "Mrs. Florence Lincoln." (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

HER DAYS OF REAL SPORT were pleasantly recalled to America's First Lady the other day, when sorority sisters from her own chapter of Pi Beta Phi, University of Vermont, called to present the Christy portrait of Mrs. Coolidge to the White House. The portrait was shown in a recent picture section of The Tribune. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

Who would use kitchen soap as a toilet soap?

Yet doing dishes with kitchen soap is like washing your hands with it

NEARLY an hour and a half every day your hands exposed to harsh kitchen soap!

You looked at them ruefully as you went to wash them afterward. All red and scratchy!

You didn't wash them in the strong soap you used for the dishes, of course. Yet washing them only took you a minute and they'd been in the suds of kitchen soap all the while you did the dishes.

You don't have to use kitchen soap any longer. Just take your package of Lux, flip a teaspoonful into your dishpan and see what instant relief you get for your hands.

Relief from that in-the-dishpan look

The outer skin of your hands is very like a fine fabric—chiffon-thin and easily hurt. To keep it smooth and soft for you, nature hid some of her own rare oils just under the surface.

Harsh kitchen soap dries out these beautifying natural oils. That is why it coarsens and reddens your hands to use strong soap in the dishpan.

Lux protects the oils that keep your hands smooth. It cannot mar the most sensitive skin. With Lux for washing dishes that betraying in-the-dishpan look is banished for good. Get Lux today—the big new package or the regular size.

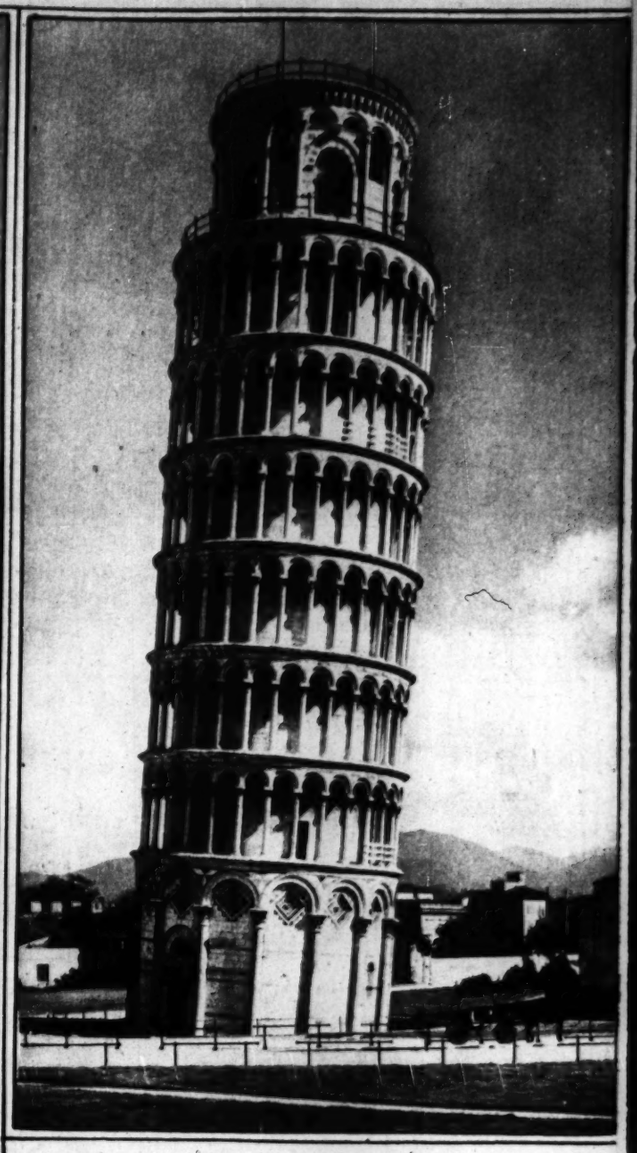
BEYOND THE ALPS LIES ITALY, an objective for thousands of American tourists who have already started questing far afield to ease the annual wanderlust. Here is a page of places where the crowds, hungry for new scenes and ancient glories, will gather this year. Not the least of them is the stately castle of S. Angelo at Rome.



GOING! GOING!—but never gone—the famous Leaning Tower of Pisa is waiting to thrill new generations of visitors. The contented horse in the foreground seems to know just how safe the old tower is.

MELLOW SUNLIGHT tints picturesque Siena in this unusual view of the old town, taken from the bell tower of the Dome of Siena. It floods the vineyards, too, and their far frame of foothills.

GHOSTS OF ANCIENT DAYS hold court in the ruins of the amphitheater at Taormina in its wild setting; but, just the same, modern telephone wires slant down across the upper part of the scene.

TROTZKY TAKES THE AIR—The war minister of soviet Russia, with his wife, Mme. Natalie Trotzky, leaving their home at Sukuni-Kale, on the Black sea, for a day's automobile outing. Columbia

NEW PROCESS RECORDS

WALTER DAMROSCH

One of the world's great conductors, a composer of note, and founder of the New York Symphony Orchestra—which records exclusively on Columbia New Process Records.

"A faithful and vivid reproduction of my orchestra," says Walter Damrosch

WALTER DAMROSCH and the New York Symphony Orchestra never made a phonograph record of any kind until the invention of the Columbia New Process Record.

Then, for the first time, Mr. Damrosch found a reproducing medium which he considered adequate to transmit the music of a truly fine orchestra. "We are happy to play for Columbia," says Mr. Damrosch, "because these New Process Records represent our music faithfully."

Mr. Damrosch is not alone in commending the accuracy of Columbia New Process Records. Other artists find that this marvelous new record is singularly free from the faults that have been common to all phonograph records in the past.

Due to a method of laminated construction which makes it possible to use a more delicate and sensitive surfacing material than has ever been used before, the Columbia New Process Record is practically noiseless. There is no scratching or scraping of the needle. No filing, grating sounds to blur or veil the music.

When you listen to a Columbia New Process Record, you hear the music exactly as it was originally rendered by artists famed among musicians for their skill and musicianship.

The New York Symphony Orchestra numbers many of these among its members. Hear them under the inspired leadership of Mr. Damrosch on the New Process Record out to-day—"The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "Der Freischütz." It is a record you will want as a permanent addition to your library.

You will want also the new record by Ignaz Friedman, representing this fine concert pianist in a charming mood and playing Chopin's "Mazurka," "Minute Waltz" —and "Hark, Hark, the Lark."

Charles Hackett, fresh from sensational triumphs, has made a new record, "I Hear a Thrush at Eve" and "Thank God for a Garden." Ask any Columbia Dealer to play it for you, and also the new release by Toscha Seidel, "Symphonie Espagnole."

Columbia New Process Records cover every type of music from modern dance music and popular songs to the great classics. Prices range from 75c up.

Swift & Company have 22 other plants in various parts of the country, and employ about 50,000 people, a third of whom hold stock in the corporation, comprising over 30% of the shareholders. Thousands of refrigerator cars distribute their products to hundreds of branch houses and over car routes which serve the retail merchants of the United States with fresh and smoked meats. More than 50 produce houses buy cream to churn into butter, and gather poultry and eggs which they prepare for market. The business was founded by Gustavus F. Swift, whose six sons are now active in its management. The eldest, Louis F. Swift, succeeded to the presidency on his father's death in 1903. Improve the appearance of your bathroom. The important place to start is with the toilet seat. Old-style wooden, painted or sprayed seats absorb moisture, hold odors, and in time crack and splinter. They become a detriment to the whole home—they are unhealthy.

A new beauty and safety

THINK of a seat that is white, permanently white, and which cannot become contaminated! That is the Church Seat. Its ivory white sheathing (not a paint or an enamel) will not absorb moisture, retain dirt or odors. It is as easily cleaned as porcelain. And it lasts a lifetime. What a difference such a seat would make in your bathroom!

Fits any bowl—simple and easy to put on

NO TROUBLE at all to attach a Church Seat. You can remove the old one and put on a permanently white Church Seat yourself with an ordinary pair of pliers—or your plumber will be glad to make the installation at small expense

Whether you rent a house, apartment, or own your own home, the toilet seat should be your personal property just like the other bathroom fixtures you own. ANY PLUMBER CAN SUPPLY YOU. Church Seats are on display at all plumbing jobbers' showrooms. That you may see for yourself just what this seat really is, mail the coupon. Do this now.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bahlman, 3429 Herschel Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio, has a Richardson Multicrome Roof in OPAL

A roof of rare new color—opal beautifies this Cincinnati home

To Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bahlman, 3429 Herschel Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio, belongs the distinction of being the first to have on their home the new Richardson opal roof. A wholly new color, it attracted much attention even while it was being laid. Completed, it more than fulfills their expectations of unusual beauty.

This roof is built from the new Richardson opal shingles, no two of which are alike. On each are blended the two most beautiful Richardson colors in slate, weathered brown and jade green.

When these shingles are applied to the roof just as they come from the bundle, the result is a delicately mottled coloring like the play of light on a rippled mountain lake.

Both architects and home owners who have seen this effect agree that it is the most distinctive of the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

In addition to opal, the Multicrome Roof is laid in many other pleasing color effects. The rare weathered brown, for example, an exclusive Richardson color in slate, has proved especially popular when applied in combination with other Richardson Shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl. In fact, there is a Multicrome Roof to harmonize with every color scheme, and to please every taste.

The new colors, opal and weathered brown, are used only on the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle—famous for its beauty and endurance.

With its inner foundation of Richardson felt, for fifty years recognized as the best; coated and saturated with Viskalt, the vacuum-processed waterproofing, 99.8% pure bitumen, the Super-Giant assures lasting beauty for your roof.

The Super-Giant Shingle—50% thicker, 100% more rigid, and 35% more economical in cost of laying

Prove the facts yourself

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material, or to your contractor, and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. Also ask to see the Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown and opal. Note the rare color and larger size. Then compare it with other shingles—the difference will convince you.

Meanwhile, send for our beautiful new booklet, Roofs of Distinction, showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson Multicrome Roofs, and containing valuable roofing information. Or, ask for our booklet, Roofing on the Farm. Just use the coupon below.

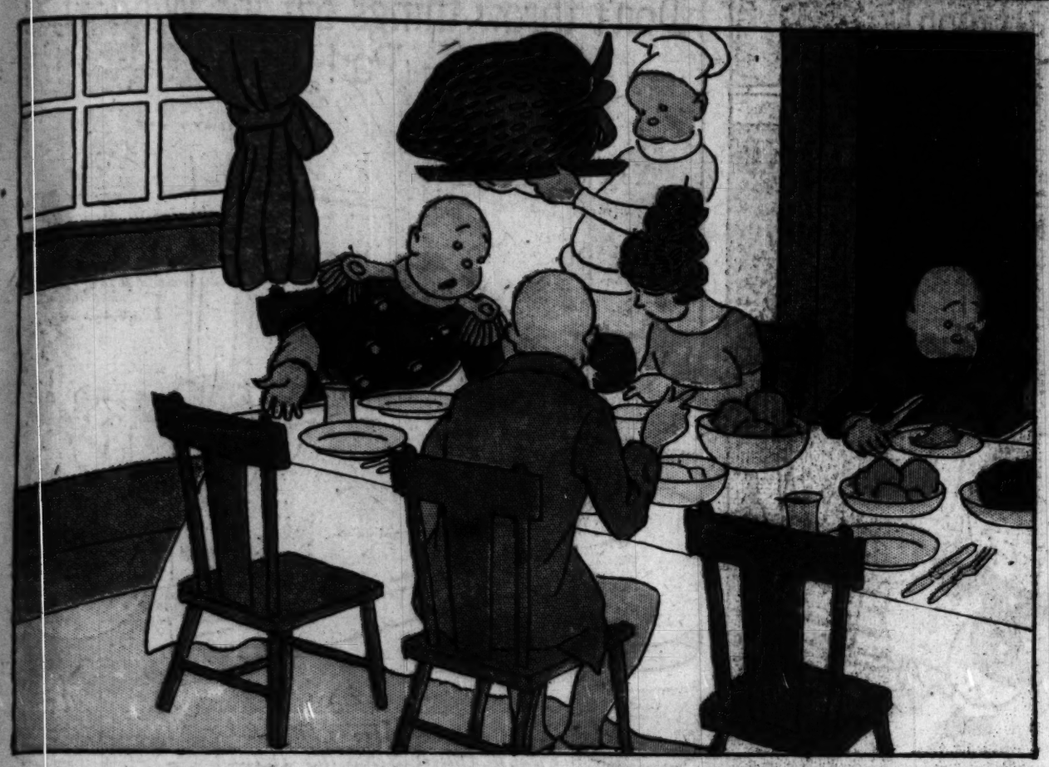
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

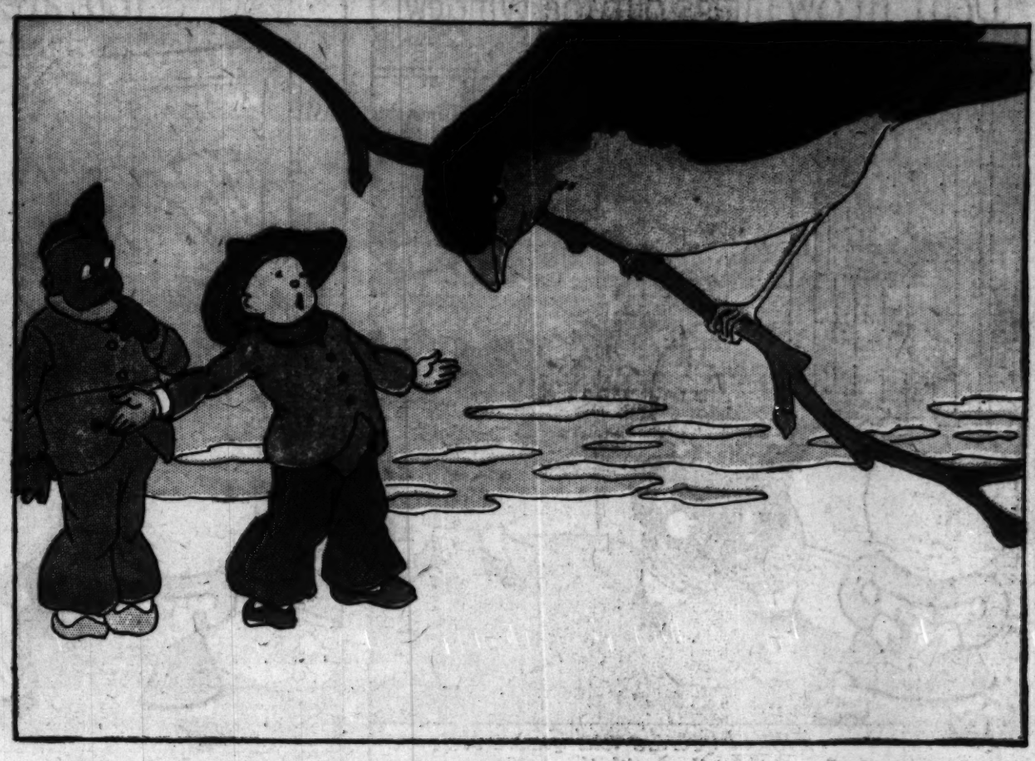
THE WORLD'S SMALLEST PEOPLE.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

WM. DONAHEY

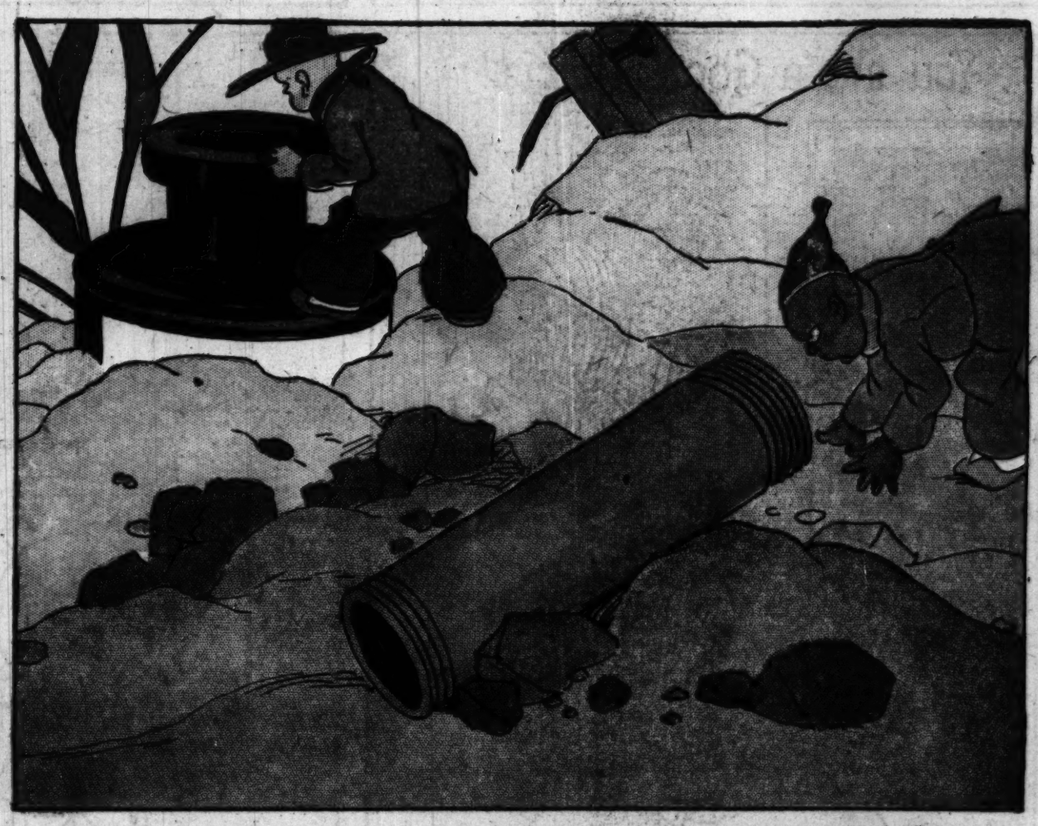


The Dunce had been missing all morning and when he failed to appear for lunch the General was alarmed, for the Dunce had never been known to miss a meal. "Something wrong when that fellow misses his lunch," thought the General, so he sent several of the Teenie Weenies out in search of the missing Dunce.



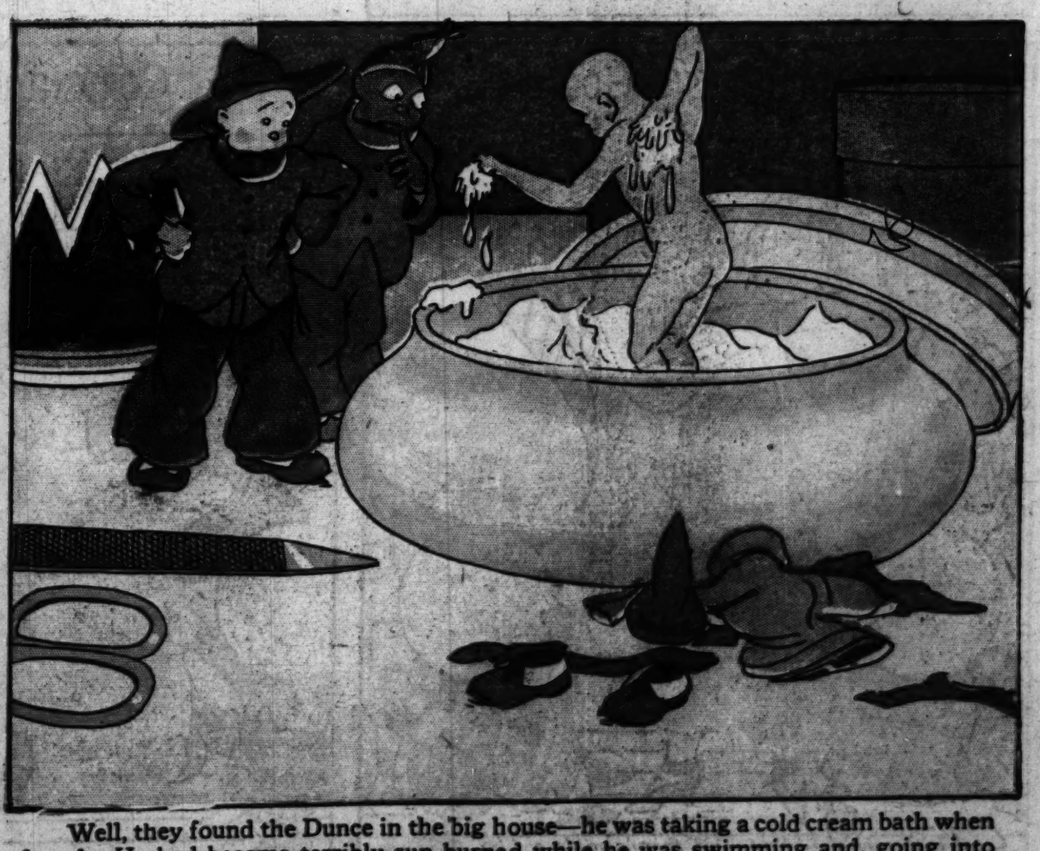
Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, told the inquiring Teenie Weenies that she had seen the Dunce several times that morning. "Jolly beggar been in swimming all day," answered the sparrow. "He has been swimmin' in that saucer of water over there under the bush all mornin'."

The Teenie Weenies visited the saucer, but the Dunce was not there. A mouse who was drinking at the saucer told them that the Dunce had been gone for nearly an hour. "He was as red as a cinnamon drop and I bet he had a sun stroke or somethin'," cried the mouse, who loved to peddle unpleasant news.



The little folk hunted far and near for the Dunce. They peered into every tin can and bottle; they looked under papers and boxes; they squinted under leaves and even explored a deserted bird's nest in search for the missing Teenie Weenie.

At last they stopped to ask an old hen if she had seen the Dunce. "Sure I seen him!" cried the old hen. The Teenie Weenies were quite shocked at the hen's language, but they were much too polite to show their feelings. "He was makin' for that there house over there," continued the hen, throwing another shock into the little folk.



Well, they found the Dunce in the big house—he was taking a cold cream bath when found. He had become terribly sun burned while he was swimming and, going into the big house, he had shed his clothes and climbed into Milady's cream jar to soothe his burning back.

"I was so comfortable," said the Dunce, "I couldn't think of coming home for lunch."
